The President, replying to the Emperor, said: "The unshakable firmness with which the Allies are sustaining the enemy shock gives full confidence in the final success of our arms and in the complete realization of our common hopes."

BINGHAM CODICIL STANDS.

Tax on Flagler Millions Will Pay Off Kentucky's Debt.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 7.—There will be no contest of the codicil to the will of Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, formerly Mrs. Henry M. Flagler, in which she bequeathed to her husband, Judge Robert Worth Bingham of Louisville, $5,000,000. The State of Kentucky will also collect, without contest, between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000 in inheritnace tax, or enough to liquidate the State debt.

This is on the authority of an attorney connected with the disposition of the estate, who lives in Louisville, but who refuses to be quoted by name. Whether there will be a contest by Judge Bingham of the will itself, which left the bulk of an estate approximating $60,000,000 to Mrs. Bingham's niece, Mrs. Louise Wise Lewis, is not known. It is not believed, however, by those familiar with the situation that he will institute any action of the kind.

GLASS IN ARMY SUPPLIES.

Fifty Made Ill, and Alien Aids of Chemists "Dealt With."

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 7.—Proof of the presence of ground glass in nine different articles of food shipped to the Nineteenth Division Commissary at Camp Travis was announced tonight by Major Noel Gaines, in charge of the Military Police, 90th Division. Fifty members of officers' families and enlisted men were ill, he said.

Investigation of the presence of ground glass had been in progress, Major Gaines said, for several weeks. First efforts to locate it were futile, he declared, and reports from the laboratory at the base hospital, Fort Sam Houston, that no glass was found in samples submitted led to investigation which developed that one Austrian, two Germans, and one Turk were among the chemists assistants. These men, he said, had been "dealt with," and careful examination of food samples since that time had proved that glass was present.

WOMAN DOCTOR CUT OFF.

Dr. Shelly of Overseas Hospital Caught in Fighting Zone.

Through a cable message sent to the American Woman Suffrage Association from the Women's Overseas Hospital at Paris by Dr. Alice Gregory yesterday it was learned that Dr. Shelly, a member of the Overseas Hospital staff, had been caught in the zone of fighting during the offensive while she was on her way to get a new hospital ready for occupation.

The message said that Dr. Shelly, with twelve helpers, was at the front attending wounded. When she entered the military zone, it was said, she was cut off from communication with her headquarters in Paris, which for several days had been anxiously awaiting word from her.

BOYLAN BILL DOOMED.

Senator Brown Declares Opposition to Personal Tax Measure.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 7.—Senator Elon R. Brown, majority leader, came out tonight against the Boylan bill to tax personal property, and his stand undoubtedly means the death of the measure.

Senator Boylan's tax bill would impose a tax of $1.10 on each $100 of personal property wherever found. The proposal involves the enactment of another bill providing for a listing system in connection with the collection of the personal tax. This measure would make it neccssary to file a statement of personal property of over $3,000 with local authorities. It is this provision that has met most serious objection from Senator Brown.

"The proposal in the Boylan bill to tax personal property in the City of New York involves the enactment of an innovation unknown to our taxing system—the listing system—and should not be adopted unless consistent with the welfare of the city and not inconsistent with the general scheme of State taxation," said Senator Brown tonight. "The bill has come in at the end of the session and the Legislature is unwilling to act without due consideration."

Senator Brown calls attention to the fact that the bill, which was introduced April 2 at the instance of City Controller Craig of New York, has been unanimously indorsed by the New York City Board of Estimate. A hearing has been set for the bill on Tuesday afternoon before the Committee on the Affairs of the City of New York.

SYRACUSE 'DRYS' JUBILANT.

Politicians Amazed When 40,000 Women Register for the Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 7.—Forty thousand women registered during the two days for the special local option election to be held on April 16. This brings the city's voting population up to 76,000, and election officials are now puzzled as to how they will be able to provide for polling this number of votes.

Politicians were astounded today on learning that 40,000 women had registered. This is 15,000 above the best estimates made, and unless some hurried arrangements are made by redistricting the city's wards and providing several more polling places, it will be an impossibility to accommodate this number. Because of the brief time in which to prepare, there is talk of seeking a postponement of the election. Dry leaders are enthusiastic, declaring that the large registration of women voters assures a dry victory.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., April 7.—Political leaders of both parties are astonished and puzzled by the remarkable registration of women in this city who will vote on April 16. The oldest voter is Mrs. Margaret Parsons, 91 years of age, who walked to the polling place to register. More than 15,000 women have registered and the total male registration of the city is only 12,600. In one district if the election board voted two women a minute from the time polls opened at 6 o'clock in the morning till they closed at 8 o'clock at night all the voters enrolled in that district could not be accommodated.

WOMEN REGISTER 7 TO 1.

New Voters Show Greater Interest Than Men in Wet or Dry Election.

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, N. Y., April 7.—Complete returns of the first day's registration of voters in Middletown and Newburg given out today showed that seven times as many women as men registered to vote at the local option elections on April 16.

In Newburg 2,544 women registered and 343 men. In Middletown, of 2,919 voters registered, 2,800 were women. Both the wets and the drys made their hardest drive to get out the women on the opening day.

RUSSIANS CHARGE JAPAN IS INVADING

LONDON, April 7.—A Reuter dispatch from Moscow confirms the report recently published in the Petrograd papers that the Bolshevist Government has decided to remove its imperial family from Tobolsk to a town in the Ural Mountains. This action is to be taken because of the possibility of international complications in Siberia.

RUSSIAN FLEET ESCAPES FROM HELSINGFORS

PETROGRAD, April 7. (Associated Press.)—Russian warships which had been anchored in the harbor of Helsingfors have left that Finnish port for Kronstadt, the fortress of Petrograd, according to an announcement made here today. The Finnish Council of Commissaries has gone to Viborg.

German troops are reported to be marching from the Aland Islands across the ice at the mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia, in the direction of Abo, a seaport on the southern coast of Finland.

While the Council of National Commissaries does not intend to protest against the German landing of troops in Finland, it has notified the German Government that it takes exception to the violation by Germany of Article VI. of the Brest treaty, which guarantees the security of the Russian fleet and naval stores in Finnish waters, where the Germans have taken a large amount of booty.

MOSCOW, April 6, (Associated Press.)—Foreign Minister Tchitcherin, in his protest to the Berlin Government against the landing of German troops in Finland, characterizes it as a violation of the Brest-Litovsk peace treaty.

He cautions Germany against the further movement of German warships in the direction of Helsingfors and the seizure of Russian ports, saying that such acts may lead to sad consequences for both sides.

8,000 Reds Captured at Tammerfors.

STOCKHOLM, April 7.—A dispatch to the Dagens Nyheter from Vasa, Finland, reports that the Tammerfors Red Guards captured by the White Guards representing the Government aggregate 8,000. The Red Guard lost 2,000 men killed, of whom 1,800 were Russians. A woman's battalion participated in the fighting on the side of the Red Guards.

Bjorneborg is reported to be surrounded and its fall is expected shortly. With the White Guards at Toijola, to the south of Tammerfors, and the Germans at Karis, railway communication with Helsingfors is completely cut.

The White Guards are reported to have sent additional troops to the Karelin district, where sharp fighting is reported to be proceeding.

A dispatch from Petrograd on Friday last said that the arrival of the German fleet off the Finnish coast threatened the safety of the Russian fleet at Helsingfors, which, for lack of an icebreaker, had been unable to reach the naval base at Kronstadt, and that the fleet included two armored ships, a division of torpedo boats, and submarines.

RUSSIA PLANS LARGE CROPS.

Has Placed Large Order for Agricultural Machinery Here.

MOSCOW, April 7. (Associated Press.)—With the approaching of planting season the activities of the Department of Agriculture, as well as the Council of National Economy, are centred in supplying agricultural implements and seeds to the peasants. During the war the production of agricultural machinery fell 30 per cent. because the factories were engaged in munitions work. The enemy's occupation of Russian territories reduced the implement-producing factories from 910 to 650, and 400 have resumed their original production, but lack of metal has kept the other idle.

A large order for agricultural machinery, amounting to 200,000,000 rubles, has been placed by the Agricultural Department in Russia and the United States, and shipments already are arriving at Vladivostok. The implements are exchanged for seed, but the latter in many cases is being consumed by the hungry population, and the supply is fast being depleted.

Because of the lack of money the acreage is expected to increase as the army demobilizes. The growing unemployment in the cities also is releasing a great number of farm laborers.

FAMINE IN UKRAINE.

AMSTERDAM, April 7.—A special representative sent to the Ukraine by the Cologne Gazette, in the first of a series of articles, warns his readers against expecting the great Ukrainian food supplies to relieve the situation in Germany tomorrow or the day after. The correspondent says:

"The country is completely disorganized. The rural population must first become reaccustomed to tilling the soil. Meanwhile an unprecedented dearth prevails in this rich country and the population of Kiev and other cities are suffering bitterly because of the lack of bread.

KIEV, April 6, (via Amsterdam, April 7.)—Field-Marshal von Eichhorn, who has been in command of one of the German army groups operating on the Russian front, has arrived here to assume chief command of the German troops in the Ukraine.

MOSCOW, April 6, (Associated Press.)—A state of siege has been proclaimed at Kharkov, capital of the Province of Kharkov, 424 miles southwest of Moscow. German forces are approaching Kharkov.

A proclamation issued by the Bolshevist Government says the soldiers of the first revolutionary detachment at Orel are outlaws and are to be kept under arrest as traitors to the revolution on account of their dishonorable behavior.

LONDON, April 7.—A wireless dispatch received from Petrograd says that Foreign Minister Tchitcherin, replying to the German Government concerning the Bolshevikl's proposed peace negotiations with the Ukraine, said:

"The Government of the Russian Republic, being compelled to conclude a peace treaty with the Rada and the people's Ministers, having regard to the ultimatum of Feb. 2 and the Brest-Litovsk treaty, suggests the town of Smolensk as the place for the negotiations."

M. Tchitcherin pointed out that the Soviet Government was not warring against the Ukraine people's republic, and added that the struggle was between two sections of the Ukraine.

CONSTITUTION FOR RUSSIA.

Socialist Federated Republic Plan to be Explained by Lenine.

MOSCOW, April 6, (Associated Press.)—The Central Executive Committee of the Russian Councils of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates has drafted a Constitution for a Socialist Federated Republic.

At a forthcoming meeting of the committee Premier Lenine will deliver a speech explaining the proposed new governmental authority.

FEARS OUR HAND IN RUSSIA.

German Paper Says President's Policy Is Dictated by Bankers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 7.—The annexationist Kölnische Volkszeitung, remarking that the Washington Government evinces extraordinary interest in Russia, asserts that America has pursued her own policy thero since the revolution, regardless of the Allies, and that the White House recognized the Bolsheviki at once and has followed the revolution with sympathy.

The paper declares the President has reasons for this policy, and that behind the "hollow phrases" with which he is so liberal, there are material aims. Mr. Wilson, it goes on, is in close contact with big industrialists in America. The Morgan banking group supports these steps financially. Morgan is so closely connected with the American Government that it is hardly an exaggeration, it says, to state that the President would not dare pursue a policy which the Morgan group opposed.

But President Wilson fears more than anything German economic influence and competition. Americans managed to retain a fairly firm footing in Russia in spite of circumstances, as is attested by the Russian-American agreement by which America is to finance the building of railroads, &c.

America's policy with regard to Japan's intervention, the paper says, was not only in her own interest, but also in Russia's, and this had made a favorable impression in Russia. Wilson, it concludes, is also counting on Russia as a protection in the event of war with Japan in the future.

DISSOLVE POLISH LEGIONS.

Teutons, Fearing Treason, Intern the Soldiers in Hungary.

LONDON, April 7.—Several Polish Legions have been dissolved by the Teuton military authorities on account of wholesale treason in the ranks, according to advices received at Copenhagen from Poland, and forwarded by the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company.

The Polish soldiers, it is added, have been interned in the interior of Hungary.

PLAN TO CONTROL INDUSTRY FOR WAR

Board Announces New System for Guiding Production and Distribution.

WILL CO-ORDINATE SUPPLIES

Newly Appointed Requirements Division a Directing Agency for All Departments.

CHAIRMAN BARUCH SUPREME

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Vested with dictatorial powers by President Wilson, the reorganized War Industries Board, of which Bernard M. Baruch is Chairman, has developed a program to place the resources and industries of the nation on a sound war basis, end the causes of dela; and confusion and prepare the United States to do its full part in making good the words of the President, who, in his address at Baltimore last night, said that force and force alone must be employed to overthrow the present rulers of Germany.

An official statement was issued today outlining some of the steps which the board proposes to take in carrying out its plans. War needs are to be considered first when available supplies will not suffice for both the military and civilian requirements: so-called non-essential industries curtailed or converted in whole or in part into war industries, if the emergency demands, and all preparations made to supply the army and navy for a long conflict and on a scale heretofore not contemplated.

As a result of the powers conferred upon him, Mr. Baruch, who will be answerable only to the President and will have the co-operation of the Railroad and Fuel Administrations, will be in a position to decide not only the uses to which the resources of America shall be put, but to control largely the commercial activities of the world.

It shall be his duty to dictate, after consultation with the Army and Navy Departments, the Shipping Board, and other governmental agencies and representatives of the allied countries, the distribution of raw materials and other commodities, including imports, the prices which shall be paid and the preference to be given in deliveries.

Military Needs Uppermost.

This power is extended even to the very necessaries, such as clothing, and especially to so-called luxuries. In all decisions affecting such matters Mr. Baruch will not only be an influence in the control of prices, but he is determined to see to it that the fighting forces are supplied with the best that the nation has to give and in quantities ample to meet all needs.

Surveys already have been started and industries instructed to give the Government a complete and comprehensive grasp of their resources, so that plans may be made as far in advance as possible to assure adequate shipping, ammunition, and equipment, and so to make impossible a shortage no matter how long the war may continue. This information, which has been collected in the past by various departments, will now be handled solely by the War Industries Board, which will act as the arbiter for all.

In a general way the War Industries Board hopes thus to control the prices and distribution of all raw materials and finished products when they concern the war needs of the United States and its allies, as well as the civilian population. Persuasion will be used when voluntary agreements of a satisfactory nature can not be accomplished. Where persuasion fails, it is understood that the Director General of Railroads and the Fuel Administrator will be asked to refuse transportation and coal to the industry involved.

As a last resort, the power of commandeering the entire output of industries or plants might be resorted to when it could be shown that the President, through Mr. Baruch and the War Industries Board, had the power to so act to carry out the war program of the nation.

It will be one of the fundamental principles of the War Industries Board to protect the needs of the civilian population of the nation and, as far as possible, keep prices of necessary commodities of this kind under control. It is not believed that the war needs will encroach upon the needs of civilians to a point where there will be severe shortage, when the requirements of all are treated in a comprehensive manner.

Immediate attention is being given to rushing forward the shipbuilding and airplane programs, by arranging for rapid deliveries, the conversion of portions of certain plants now manufacturing luxuries, and the control and distribution of all necessary materials.

A Requirements Division.

Much of the detail of the program will be in the hands of a Requirements Division, to which all Governmental activities, as well as private plants, will report their needs. With this information in hand it will be one of the duties of the War Industries Board to readjust orders for materials to conform to the capacity of plants to manufacture and deliver rapidly, under preference orders.

If found necessary, the Government, under the direction of the War Industries Board, will take steps to develop additional factories, but developments in areas where there is severe transportation congestion will be discouraged. Aid will be given also to existing factories, to bring them up to increased demands made upon them. Where luxury industries or less essential industries are to be curtailed temporarily these steps will be taken after full consideration of the effect this will have upon the civilian population.

Speed in production will be considered of prime importance under the new régime, and each industry engaged in supplying commodities to meet war or civilian needs will be responsible to the chief of a section, under the War Industries Board, who will devote his entire time to this work. Mr Baruch has given large authority to these division chiefs, subject only to his review, to take any steps considered necessary to speed up production. It is not, however, the plan of the board to interfere if a work is being well done. Neither will the power of price-fixing be employed to work a hardship on any industry.

It is the hope of the War Industries Board, however, that eventually the price of all vital materials and commodities will be regulated and stabilized on a basis which will be satisfactory to the Government and the industries. Working charts will be prepared which will show the condition of each industry, including detailed information as to supply and demand, and this will be always before the Government officials in charge.

What effect the new program will have upon neutral nations is a question. It will be the purpose of the board, it is understood, without working too severe a hardship upon the life of neutrals, to see first that the needs of the United States and its allies in the war are provided for.

While the powers to be conferred upon the President by the Overman bill will be of great assistance in carrying out the extensive plans of the board, it is believed by officials that the general war powers of the President as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy would be sufficient under which to operate.

Here is the official statement outlining in a general way the plans and puwers of the War Industries Board:

"In accordance with the directions of the President, as stated in his letter to the Chairman of the War Industries Board of March 4, 1918, a new plan of organization has been undertaken to meet the responsibility thus imposed. The general purpose of the plan is to prevent confusion and conflict in the ordering and delivery of supplies and to secure unification of the Government's policy in dealing with industrial problems. The essential change involved in the redistribution of functions now undertaken is the creation of a Requirements Division, which will serve as the central directing agency in the machinery of the War Industries Board, through which the policies of the Chairman are to be carried out.

"In the words of the President's letter, the Chairman of the War Industries Board 'should be constantly and scientifically informed of all contracts, purchases, and deliveries, in order that he may have always before him a schematized analysis of the progress of business in the several divisions of the Government in all departments.'

"The Requirements Division will be the agency to which this information will be furnished, and to which the supply divisions of the purchasing departments and the Allied Purchasing Commission will 'as far in advance as possible,' submit statements on their 'respective needs' for raw materials and finished products. The Requirements Division will in turn delegate the task of fulfilling these needs to the special commodity divisions of the War Industries Board, to the supply departments themselves, or to such other agencies as may be decided upon.

"The statements furnished the Requirements Division by the several supply divisions of the departments will include not only commodities in which a present or threatened shortage exists, but also those in which the supply is ample, and will include commodities required by one department only, as well as commodities required by several different departments.

"In the procurement of supplies in which no shortage exists and where no allocation seems necessary or desirable, the Requirements Division will so advise the department presenting the requirements, which will thereupon proceed with the purchase in pursuance of their established practices. That is, in pursuance of the President's directions, the War Industries Board will 'let alone what is being successfully done and will interfere as little as possible with the present normal processes of purchase and delivery in the several departments.' At the same time, having complete information as to the progress of the departments, furnished through the Requirements Division, the Chairman of the board will have at his disposal complete information to guide him in the determination of general industrial policy.

Systematic Allocation of Orders.

"Speaking generally, the requirements of both the American Government and the Allies can be met satisfactorily if orders and deliveries are given systematic allocation according to the relative urgency of the needs of the various departments demanding them. Shortage in materials is very frequently found on analysis to be not actual, but rather the result of badly planned distribution. With complete information at his disposal the Requirements Division, under the direction of the Chairman of the War Industries Board, will be in position, through several sections of the board, to 'guide and assist the departments' through proper allocation of materials, or at its discretion to leave particular tasks to the exclusive jurisdiction of the departments involved.

"To take charge of particular problems of supply there have been created special commodity sections, and whenever necessary to handle raw materials or finished products of which there is an actual or threatened shortage, or the price and production of which should be controlled for the protection of the United States Government, the Allies, or the civilian population, new sections will be created by the Chairman of the War Industries Board. Each of these sections will be charged with the responsibility of collecting from the several departments of the Government, from the manufacturers and producers, and from committees representing them, and especially from the War Service Committees created under the supervision of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and from any other reliable sources information concerning the production of the particular commodity with which the section is charged, this information to include available supplies, new sources of supply, methods to increase production, &c.

"It is the purpose of the Chairman of the War Industries Board to make each of the section heads the sole Government agency for dealing with the industry for which his section is responsible. For example, questionnaires have hitherto been sent out from the same industry from many different departments, often asking the same questions and causing needless confusion and needless effort to the business men in these industries. It is the purpose of the Chairman of the Board to centralize in each of these section heads all such tasks as the issuance of questionnaires and all other means of gathering information about the industries which each section head has in charge. Through these section heads, therefore, all data and information about particular industries will be focussed, and in their offices it will be at all times available to the several interested departments, to the Price Fixing Committee of the War Industries Board, to the priorities division of the board, and to any other agency that may be designated by the Chairman of the War Industries Board. It is hoped thus to do away with much of the confusion that has apparently existed in the minds of business men as to the agencies through which they are to deal in furnishing information to the Government.

"In accordance with the President's letter, therefore, the Chairman of the board hopes through the creation of the Requirements Division to anticipate the prospective needs of the several supply departments of the Government and their feasible adjustment to the industry of the country as far in advance as possible, and to guide and assist wherever the need for guidance or assistance may be revealed.

The Plan in Practice.

"In practice the general plan of action of the new organization is about as follows:

"The Requirements Division is composed of representatives of the various sections of the War Industries Board, including the Priorities Division; representatives of the army, the navy, the Emergency Fleet Corporation, the Food Administration, the Red Cross, the Railroad Administration, the Fuel Administration, and the Allied Purchasing Commission.

"Statements of 'prospective needs,' as mentioned above, will be presented to the Requirements Division as far in advance as possible by the member or members thereof representing the agency in which the requirements originate. The Requirements Division will then refer specific problems to the proper commodity sections of the War Industries Board for the consideration and solution of the problem of supplying them. On each commodity section there will be representatives of each of the supply departments of the Government interested in the commodity in question.

"The Chairman of the commodity section will study the problem referred to his section by the Requirements Division, and will procure from all available sources, including the supply departments, information and data which will be helpful in the allocation of these requirements. At meetings of the commodity section the allocation of materials or facilities to meet the requirements will be determined, and in this distribution the representatives of the various supply departments of the Government who are members of the section will have full share.

"If any member of the commodity section is dissatisfied with the decision he may, if he wishes, file a protest with the section head, and also with the head of his division or department. Then if, for example, he belongs to one of the supply departments, his chief may appeal for reconsideration to the War Industries Board, whose decision will be final, subject only to modification by agreement between the Chairman of the War Industries Board and the respective Secretaries of War and the Navy, and the Chairman of the Shipping Board, whichever may be the one interested in the subject.

"In addition to dealing with problems referred to them by the Requirements Division, the commodity section will have certain definite functions. The first will be the collection of information regarding industrial conditions already mentioned. Further, in pursuance of the President's directions to the Chairman of the War Industries Board, they will consider from time to time the extent of the existing sources of production, the creation of new facilities, the disclosure, and, if necessary, the opening up of additional sources of supply, and the conversion of existing facilities to new ones.

"Each commodity section will consider market conditions pertaining to the materials or commodities over which it has jurisdiction and will, where deemed advisable, recommend purchase plans to the several purchasing departments. In cases where it becomes necessary to control an industry in whole or in part by means of allotments, the appropriate section will determine the allotments of materials, commodities and facilities to the several departments of this Government and to its allies, and also the extent to which manufacturers and others, whether serving the civilian population or engaged in the manufacture of war supplies, shall be engaged.

Priority Ratings.

"When a commodity section comes to make its full report on the allocation of any specific requirements, the chief of such section will notify a member of the Priorities Division of the War Industries Board, to be designated for such purpose by the Priorities Division, who will, with the section chief and the member, consider and tentatively determine the priority rating which such requirements will take when orders therefor will have been placed. Such tentative rating will be observed by the Priorities Committee in connection with all applications for priority on orders covering such requirements, unless the Priorities Committee should (because of conditions changing in the time intervening between the time of the fixing of the tentative rating and the application for priorities, or other good cause) conclude such rating to be improper; in which event the section chief and each member of the section fixing the tentative rating will be notified and have an opportunity to be heard before such rating will be changed. In the event a change is made, the section chief or any member may appeal from such decision in the manner prescribed by that portion of the organization plan of the War Industries Board governing priorities.

"It will be no part of the task of the War Industries Board to make inspection of products for which orders have been placed, to keep in touch with production or follow up delays, which duties devolve upon the several Governmental departments. Each department, however, will promptly and fully advise the Requirements Division whenever serious delays in deliveries or shortages in requirements occur, or are threatened.

"The representatives of the Fuel Administration, the Food Administration and the American Red Cross will attend meetings of the Requirements Division whenever they are prepared to present plans or projects under consideration the consumption of which will require materials, supplies, facilities, electrical power, fuel or transportation affecting the industries of the United States."

PERSHING COMMENDS CREW OF WOONSOCKET

Set Brilliant Example in Unloading Cargo at American Base Port in France.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—General Pershing has cabled to the War Department in high praise of the crew of the steamship Woonsocket for the exceptionally fine service rendered in unloading its military cargo at an American base port in France.

The War Department tonight authorized the publication of the following portion of the cablegram from General Pershing:

"While in port here the crew of the S. S. Woonsocket rendered exceptional service in getting cargo ashore and, at the same time, making repairs to the hull. This voluntary action on the part of the crew saved a delay which might have amounted to a week, and also saved an expense of several thousand dollars. All officers who have knowledge of this matter have recommended that such recognition as may be possible be extended to the crew in form of bonus or special privileges. Itecommend that the extraordinary amount of work and efficiency shown by this crew should if possible be made known generally in such a way as to secure emulation."

Major Gen. George W. Goethals, as Director of Storage and Traffic, transmitted the report of General Pershing to the Commanding General of an Atlantic port of embarkation with the following comment:

"It is directed that, upon the return of the S. S. Woonsocket, you express to the master and crew of that vessel the appreciation of the Department for the voluntary services rendered and grant them such special privileges as under the law and regulations can be granted in the premises.

"Their attitude in assisting in the unloading of the vessel and doing everything possible to expedite its departure from port is commendable and establishes an example which it is hoped that all other crews in the Army Transport Service will follow.

"This office regrets that a more substantial means of rewarding services of this kind is not available."

REFUSES TO PARDON BOLO.

Poincaré Rejects Convicted Traitor's Counsel's Plea for Mercy.

LONDON, April 7.—President Poincaré has refused to pardon Bolo Pacha, convicted of treason, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Paris.

PARIS, April 7.—President Poincaré today received Albert Salles, counsel for Bolo Pacha, who recently was convicted of treason and sentenced to death. The attorney presented a plea for clemency for his client. This is Bolo Pacha's last hope. It is expected that President Poincaré will give a decision promptly, and if it is adverse to granting clemency the date for the execution will be set immediately. It is contrary to custom to publish the decision reached by the Chief Executive. Bolo Pacha might attempt to prolong his life in the event of an adverse decision by asking to be heard as a witness at the trials of Senator Humbert and ex-Premier Caillaux. In case he takes this step Captain Bouchardon, examining magistrate at the Paris military court, will decide whether Bolo's testimony is necessary.

QUARREL COSTS FOUR LIVES

Missouri Man Kills Wife, Her Parents, and Himself.

MEXICO, Mo., April 7.—Derbay S. Adkins, 23 years old, today shot and killed his father-in-law, Nolan McGowan; his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ruby McGowan, and his wife, Mrs. Gladys Adkins, 17 years old. He then shot himself, dying instantly. The shooting occurred on a farm ten miles south of here, and is said to have followed a family quarrel.

Adkins had been separated from his wife. Last night he left his home here and shortly after daylight appeared at the home of his father-in-law, where his wife and five-months-old baby were living. The shooting followed immediately. A shotgun was the weapon employed.

J. E. Wollory, an employee on the McGowan farm, told authorities tonight that he had witnessed the killing of Mr. and Mrs. McGowan, and that for two hours he parleyed with Adkins in an effort to disauade him from killing Mrs. Adkins.

"I heard shouts from the barn," Wollery told the police, "and when I ran into the building I saw McGowan on his knees before Adkins, begging for his life. Mrs. McGowan was begging Adkins not to kill her husband, offering him anything he wanted if he would let his father-in-law go. Adkins's answer was to fire both barrels of his shotgun at his mother-in-law, killing her. He then shot McGowan.

"I attempted to interfere, but he threatened me with the gun. We both went into the house and for two hours I tried to persuade him not to kill Mrs. Adkins, who had hidden under a bed. Finally I went for help, and when I returned Mrs. Adkins had been killed and Adkins had shot himself."

Two small sisters of Mrs. Adkins, who were hiding with her beneath the bed, were unharmed.

WILL DRAFT BRITONS OF 50.

Lloyd George's Bill Will Make Them Liable to Military Service.

LONDON, Monday, April 8.—Every man under 51 years of age will be liable to military service under the new manpower bill which Premier Lloyd George intends to introduce in the House of Commons on Tuseday, says The Daily Mail. The principle that Irishmen are liable to military service will be affirmed, but, it is added, the administrative application of the act to Ireland will be left to a later date.

The Daily Mail's Irish correspondent understands that a Government bill for dealing with the Irish problem has virtually been completed, and that "it will coincide largely with what may be called the moderate section of opinion."

Chief Rabbi Hertz Entertains American Volunteers in London.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 7.—In connection with the anniversary of America's entry into the war, Chief Rabbi and Mrs. Hertz entertained this afternoon the first contingent of American volunteers who have come over to join the Jewish battalion which, it is believed, will fight in Palestine.

The Chief Rabbi briefly addressed the men. Prominent representatives of the community and officers of the battalion were present.

Style That Stays Put

¶ Many a book has been bought because of its attractive binding, whereas it is really that which lays between the covers that constitutes the real book. The same with clothing. It's what you do not see in a suit that counts most. An iron and a little elbow grease will put curves into the poorest of clothing—but such "styling" will not "stay put."

¶ Saks suits for men have a permanency of line before ever an iron touches them. Their inimitable lines are the result of skilful handling of shears and needle. The iron is only an afterthought as far as Saks clothes are concerned. Tailoring—and tailoring alone—has long made Saks productions the choice of New York's best dressed men.

PINS CROSS ON MENOCAL.

HAVANA, April 7.—In the Red Room of the Presidential palace today the French Minister to Cuba bestowed upon President Menocal, in the name of President Poincaré, the Grand Cross of the French Legion of Honor, signalizing the first anniversary of Cuba's entry into the world war on the side of the Allies.

President Menocal, who has been authorized by a vote of the Senate to wear the insignia, was visibly moved by the Minister's expression of France's friendship and appreciation of Cuba's aid in the struggle for right and liberty against the German invader. He accepted the distinction in a speech, in which he declared that Cuba had entered the war to aid in the restoration of faith in treaties, the inviolability of the seas and freedom of neutral commerce, "which the nations with which we are at war have so unjustly failed to recognize."

The ceremony was witnessed by an audience restricted to high Government officials, diplomats, members of Congress, army officials and members of the Legion of Honor.

WAR INCREASING VICE.

Probation Board Notes Growth of Delinquency Among the Young.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 7.—War has increased delinquency among young girls, according to the annual report of the Probation Commission for 1917 to be submitted to the Legislature tomorrow. The commission points out the need for extended supervision of amusements, the prevention of the promiscuous meeting of young girls and soldiers who are strangers to them.

During the statistical year ending June 30, 1917, a total of 21,847 persons were placed on probation by courts of the State, an increase of 13 per cent. over 1916. While a total of 6,820 children under 16 were dealt with on probation during the year, more than twice as many adults were so dealt with, the report states. Of all the cases placed on probation 76 per cent. completed it with improvement. 15 per cent. returned to court for sentence, and only 5 per cent. were lost from oversight.

The commission recommends the employment of efficient, salaried probation officers, men and women, appointed under civil service in every city and county of the State.

Mexico Barred Cotton Export.

MEXICO CITY, April 7.—With regard to the shortage of the cotton supply in Spain, strenuous efforts were made here recently by a representative of the Spanish Government to procure a shipment of cotton, but the Mexican Government refused to permit the export of cotton on account of local necessities. Virtually all the cotton mills here are working, except those that have been shut down on account of strikes.

GEN. PERSHING SENDS LIBERTY LOAN PLEA

"Every Dollar Subscribed Is a Dollar Invested in American Manhood."

LANE ALSO MAKES APPEAL

No Official Reports on Totals in Washington—More Winners of Honor Flag.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—In a cablegram received by Secretary McAdoo today, General Pershing urged a large subscription to the Liberty Loan as an expression of confidence to the American soldiers at the front.

"Every dollar subscribed to the Liberty Loan is a dollar invested in American manhood," the General cabled. "Every dollar subscribed as the result of self-denial means partnership in the hardships and risks of our men in the trenches. Every dollar subscribed will confirm the determination of our people at home to stand by its army to a victorious end. An overwhelming subscription to the Third Liberty Loan will be a patriotic expression of confidence in our ability as a nation to maintain all that we hold dear in civilization."

Secretary Lane today issued this statement:

"The year of war has crystallized the spirit of our people. We know why we are fighting and to what end. From a standing start, we have in one year made progress at which we should not be discouraged. The principles and habits of life of a democracy do not lend themselves to advance preparation to withstanding the military onslaughts of an autocratic Government that has had but one supreme end in view for nearly half a century—the subjugation of mankind. However, we have done well, we are getting now into our stride, and can reasonably hope to do still better in the future. The purchase of Liberty bonds is the one effective way in which most of us can fight."

This telegram came to Secretary McAdoo from Harry Laidler:

"May victory to the allied cause come as swiftly as the wonderfull patriotic response to the Third Liberty Loan from the North, South, East, and West. I have seen the glorious United States bubbling over with the spirit of self-sacrifice and patriotism. Truly a wonderful country and a wonderful people. All my leisure time is at your command."

8,000 Speakers at Work.

Initial reports from every part of the country show that the publicity campaign begun on Saturday far outstripped any previous Liberty Loan efforts. The country is pastered with posters and other outdoor advertising material, and the War Loan organization says that the newspapers and all other channels of publicity are co-operating wonderfully. Eight thousand Liberty Loan speakers are working directly or indirectly under the Speakers' Bureau in Washington.

Tomorrow the largest force of salesmen ever assembled to further a single enterprise in the history of the country will begin the first real day's selling of Liberty Loan bonds. It is asserted the selling machinery is so efficient that every individual in the United States will receive an opportunity to subscribe, not once but many times over, before the campaign finally closes on May 4. The slogan "Organize down to the individual" has been applied in virtually every county in the nation.

Secretary McAdoo returned to Washington today from Philadelphia, where he opened the campaign yesterday. Tomorrow he will start on his four weeks' swing around the country. His first Southern speech will be delivered in Richmond, Va., tomorrow. He will speak at Raleigh, N. C., Tuesday; Columbia, S. C., and Savannah, Ga., Wednesday; Jacksonville, Fla., Thursday, Pensacola, Fla., and Mobile, Ala., Friday, and New Orleans, Saturday.

No official reports on the total subscriptions obtained yesterday have been received by the Treasury Department, although scattering returns indicate they were encouraging. Treasury Department officials are not attempting to estimate whether the minimum subscription sought, $3,000,000,000, will be obtained by the end of the drive or before it. On the face of the scattered returns no sound predictions of any kind can be made.

McADOO IN TRAVELING OFFICE.

Car 302 Now Headquarters of Roads' Director General.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The main headquarters of the Government Railroad Administration for the next few weeks will be car 302, traveling over thousands of miles of main tracks and shunting from siding to siding.

It is the office car of Director General McAdoo, who, while touring the country as Secretary of the Treasury, speaking on behalf of the Third Liberty Loan, will continue active supervision over railway operation. Arrangements have been made to use railroad telegraph wires to keep Mr. McAdoo in constant long-distance touch with general headquarters in Washington.

Car 302 is fitted up as an office, with desks, typewriter stands, and a dictaphone. Inside, Mr. McAdoo will be railway manager; on the platform outside, speaking for the loan, he will be Secretary of the Treasury.

PUSH CAMPAIGN IN CHURCHES.

New England Clergymen Exhort Congregations to Buy Bonds.

BOSTON, April 7.—The campaign to obtain New England's Third Liberty Loan quota of $250,000,000 was carried into the churches today. From virtually every altar and pulpit, clergymen urged their congregations to buy bonds.

After the strenuous opening of the drive yesterday officials at the New England campaign headquarters today enjoyed a day of rest in preparation for a renewal of work tomorrow. With twenty-two cities and towns in this Federal district already "over the top," and with subscriptions for the first day conservatively estimated at more than $12,000,000, campaign officials were confident of ultimate success in raising the quota.

The program of publicity for the loan in this district surpasses anything accomplished in either of the two previous drives. More than 12,000,000 posters and pamphlets, cards and leaflets have been distributed to the 2,000 committees. More than 500,000 of the red, white, and blue target posters carrying the slogan "Buy a Liberty Bond," have been circulated. Of the stamps to go out on letters and parcel post packages, 1,862,000 have been prepared for distribution. More than a million copies of the primer of the new loan and a similar number of copies of the leaflet "Isn't America Good Enough for You?" have been sent out.

Every milk dealer in New England will have caps enough to put on each bottle of milk for seven days during the campaign. The caps bear the red, white, and blue bullseye with the appeal to buy a bond. A million red, white, and blue Liberty Loan bonds for wrapping shirts have been distributed among laundrymen. Dashbonrd posters urging New Englanders to buy a bond will decorate 100,000 street cars until the campaign ends on May 4.

More than 150 Jewish Liberty Loan workers from all parts of New England held a mass meeting here today and made plans for carrying the campaign into each Jewish home. The meeting was ndidressed by Senator Townsend of Michigan.

EXTOLS NAVY'S FINE SPIRIT.

Daniels Tells Men's Query After Long, Severe Sea Trip.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 7.—"Where shall we go from here?"

"This message from the boys of our navy to Admiral Sims," said Secretary of the Navy Daniels in an address at Emery Auditorium here this afternoon, "was delivered by officers and men immediately upon their return from a long gruelling trip at sea in search of submarines, where there is neither sleep nor rest for days on end, and where the strain on minds, muscles, and nerves is almost unbearable.

"Not a word of complaint from these men. Not a word of criticism from our boys, knee-deep in the mud of the trenches in France. The strong, brave, unconquerable voice of the American Army and Navy today is: 'Where shall we go from here?'"

The Secretary asked his audience to subscribe freely to the Third Liberty Loan. He declared that the "sixth of April," the opening day of the Third Liberty Loan drive, would go down in history with the "Fourth of July" as the greatest two American holidays, and both consecrated to the cause of liberty.

Mr. Daniels left tonight for Detroit.

PLEDGE LABOR FOR SHIPS.

Hog Island Workers Addressed by Senator Williams and Others.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., April 7.—The workmen at Hog Island pledged their all to the building of ships in a great "Liberty Day" celebration in the shipyard today. With them in their pledge were their wives, daughters, mothers, and sweethearts admitted to the yard today for the first time to commemorate the close of America's first year of war on Germany.

Senator John Sharp Williams, who has two sons in France, aroused them to patriotic enthusiasm when he declared that if the Prussians crushed France and Italy, the two great English-speaking nations would fight on and whip the Germans if it took twenty years.

Admiral Bowles also made a short address.

"Any man who takes part in building ships," said the Admiral, "is taking the part that a man should be proud of."

Walter Goodenough, General Manager of the plant, opened the meeting at the Administration Building by reading a message from Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board calling to the men to work harder. Mr. Goodenough appealed to the women relatives of the Hog Island workers.

"Don't forget the grimness of the war we are in," he said. "Help your men who are taking part in this great project. Don't let them waste their energy or their money. Their money is needed for Liberty loans; their energy to the full is needed at 100 per cent. efficiency to help build the ships our boys need in France. You women must help. It is your part to help the men do their part well."

Dr. Charles A. Eaton, the New York clergyman who left his pulpit to help get the men together in the shipping yards, and is now touring the country as head of the National Service Section of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, called upon the men to pledge their all in the shipbuilding program. He read a message from Chairman Hurley, in which Mr. Hurley asked them to take it as a personal task.

"Doing your bit is too small; do your all," read Mr. Hurley's appeal.

Admiral Bowles told the men he had such confidence in them and in the yard that he had just recently added sixty ships to the number they were to build within the next year.

Liberty Ball Reaches Batavia.

BATAVIA, N. Y., April 7.—The Liberty Ball and the Liberty Coach, traveling across the State to arouse interest in the Liberty Loan Campaign, arrived here today. Boy Scouts and bands escorted the ball from East Pembroke to Batavia. Frank B. Lyon, former Deputy State Highway Commissioner, who is in charge of the Liberty Coach tour, spoke on the loan in several local churches tonight.

Airplane Drops Loan Literature.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The big Caproni Italian military airplane, piloted by Captains Resnati and D'Annunzio of the Italian Flying Corps, came to Washington from Mineola, L. I., today, "bombing" New York City, Princeton, N. J.; Philadelphia, and Baltimore on the way with Liberty Loan literature. The officers will remain here a week to aid in the loan campaign.

President Menocal of the Republic of Cuba has sent this cable dispatch to Victor Hugo Barranco, special agent of the Cuban Government, in regard to the appointment of a Latin American Liberty Loan Committee:

The organization of this campaign, coming as it does at a peculiarly significant phase of the battle that is being waged for the liberties of the world, marks the first anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the war. It is but meet that the sister democracies of America lend their aid to raise the sinews with which to prosecute vigorously the struggle that can only end with the full vindication of the principles which form the basis of our own independence. Please convey to other members of the committee my cordial greetings and sincere good wishes for the success of their efforts.

Dr. Gerardo Echeverria is Chairman of the Latin American Committee, the membership of which represents every republic in Central America, the West Indies, and South America. The chief aim of the committee is to raise subscriptions to the Liberty Loan among the Spanish-speaking people of this city, who are said to number about 60,000.

Activity on the East Side.

The east side is actively engaged in the work of rolling up subscriptions to the Liberty Loan. The business men there are so enthusiastic that a number of them have offered prizes to canvassers. The United Hebrew Trades, which is actively co-operating with the Liberty Loan Committee, has distributed an immense amount of literature printed in Yiddish. It was announced last night that the Capmakers' Union had pledged itself to purchase $10,000 of bonds, and that every one of the 350 members of the Retail Cloth Salesmen's Association had promised to buy at least a $50 bond.

The Executive Council of the Jewish Workers' Committees of the Labor Bureau, which is conducting an active campaign among its members, is headed by Max Pines, United Hebrew Trades, Chairman, and M. Feinstone, United Hebrow Trades, Secretary.

The Jewish actors and managers are to take part in making the loan a success on the east side. They will organize at a midnight supper to be held on Wednesday at the Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Avenue.

Several hundred members of the Hungarian Society of New York celebrated the anniversary of the entrance of the United States in the war yesterday by pledging themselves to subscribe to $10,000 worth of Liberty bonds. Captain A. P. Simmonds of the United States Army, who is detailed to propaganda work for the Liberty Loan, emphasized the urgent need of supporting the Government with "many and money power" in the present crisis, and appealed to all the members present to lend their efforts to the cause in every way possible.

The society in a resolution renewed the pledge of loyalty and unswerving devotion to the United States, which it gave when the nation declared war against the German Government. It offered its aid in behalf of the third Liberty Loan and all other efforts the country may make and emphasized its eagerness to stand behind the Government and the men at the front.

From the funds of the society $10,000 was subscribed for the present loan, a like amount having been subscribed for the second Liberty Loan. The society also decided to present a fully equipped ambulance to the Government.

At a meeting of the Brooklyn Eastern District Turn Verein, Bushwick and Gates Avenues, Charles Saenger announced yesterday afternoon that the organization would raise $25,000 among its members, practically all of whom are Americans of German origin. In a few hours $18,000 was subscribed. The United Singers of Brooklyn, also an organization composed of persons of German origin, decided yesterday to purchase $1,000 of Liberty bonds.

Through a misunderstanding as to the meaning of the Honor Flag, one of which is to be awarded at the end of the third Liberty Loan campaign to each town or district oversubscribing its quota, some stores have ordered Honor Flags with the view of selling them. The Liberty Loan Committee called attention yesterday to the fact that the sale of the Honor Flags was forbidden.

The sinking fund provision of the law authorizing the third Liberty Loan will prove an added reason for purchasing more bonds, according to Harold B. Thorne, Vice President of the Metropolitan Trust Company. He said yesterday:

"We shall subscribe and exceed the $900,000,000 quota of the New York district in the third Liberty Loan drive without the slightest doubt. And it will not take long nor will it be an exhausting task.

"The sinking fund provision will help the subscription to these bonds nightily. Such a fund always adds to the strength of an issue twofold. It increases confidence through the sentiment attached to safeguarding and it strengthens the bond in reality."

ST. LOUIS DRIVE OPENED.

Gov. Gardner Denounces Pro-Germans to Large Audience.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 7.—Declaring that any person in the United States "who has enjoyed the privileges of our Government and still has the slightest pro-Germanic feeling should be stood up against a stone wall and shot at sunrise," Governor Gardner of Missouri, opened the Liberty Loan campaign in this State this afternoon with an address here.

The ceremonies, which were postponed yesterday on account of rain, were witnessed by what is believed to have been the largest crowd ever assembled in St. Louis. In his address the Governor said:

"There can be no half-hearted allegiance at a time like this. A pro-German is a German spy and should receive the same treatment at our hands. If at any time I become convinced that there is in any community in this State an organized movement of these traitorous wretches, having for its object the embarrassment of the Government in the prosecution of the war, I shall declare martial law in that community, suspend the constitutional privileges, and order all spies, pro-Germans, and other enemies of the Republic tried by court-martial. If they be found guilty then it would mean that they face a firing squad.

"He who does not know what German kultur means is either a fool or a knave, or both, and he who has enjoyed the privileges of our Government and has the slightest pro-Germanic feeling should be stood up by a stone wall and shot at sunrise."

URGES INQUIRY INTO GERMAN WOOL PLOT

Deputy Attorney General Becker Reports Public Investigation Should Be Held.

ACCUSES BOTANY MILLS

He Calls Its Acts "Fraud on the British Government and the Textile Alliance."

Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker, who directed the investigation to ascertain the real ownership or control of certain great woolen mills in this country and whether those mills are wholly, or in part, owned or controlled by subjects of the Kaiser sent his report to Chairman Vance C. McCormick of the War Trade Board last night. In this report, which has been approved by Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, Mr. Becker makes the suggestion that the present "is no time for the country to take chances with German-Americans of doubtful loyalty" and adds, "the unforseen consequences of this investigation bring us face to face with the necessity of judging the present loyalty of certain firms and individuals."

The report deals with the activities of Hugo Schmidt, the American representative of the Deutsche Bank; Eugen Schwerdt, who though a Belgian by naturalization, was a loyal subject of the German Emperor; the Forstmann & Hoffmann Company and the Botany Worsted Mills, two of the largest woolen goods manufacturing concerns in the United States; Charles J. Webb & Co. of Philadelphia, and other less important individuals and concerns. Schmidt and Schwerdt are now interned as dangerous enemy aliens, the Government having ruled that Schwerdt's Belgian citizenship was of the false brand.

"Having ascertained," says Mr. Becker in his report, "from an examination of the Deutsche Bank papers now in possession of the Attorney General that during a considerable period of time interests in Germany were engaged in purchasing wool and jute in the United States, South Africa, Australia, and India through American firms as intermediaries, I recommend to you that a public investigation be held to determine whether any of the transactions constituted violations of law; or constituted such breach of faith or action for German interests of an underhanded character as might affect the right of the American and British firms and individuals concerned to have their present loyalty considered as above question." The British subjects referred to are Alfred Everitt, a prominent wool dealer of South Africa, and a jute dealer by the name of Ernsthausen in Calcutta.

The report then gives the details of the operations of Schmidt and Schwerdt as active agents of the enemy in this country from the time they arrived in this country, shortly after the outbreak of the war, until the entry of this country into the struggle. Mr. Becker tells how various American firms were used as ostensible purchasers of wool for the Germans, the real parties in interest being syndicates and persons resident in Germany. He refers to the shipments of large quantities of wool from New York to Germany; shipments which in two cited instances Great Britain permitted to be delivered on the representation that the wool was intended for private concerns in and near Berlin. It is asserted, Mr. Becker adds, that as a matter of fact a large part of these shipments was intended for the German Government.

After a reference to the organization of the Textile Alliance of America, through which both the American and British Governments operate, and of the fact that prior to this country's entry into the war various German-owned wool concerns were given import licenses, with the distinct understanding in every instance that the wool was for home or allied, and not German, consumption, Mr. Becker says:

"I am clearly of the opinion that the purchase and importation of British colonial wools by licensed American firms who lent their names to German firms who were the real purchasers and owners of the wool was in violation of the Textile Alliance arrangement with Great Britain. I hold this to be true regardless of whether the intent was to re-export the wool to Germany or to accumulate wool in the interest of the German buyers, reap the profit of a rise, and resell the wool in the United States."

Tracing the Wool Plot.

Mr. Becker next points out that, although it be established that one or more of these American concerns violated their agreements with the British Government and the Textile Alliance, "it by no means follows that there was any violation of the United States," since the transactions took place before this country entered the war. Mr. Becker then takes up in detail the various instrumentalities employed by the Deutsche Benk to carry out the German plot to get wool, even from the enemies of Germany. He first takes up the case of Schwerdt, the "Belgian citizen," who in a letter to a German friend, dated Aug. 1, 1915, which is quoted in the report, wrote:

> The triumph of our armies (the Austro-German) is glorious, and one's heart beats firmly. When I read the reports I often feel oppressed because I have to be so far away and can do nothing.

Concerning the Botany Mills, a concern which is said to have cleared $7,000,000 last year, the majority of the stock of which Mr. Becker states is held in Germany, the report says:

> The Botany Worsted Mills became committed to these purchases and made the importations after its application to become an authorized importer had been approved. Upon the arrival of the wools in the United States, they were released to the Botany Mills by the Textile Alliance, upon presentation to the latter by the former of the consular invoice and a guarantee covering the disposal of the wool. Every step in these transactions, from purchase to importation and release, was a fraud on the British Government and the Textile Alliance and a violation of voluntarily assumed obligations.
> The Bloehr family is the controlling factor in the Botany Worsted Mills. It is thoroughly German—none of it really pretends to be anything else. It would be simple-minded to trust it in matters involving the important interests of our country; inasmuch as the German ownership of a majority of stock has enabled the Alien Property Custodian to take control of the company we are justified in expecting that these mills will be conducted so as to help win the war.

The situation with reference to the Forstmann & Huffmann Company, Mr. Becker says, is much more complex. He refers to Julius Forstmann, organizer and present head of the company, as "one of the leaders in the wool industry of the United States, a man whose ability and forcefulness of character should be frankly recognized."

Americans in Majority.

This company, Mr. Becker says, is much more American than is the Botany. The majority of stock is now owned by American citizens, Mr. Forstmann being by far the largest individual holder. Mr. Forstmann has sworn that he was deceived by Hugo Schmidt, and that after the sinking of the Lusitania he says he became so thoroughly disgusted with Germany that he closed his business relations with that country. Mr. Forstmann is the owner of over $000,000 worth of Liberty bonds, and is one of the leading citizens of Passaic. As for the purchase of the wool for German account, which is admitted by Mr. Forstmann, the report goes into great detail. In the purchase of the wool Mr. Forstmann has said he did not at that time understand that he was violating the regulations of the Textile Alliance or that he was breaking an agreement he had entered into with the British Government. On this point the report states:

> In substance, the claim made for the Forstmann & Huffmann Company by its counsel at the present time is that whatever may have been the sympathies of the leader and majority owner of that firm, Julius Forstmann, prior to the entry of the United States into the war, he is now a loyal American; that he has been a liberal subscriber for the Liberty Loans and for war charities; that he is one of the leading citizens of Passaic, N. J., always in the fore in every work of human charity and public interest, and that he has performed services for the Government of an advisory character which have been of the highest value.
> For Germany, Forstmann broke his agreement of honor with the British Government and the Textile Alliance. This conduct won the admiration of the German Foreign Office to the extent that in June, 1916, the German Foreign Office sent a message to Ambassador von Bernstorff (which was intercepted) requesting preferential treatment for the firm of Forstmann & Huffmann in the distribution of coal tar dyes expected to be sent to the United States by the submarine deutschland. When the dyes arrived the Forstmann & Huffmann Company received its share of them. It asserts that it received no preferential treatment. This may have been due to the interception of the message.
>
> To show by what methods he has won the admiration of good Americans, it is only necessary to quote from a letter which has been produced in support of his character at the hearings as follows: "Your outspoken language of horror and angry indignation at the time of the Lusitania sinking, your knowledge of Bernstorff and his methods, together with your several conversations with me since then, leave no doubt in my mind concerning your reliable loyalty as an American citizen."
>
> If there is reasonable ground to believe that all this was a sham, a suspicion is cast upon the loyalty of Mr. Forstmann's adherence to the United States at the present time, which it is difficult to be rid of. I cannot escape the impression that such a suspicion is justified.
>
> One year after the sinking of the Lusitania, May 22, 1916, Mr. Forstmann was still far from breaking off his relations with Germany. He wrote Schmidt concerning certain investments of funds of his in Germany, which he wanted the Deutsche Bank to undertake. He was perhaps excusable in this, for there would undoubtedly have been a great loss, owing to the rates of exchange, if he had brought this money to the United States. It was just enough for him, however, to say merely that he wanted the money to be invested in Germany for this reason. He stated further that he intended to invest in German securities, partly because of the rate of exchange and partly because I wish to invest a portion my property in Germany." At the same time he was careful to beg of Hugo Schmidt that he should "handle things in such a way that if the letter is intercepted, one cannot read in it that I am the party concerned."
>
> Mr. Forstmann himself has invited a test of his loyalty by the sincerity of his aversion to the sinking of the Lusitania. If it were not for that the matter might have little pertinence. As it is, I cannot escape the conclusion that his protestations of a sincere conversion from German frightfulness were false, and that in consequence the quality of his Americanism today should be questioned. I sincerely hope that some procedure can be adopted which will lead to the devotion of a much larger proportion of the production of the Forstmann & Huffmann mills to the millitary needs of the country than Mr. Forstmann has permitted in the past.
>
> Regarding the firm of Charles J. Webb & Co., Mr. Becker says the firm was "distinctly informed prior to the inception of the transactions that their firm was to act as a 'dummy' simply by reason of the fact that it was on the approved list of the Textile Alliance while the actual principal was not. The breach of faith is plain." As regards the part played by Alfred Everitt in the transactions, Mr. Becker states that the facts have been transmitted to the British Government for "such action as it may see fit."

WILL HEAR BUENZ DOCTORS.

They Are to be Examined by District Attorney Caffey Today.

Dr. Karl Buenz, former German Minister to Mexico and head of the Hamburg-American Line in this country, will probably know some time this afternoon whether he is to be taken to Atlanta to serve a term of eighteen months in the Federal Penitentiary for his part in the German plot to make New York a supply base for ocean raiders. The inquiry to determine the state of Dr. Buenz's health will be resumed at 9:30 o'clock this morning before Judge Harlan B. Howe, in the Federal District Court. Several doctors who have examined Buenz will be examined by District Attorney Francis G. Caffey. Buenz, who was convicted more than two years ago, is now at liberty under $25,000 bail.

An important arrest recently made by the Secret Service was that of a man wearing the uniform of the army. The prisoner has been turned over to the military authorities, and no details of the case have been made public.

Franz Wockinger, a German, for whose arrest a Presidential warrant was issued several weeks ago, but who managed to get away before it could be served is now under arrest in Elizabeth, N. J. Wockinger who is also known as Franz Burkhardt, will be brought to New York this morning and turned over to Assistant Attorney General William Wallace for examination.

Jeremiah A. O'Leary, who was editor of the anti-British and pro-German monthly called Bull, will be placed on trial for violating the Espionage act tomorrow morning. The case will be heard by Judge Augustus N. Hand. Assistant United States District Attorney Earl Barnes will prosecute the case for the Government. Henry A. Wise is chief counsel for O'Leary.

LYNCHING INQUIRY BEGINS.

Illinois State Officials Take Up Collinsville Mobbing Case.

COLLINSVILLE, Ill., April 7.—State officials, acting under instructions of the Attorney General, probably will take over the investigation of the lynching of Robert P. Prager, an enemy alien, here last Friday.

Formal investigation will be started by the Coroner tomorrow, but tonight a representative of the Attorney General's office was credited with a statement that the State would assume charge of the case and that information obtained at the inquest might be turned over to a special session of the Grand Jury which opens next week. There were no disorders reported here today and so far as could be learned no further information was obtained which would tend to prove Prager's loyalty or disloyalty to the United States.

WEALTHY GERMAN HELD.

William Luebbers of Baltimore Arrested as an Enemy Alien.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 7.—Shadowed by detectives for the last eight months, William Luebbers, 44 years old, a native of Luebeck, Germany, one of the wealthiest Germans of this city, was arrested here today by a Deputy United States Marshal. For the last ten years Luebbers has been one of the foremost real estate dealers of the State, and, according to Federal officers his cash holdings and investments are very large.

It was learned that he was arrested because of an alleged false oath he made in making a report at the enemy alien registration in February. He is also accused of entering barred zones. One of the specific counts against him is that three times during March he motored within the bounds of Camp Meade.

HUNT FOR CANDIDATE TO OPPOSE HEARST

WILL OPPOSE ANY 'CITY MAN'

Plans for the elimination of William R. Hearst as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor this Fall are being discussed by Democratic leaders both in the city and up-State. The up-State leaders will meet at Syracuse on April 24, when they hope to be able to produce a candidate who will be satisfactory to the voters up-State and to Tammany Hall as well. The organization leaders are proceeding on the theory that Mr. Hearst will be a candidate at the primaries unless he is convinced in the meantime that he will have no chance of winning.

It was said yesterday by a leading up-State Democrat that Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, had no intention of backing Mr. Hearst's candidacy, but had informed up-State organization men that he would accept any candidate the up-State men would produce.

Mr. Murphy met a number of the up-State leaders about two months ago at a meeting in this city, and asserted unequivocally, it was said, that not only was he against Mr. Hearst, but also that he did not want to meddle in the State situation at all this year. The up-State men accepted Mr. Murphy at his word, and now will try to convince Mr. Hearst that he will be beaten if he attempts to make a fight in the primaries. At the same time the Democratic leaders are afraid that, even if beaten in the primaries, Mr. Hearst will run as an independent Democrat.

At the Syracuse meeting a resolution probably will be adopted to the effect that a New York City candidate will not be acceptable, and that the only chance of defeating Governor Whitman, who is expected to be the Republican choice again this year, is in the selection of a leading up-State Democrat. It is expected that the resolution will expressly assert that not only will Mr. Hearst be undesirable as a candidate but that such possible New York City Gubernatorial material as Secretary McAdoo, Frank L. Polk, Counselor to the State Department; Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert, Alfred E. Smith, President of the Board of Aldermen; State Senator Robert F. Wagner, or any other city man will stand no chance of election as long as the up-State voters demand their own candidate.

Just how Mr. Hearst will take such a declaration is what is worrying the leaders.

At the same time the Syracuse conference is expected to cause the elimination of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who has been mentioned as a possible candidate; Mr. McAdoo, and others, by asserting that Federal office holders will be unwelcome as candidates because they will be accused by Republicans of deserting the Government in critical war times. This is expected to leave the way clear for the selection of an up-State man who will have strength with the farmers and other elements opposed to Governor Whitman.

There are a large number of names of up-State men under consideration by the leaders as possible candidates. These include Herbert P. Bissell of Buffalo, President Cabana of the Chemical National Bank of Buffalo, Charles E. Treman of Ithaca, Delos Cosgrove of Watertown, who is a law partner of ex-Senator Cobb, and in the choice of the elements opposed to a municipal ownership program; Justice Henry V. Borst of Amsterdam, ex-Mayor George R. Lunn of Schenectady, who was elected on a Socialist platform, but has been a Democrat for the last two years and who, as a Congressman, is a stanch upholder of the Wilson war policies; Henry C. Walker, Mayor of Binghamton, who is said to have a large following, and County Judge Frank Hasbrouck of Poughkeepsie.

Views of Chairman Harris.

Edwin S. Harris, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, who is said to be opposed to Mr. Hearst, has not committed himself to any candidate, but said yesterday that he would be for Alfred E. Smith if there was not such a strong up-State prejudice against the selection of a Tammany man. Chairman Harris said it was very easy to determine who the Democratic candidate for Governor would be.

"It is sure to be a man," he said, "big enough to be Governor and one who will devote himself to the duties and opportunities of his office and not to the building up of support for his own Presidential ambitions. It is sure to be a man who will organize every resource and energy of the State in every possible way to aid in winning the war, and it certainly will not be a man who cannot lay aside his personal ambitions in order that he may devote his entire ability to the service of the State. It will certainly be a man who will not use our great war crisis as a means for personal advancement.

"The Democrats in New York City are ready and willing to do their utmost to elect the Democratic ticket this Fall and the responsibility will be upon the Democrats in the other parts of the State to select the candidate who will receive the support of the entire party outside of the City of New York and so insure his election."

Mr. Harris said that personally he felt it was a misfortune that prejudice and ill will of the press made the nomination of a member of Tammany Hall improbable.

"In my judgment," he said, "the one man whose knowledge of State affairs, whose sympathies with the people have always been the keenest, whose courage is unsurpassed and whose ability to think clearly and act quickly and forcefully is unequaled among public men, is the present President of the Board of Aldermen."

Enlisting the Aid of Women.

Members of the Democratic State Committee expect that women will play an important part in the election and have already perfected plans to give them full representation in the party's councils. There will be twenty-one women members of the Executive Committee of the State Committee, equaling the number of men members. Eighteen of these women members have already been appointed by Chairman Harris and the other three will be appointed within a few days. The members already selected are: Mrs. William R. Hearst, Mrs. Robin A. Laut, Mrs. John B. Thompson and Mrs. Harry Hastings of New York City; Miss May E. Bourity and Miss May Patterson, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Fred E. Kennedy of Binghamton; Mrs. Blanche V. Welzmiller and Mrs. Philip J. Kearns, of the Bronx; Miss Sarah McAlke, of Yonkers; Mrs. Charles B. Smith, of Buffalo; Miss Frances H. Lamon, of Watertown; Miss Beulah Ballet, of Troy; Mrs. Edwin S. Jenney, Miss Ethel Stebbins and Mrs. John Schuyler Crosby, of Syracuse; Mrs. Joseph Sinclair, of Flushing and Mrs. Julia McLaughlin, of Long Island City.

These women members of the Executive Committee will meet next Saturday at noon at the National Democratic Club, 115 Fifth Avenue, and perfect plans for the organization of committees of women in every county of the State. Up-State members of the committee will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander at a dinner at the Hotel Astor in the evening.

The Democrats have also made their plans for conducting a Congressional campaign this Fall in the Eastern zone laid out by the Regional Committee of the Congressional Committee. This zone comprises New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Porto Rico. Members of the National Committee, as well as Chairmen of the State Committees in the three States and Porto Rico, held a meeting at the Hotel Knickerbocker last week and discussed plans for carrying on a spirited contest in every Congressional district within the zone.

T. R. ANSWERS OVERMAN.

His Editorial on Sedition Bill One Based on the News, He Asserts.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, April 7.—Theodore Roosevelt today replied to Senator Overman of North Carolina, who charged that the Colonel had made a false statement in declaring that the Sedition bill now before the Senate would prohibit criticism of the President. Colonel Roosevelt said:

"The clause containing the language I quotes was in a bill introduced by Senator Meyers of Montana and considered by the Judiciary Committee. The Associated Press and all the newspapers I happened to see stated that the Judiciary Committee had adopted and reported the bill with this clause in it. Being thus misled by all the news papers before me, I accepted the statement as correct. I am exceedingly pleased to find that the statement was incorrect and that the Judiciary Committee did not adopt the proposed provision.

"My article in The Kansas City Star should therefore be altered by substituting for 'the Senate Judiciary Committee has just recommended the passage of a law' the words 'the Senate Judiciary Committee has had before it for consideration a law.'

"This makes not the slightest change in the sense of my article or in the need of writing it. It absolves the Senate Judiciary Committee of all blame and leaves that blame on the Senator who introduced that bill and all who supported it. Moreover, these men represent an attitude of so many men of high official position and so many other men of influential position connected with them that in my judgment it had become imperative for some one clearly and emphatically to state the truth which is that article restated."

To prepare the Police Reserves, who were formerly known as the Home Defense League, for the police parade, in which they will take part, a review of them will be held next Friday night at the 23d Regiment Armory, Skinner and Jefferson Avenues, Brooklyn. The review will be attended by Mayor Hylan, Commissioner Enright, and Special Deputy Commissioner Roman Wanamaker, who is head of the Police Reserves.

Mayor Hylan has appointed George W. Loft, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, to represent the Mayor at the "Win-the-War-for-Permanent-Peace" Convention to be held in Philadelphia in May by the League to Enforce Peace. The appointment was announced in a letter to William Howard Taft, President of the league.

The Committee on Nursing of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense announced yesterday that about 500 Red Cross nurses, due to sail for France soon, would be entertained at the home of Mrs. James Speyer, 1,058 Fifth Avenue, on Wednesday afternoon. The committee announced also that special cabs for nurses would be opened here soon.

SAYS 500,000 BRITONS BLED ON THE SOMME

James M. Beck Adds That 240,000 Frenchmen Died for the Motto, "They Shall Not Pass."

James M. Beck delivered a patriotic address at Calvary Episcopal Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, last evening. Other features of the service were the singing of the new "Liberty Anthem" and the unveiling of an American flag. A message was also read by the rector, the Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, from Bishop Lawrence urging the congregation to work for the success of the third Liberty Loan.

Mr. Beck said that in the battle of the Somme a year ago England had left behind the blood of 500,000 men, saying when giving the figures: "I believe that I am not violating any pledge in doing so." He also said he had been informed by a French General that "240,000 Frenchmen gave their lives in order to say, 'They shall not pass.' The field east of Albert, where they are battling now, is probably the greatest graveyard in all the world," he added, "and never before in the history of warfare has heroism reached such heights as in the year of 1918."

He spoke feelingly of the British and French people. "I was privileged to spend four days with the British forces on the west front and I gained in action," he said, "and I have witnessed the French soldiers and I have been among the British and French people during these their greatest hours of trial. They do not boast, they do not promise, they do not cry, and they do not whine. It may be called boastful, the French people have made but one declaration: 'They shall not pass.'"

Mr. Beck declared our entrance into the war was of far greater importance than any event since the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and laid emphasis on the relation of the Church to the war, saying:

"If ever there was a war in which the price of justice was at stake, it is this war. A great principle was involved from the very beginning, and it is because the principle of justice and civilization is involved that the Church is concerned in re-establishing civilization on solid grounds."

He quoted this sentence in President Wilson's first war message: "America is privileged to dedicate all that we have and all that we are."

"In that word 'privileged' the President struck the keynote of the spirit in which we are going into this war," declared Mr. Beck. "It will give us imperishable glory for all time to come that we have had this privilege."

"What's the Best Hotel?"

Good hotels are plentiful.

But in four prosperous cities of the Middle West (Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, and St. Louis) there are Statler Hotels—nationally known for three things that entitle them to a description even more flattering than "good hotels:"

One is Statler equipment—complete equipment which gives you circulating icewater in your bathroom (every Statler room has private bath), puts a well selected library at your disposal, and provides for your comfort and convenience in many other unusual ways.

Another is the Statler policies, under which these hotels are operated. The basis of Statler policy is a working principle which declares that "the guest is always right," and your assurance of its interpretation is that, in any Statler Hotel, your satisfaction is guaranteed—you to be the judge.

And Statler service is a complete service, rendered by employees trained in courtesy, thoughtfulness and genuine interest in the guest's wants. All personal service is, of course, subject to the limitations of the human element which delivers it; service can't be wrapped up and handed to you like a bundle of merchandise. But Statler service is built on the right foundation (guaranteed satisfaction), and it is pleasing thousands of travelers every day.

When you are in Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit or St. Louis, register at the Statler. You will get more than your money's worth in hotel accommodations, and you can give the local address in each of those cities which makes it immediately evident that you know the right hotel.

THAT we have made merchandise which you have bought and used establishes a certain bond between us.

We have done our best for you. You have shown a confidence in us.

Today we have a message for you—different.

We urge you to buy Liberty Bonds; to invest all you can in the Third Liberty Loan.

If you have any respect for us as manufacturers, if you have any confidence in our goods or our word—if we have built up any foundation of good-will for our name or our trade-mark—we put it all on the table and ask you to believe that we value all that at nothing unless you are willing to heed our request that you get into this Third Loan with every dollar you can spare.

If there is a certain presumption in our leaning over the counter of our shop, so to speak, and insisting that you buy your Country's Bonds, why then, here we are, presumptuous.

We have put a lot of our money reserve into these Bonds and we are going to cast aside a little business reserve and tell you why we did, and why we think you should.

Germany must receive a complete military and political defeat. This defeat will be administered and the spirit that will do it will be our single-minded, unified determination to win.

It is going to take something of the feeling shown by John Paul Jones. Remember—his ship was burning and he kept her from sinking by sailing up and lashing the mizzen-mast of his ship to the jib-stay of his enemy's. His flag was shot away and the commander of the "Serapis" shouted to know if he had surrendered. Jones cupped his hands about his mouth and bellowed back, "Why, —— —— your soul, I have just begun to fight."

There never was born on earth the Kaiser, nor bred on earth the people that can prevail against that spirit.

Friends, we are just beginning to fight. Those other loans were "get ready" loans. The money bought guns and uniforms and ships and shells, and carried our men to France. This loan is a Fighting Loan. Like John Paul Jones, we have just begun to fight, and it is not on record that John Paul lost any time or spared any effort after he cast that profane but immortal defiance.

The time is past to talk of "needs" or "doing bits" or what we can afford.

Imagine that your civilian coat is the buff-tipped blue that Paul Jones wore. Imagine that your winter derby is his cocked hat. Then let your voice ring as his voice rang. Begin to fight. Buy those Bonds.

DIFFER OVER PLAN FOR RAILROAD COAL

Fuel Administration Believes Carriers Should Pay the Same as Other Consumers.

WILSON MAY DECIDE IT

Attitude of the Railroads Is Developing a Crisis, F. W. Parsons Asserts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Whether the railroads, which have been obtaining their coal supply at a low figure in the past, shall pay the price fixed by the Government for other consumers, now that they are under Government control, is a question which has been debated here for some time. There are reports that the matter has been brought to the attention of President Wilson.

In the past railroads which controlled the car supply were able to obtain their coal in many instances at a price below the new Government rates, and a change would involve heavy additional expenditures. The operators who furnish this cheap coal were able to make up the difference by the prices obtained in the open market, a course which they are unable to follow under Government regulation of prices.

The question came to the front with the recent suggestion of the Fuel Administration that all pending contracts for coal—and this would include contracts obtained by the railroads at low prices—should be abrogated as of April 1. This step might force the railroads to pay the Government rate for their entire supply from that date.

The position of the Fuel Administration is said to be that the railroads under Government control should pay the prices fixed for the coal to other consumers, despite the fact that it would involve the addition of a very big item to the operating expenses. As far as could be learned tonight, no decision has been reached by the Railroad and Fuel Administrations, and the President may be asked to decide.

In the meantime it is improbable that the plan to abrogate all contracts as of April 1 will be carried out, and that if an agreement is reached contracts may be permitted to stand until July 1 or later.

Parsons Explain the Situation.

Floyd W. Parsons, editor of Coal Age, returned yesterday from Washington, where he was in consultation with the various officers of the Fuel Administration regarding the prices which the railroads shall pay for their fuel supply.

The situation was this, Mr. Parsons said: The railroads had gone to certain mine owners and had offered to buy coal at 50 to 60 cents below the price fixed by the Fuel Administration. They promised in return to furnish all the cars needed by those operators for the transportation of coal. Their price was accepted by the mine operators, Mr. Parsons said, because the assurance of plenty of cars meant that they could work their mines six or seven days a week, could keep their labor satisfied, and make a profit under the full-time plan.

The result of this had been, Mr. Parsons continued, that these mines were running on full time, while other mines were often able to operate only two or three days a week. The output of every mine having a railroad contract, Mr. Parsons said, had been greatly increased, and labor had been drawn from other mines. Some of the mine operators who had no railroad contracts, Mr. Parsons said, had visited Dr. Garfield and had assured him that they could not under existing prices make a profit. These operators had asserted that they could not obtain cars in sufficient numbers to keep the mines going every day, and furthermore they could not give constant employment to labor.

Mr. Parsons asserted that Dr. Garfield had had the books of these companies examined, and what he found led to an increase in price. This action, Mr. Parsons said, was followed, at least in one case, by the visit to Washington of a delegation of the miners' union. This delegation believed that the mine owners were making money, and they demanded a share of the profits. Dr. Garfield, he said, went over the matter with them and showed that the mine was not making money, and explained the reason why there was not work for the miners on every day.

The Railroad Administration, according to Mr. Parsons, then was appealed to, but it held that it had a right to make coal contracts without consulting the Fuel Administration.

"Efforts on the part of the Fuel Administration," Mr. Parsons said, "to convince the Director of Railroads and his principal associates that the railroads should pay the same price for coal as is paid by the domestic consumer, were without avail. If the railroad plan to demand preferential treatment in the matter of coal purchases is continued, the whole coal situation will be demoralized. The present attitude of the railroads is developing a crisis that will be worse than the crisis from which we have just emerged.

Says Railroads Are Discriminating.

"The railroads are denying equitable distribution of cars to those who will not make price contracts satisfactory to them. The natural result of this plan is to increase the price of coal to the public but the really important phase of the matter is not that the public should be forced to pay for the saving made by the railroads in coal, but that it should cause serious labor unrest. No matter how high wages the miners get, they cannot earn a living unless they get also the opportunity to work—the same opportunity as have the miners in mines operated under railroad contracts. Why, some mines are worked only from 5 to 15 days a month. We might just as well fight these things out now as next Winter, for if the mines are not operated in Summer we cannot hope to have the coal reserve on hand in Winter for which we are striving.

"Charges are made by some of the coal operators that even this system of forcing contract for cars is being abused. It is charged that in certain districts the railroads have obtained at low prices more coal than is actually needed for their own operations and this coal has been distributed to certain favored industries producing freight on their lines. And remember this was done under Government control."

Continuing, Mr. Parsons asserted that the disagreement between the Railroad Administration and the Fuel Administration would precipitate strikes unless conditions were remedied. Conditions in Central Pennsylvania he considered especially disturbing.

LANDING FIELDS CHOSEN.

Burleson Tells Plan for New York-Washington Aerial Mails.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Postmaster General Burleson announced today that the three landing fields for the aerial mail service had now been selected, and the work of preparing the fields and erecting the hangars would be pushed as rapidly as possible. The service will be in operation not later than May 15. The three landing fields selected are Potomac Park for Washington, Bustleton, North Philadelphia, for Philadelphia, and Belmont Park for New York, which has been offered to the Government without cost and the offer accepted. The hangars at Potomac Park are now being constructed and the work at Bustleton and Belmont Park will be speedily begun.

"Assuming that the airplanes leave New York for Washington at noon," said the official announcement, "and leave Washington at the same hour for New York, rail connections for destinations beyond these cities and Philadelphia will be made which would otherwise be impossible. An airplane leaving New York at 12 noon, arriving at Philadelphia at 1:30 and at Washington at 3:30, carrier connections than those conforming to the train schedules from New York will be made with trains for Camden and Atlantic City, N. J.; Paoli, Lancaster, Harrisburg, and Chester, Penn.; Wilmington, Del.; Fort Deposit, Md.; Cape May, Reading and Pottsville.

"Mail arriving at Washington by airplane at 3:30 would make connection with the Baltimore & Ohio train leaving Washington at 4 P. M. for Cumberland, Grafton, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, and St. Louis. It would also make connection with the Southern train leaving Washington at 4:15 P. M. for Charlottesville, Lynchburg, and Danville, Va., Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, N. C., Atlanta and Birmingham.

"At New York earlier connections will be made for Bridgeport, New Haven, Springfield, Boston, Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, Elkhart, and Chicago.

"An airplane leaving Washington on this noon schedule would make the late afternoon city delivery over the entire City of New York. To make this delivery by train letters now have to be mailed before 9 A. M."

FAVORS AIR MAIL SERVICE.

Aero Club Official Sees In It a Source of War Strength.

"Belmont Park is the ideal New York terminal of the Washington-New York airplane mail line," said Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club of America, yesterday, and Henry Woodhouse, a member of the Board of Governors of the club, agreed with him.

"The aerial mail carrying project is much closer to the cause of national defense than many people realize," said Mr. Hawley. "Had the postal authorities been permitted to establish aerial mail lines several years ago it would have given great impetus to the development of large mail carrying airplanes and high power motors, and we would today have extensive sources of supplies of these machines with which to strike Germany through the air. There would also have been trained hundreds of aviators in cross-country and night flying, which would have given a reserve of trained aviators to use against Germany upon our entry into the war."

SOLDIER FORGERS PUNISHED

Penitentiary Sentences for Three at Camp Wadsworth Approved.

Special to The New York Times.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., April 7.—Major J. Leslie Kincaid, Judge Advocate of the 27th Division, announced today that the War Department had approved the sentence of the court-martial in the case of Privates Ira D. Brall, George D. Katzman, and William H. Randolph, Company D, 102d Engineers, who were tried on charges of forging checks aggregating $1,500. Brall and Randolph each received sentences of seven years at hard labor in Atlanta, and Katzman was sentenced to five years.

The usual mode of operation was to call up a hotel or a merchant and state that Captain So and So was calling, and that he was sending in his order with a check which he wished cashed. A large number of $50 and $100 checks were floated in this manner, and in one case a dry goods store cashed a check for $200. The operations of the three soldiers were confined to the week before Christmas.

DISPROVES REPORTS OF GLASS IN FOOD

Federal Agents Find Only One Authentic Case in More Than 200 Investigated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Through the Committee on Public Information the announcement was authorized tonight that only one genuine case of the presence of ground glass in foodstuffs had been discovered by Federal investigators, although they had investigated more than 200 of the many reports. In the single case verified by the Food Administration, which is authority for the statement, glass was placed in one loaf of bread by a disgruntled employee in a bakery in Fort Smith, Ark.

The official statement regarding the result of the various investigations reads as follows:

"The frequent and widespread publication of statements concerning the presence of ground glass in foodstuffs has led the Committee on Public Information to inquire into the authenticity of these reports. It has been advised by the Food Administration that thorough investigations of more than 200 of the cases has disclosed only one instance in which ground glass was found in the foodstuffs inspected.

"The case in which glass was found occurred at Fort Smith, Ark. A baker in that town had had trouble with his employees, one of whom, desiring to destroy his employer's business, had filled with glass a loaf of bread which was to be delivered to an orphanage. When the bread was served to the inmates of the institution several of them suffered lacerations of their lips. No more serious injuries resulted. The case was given premature publicity, the baker being accused of being a German agent, with the result that he had to retire from business.

"Major James Miles, head of that bureau of the Food Administration which has directed the investigations, has personally conducted ten inquiries in and within the vicinity of the District of Columbia, and at his behest the Secret Service has made the other investigations reported to the Food Administration. Other intelligence services of the Federal Government have also made numerous investigations of reports that were brought in the first instance to their attention. These later inquiries have proved the reports to be practically as groundless as those investigated by the Food Administration. In a few cases glass and other foreign substances were found in the coarser foodstuffs, but the presence of these foreign substances was patently attributable to careless milling, rather than to design.

"Replying to a letter relating to one of the most recent cases reported to the Food Administration, Major Miles wrote the following letter:

"April 3, 1918.

"Mr. A. E. Vinson, University of Arizona, Tucson, Arizona.

"Dear Sir: Your letter of March 28, addressed to Mr. Hoover, has been referred to me. I desire to thank you very much for the information contained therein.

"We have followed the elusive ground glass story from Maine to California and from the Lakes to the Gulf for the past four months. War Intelligence, Navy Intelligence, and the Department of Justice are doing the same, and in the thousands of cases that have been reported we have found but one genuine case of deliberate intent in putting ground glass in food. This case was where a disgruntled employee of a bakery in Fort Smith, Ark., placed glass in one loaf of bread. This was done for the purpose of injuring the business of the bakery and succeeded so well that the bakery is out of business, due to untimely publicity.

"Yours very truly,

"U. S. FOOD ADMINISTRATION."

"The Food Administration has endeavored to impress upon the public and the press of the country the evil results of premature publicity given to reports of the presence of glass in food. Publication of the reports before opportunity is afforded for investigation serves to create a condition of hysteria in households and does irreparable damage to the food producers and handlers whose products are attacked."

MORE HYSTERIA THAN GLASS

U. S. Marshal Finds No German Plot to Make Food Dangerous to Life.

After investigating twelve reports of glass and other foreign substances in bread and candy, United States Marshal James M. Power, in Brooklyn, said last night that he did not believe that enemy aliens were organized to destroy life. He said that in the few cases where bread contained glass he believed it had been put there to injure the reputation of the baker. He said there was no evidence of a widespread plot, and added that most of the reported cases of glass in bread might be traced to accidents.

About thirty-five reports of glass in food have reached the police in Brooklyn in three days and Marshal McCarthy said he thought most of them were due to a wave of hysteria induced by the first reports. Many samples of bread sent to police stations did not contain glass, he said, but sand or other substances that had reached the mixing machines by accident.

Marshal Power went to a bakery in Rockaway Avenue after the police had turned over a loaf of bread with bits of glass imbedded in the crust. He learned that no enemy aliens were employed there, and that a window had been broken accidentally in the bakery last week.

In cases of glass discovered in milk it was found that the lips of the bottles had been chipped by rough handling, and some of the glass reported to have been found in candy was crystallized sugar.

BAKING RULES AMENDED.

Changes on April 14 to Effect Greater Saving of Wheat.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Amendments and additions to the baking rules have been made by the Food Administration to effect a greater saving of wheat flour. These changes become effective April 14. After that date the substitute content of all bread and rolls must be increased from its present 20 per cent. requirements to 25 per cent.

Under the baking rules issued Feb. 1, bread and rolls were the only bakery products that required wheat flour substitutes, unless those products were called "Victory" cakes, "Victory" pies, &c. Under the new amendments and additions, all bakery products must contain a certain percentage of wheat flour substitutes.

A substitute content of 33⅓ per cent. is to be required hereafter in sweet yeast dough goods, cookies and ice cream cones, cakes, pies, fried cakes, and pastry. In batter cakes, waffles, quick breads, such as muffins and Boston brown bread, 66 2-3 per cent. is to be required, and in crackers, 15.

Under the new rules no public eating place may serve more than two ounces of bread and rolls or more than four ounces of quick bread to any one person at any one meal.

With customers who buy loaf bread bakers are urged to promote the use of the three-quarter pound loaf, following the Food Administration's request that the 12½-ounce loaf be used where the 16-ounce loaf was used before.

Bakers are urged to introduce "quick breads" as a wheat saving measure. These quick breads, including muffins, baking powder biscuits, corn bread, Boston brown bread, griddle cakes and waffles, must contain two-thirds wheat flour substitutes. The use of the word "milk" or "cream" on wrappers and labels is no longer prohibited, but milk bread must still be sold at the same price as bread made without milk.

HOTELS GIVE UP FLOUR.

Food Administration Hears of Large Transfers for National Use.

The Federal Food Board learned from United States Food Administrator Hoover yesterday that reports had been received in Washington from several administrators that voluntary tenders of large stocks of flour were being made by hotel interests for the use of the army, navy, and the Allies.

"This patriotic action," the message reads, "is very commendable, and we suggest as the most practical method of handling that all flour be accepted regardless of the size of the package, at a fair price, same to be determined by you in consultation with your merchants and representatives of milling division and grain corporation in your zone. Endeavor to have merchants finance the proposition in every case without Government funds.

"Otherwise payment is to be made by the Grain Corporation against the warehouse receipts or bills of lading. This flour is to be stored at most convenient points for time being, releasing immediately equivalent amount from mills to go forward in name of your State or county in export sacks at once. This accomplishes all that is desired by those making sacrifice, does away with expense and delay of repacking, solves transportation problem and makes for more efficient service on our part in helping critical situation abroad.

"The cost of repacking for export and duplication of transports will be very large, and by the above means the exact quantities given will be released over and above our present program of giving them one-half of our total supplies."

In answer to protests received at the Milk Exhibit against the appearance of peanut butter in milk dishes that were supposed to be made solely of milk products, Dr. Mary S. Rose, in charge of the exhibit, said yesterday that peanut butter was not intended to take the place of butter, but of meat.

"Peanut butter," she said, "is simply peanuts ground to paste, and peanuts are a food whose virtues should be more appreciated. It takes the place, not of butter, but of meat. The peanut is an ingredient in most of the 'preferable' 'meat substitutes' upon the market. Ounce for ounce, the edible nut (or ground paste—peanut butter,) and strictly lean beef are interchangeable as sources of protein in the diet."

260,000 MECHANICS LISTED.

They Constitute a Reserve Ready for Call from Shipyards.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Through its Public Service Reserve, the United States Employment Service has registered approximately 260,000 mechanics to meet future needs of the shipyards or calls for men of special trades. This number exceeds the goal of a quarter of a million which was set at the start of the drive a month ago, and all States are continuing enrollments.

This reserve will be drawn on gradually, since large numbers of men are not in immediate demand by the yards, and the unemployed workers applying at branch offices of the Employment Service will first be used. As ship construction progresses, however, the reserve will be called upon to furnish men in increasing numbers.

ASSAIL ZANGWILL THEORY.

The "Melting Pot," Louis Marshall Says, Is No Solution of Problems.

Disbelief in the "melting pot" theory of American life and institutions as advanced originally by Israel Zangwill was expressed last night by Judge Julian W. Mack of the United States District Court and Louis Marshall at the dinner of the Intercollegiate Menorah Association at the Hotel Biltmore. The dinner was given to Judge Mack and Irving Lehman, Supreme Court Justice, by the association.

"Israel Zangwill was guilty of a great mischief when he spoke of the melting pot, and indicated that in it he found the solution of the Jewish problem," said Mr. Marshall. "It was clear that Zangwill is not a metallurgist or else he would know that in the art of metallurgy the great effort made by those concerned in it, by electrolytic powers, is that the various elements composing the melting pot shall be separated into their constituent parts, so that the copper shall be fused with the copper, the silver with the silver, and the gold with the gold.

"The melting pot, as advocated by Zangwill, produces mongrelism, whereas the electrolytic process produces virility. And so our struggle should be not to create a hybrid civilization, but to preserve the best elements that constitute the civilization we are all seeking, the civilization of universal brotherhood."

The other speakers were Nathan Straus, Justice Lehman, Henry Hurwitz, Chancellor of the Association and Joseph Proskauer, toastmaster.

Justice Lehman, referred to by the toastmaster as "The Father of the Menorah Movement," said that this was no time to further any movement or sect that could not be made of service at the present time to the country.

Both Justice Lehman and Mr. Marshall said that the Menorah movement would be of aid when the war was over and when the reconstruction period had begun, because it would aid in developing the Jewish leaders of the next generation, who would be true to their race and at the same time would be absolute in their Americanism. It was explained by the speakers that the plan of the Menorah movement is to study and advance Jewish ideals and culture. It was started at Harvard in 1906, and has forty-six branches in American institutions.

ENTERTAIN 7,000 SOLDIERS.

Seven thousand soldiers in this city on leave over Saturday night and Sunday were entertained by the New York War Camp Community Service. The Military Hotel in West Twenty-seventh Street, formerly the Earlington, had every bed taken, and was compelled to send many men to other hotels. Nearly a thousand men were entertained yesterday at dinners at churches, the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church laying a spread for 100 men. Many others were entertained in private homes.

A matinee was given for the soldiers at the Playhouse on Saturday, and 1,500 attended a matinee at the Casino. Nearly a thousand toured the city yesterday in Fifth Avenue buses specially engaged. Saturday night thousands attended a dance at the Grand Central Palace, while others went to a boxing exhibition held in the Twelfth Regiment Armory.

"LIGHTNING DIVISION" NOW.

New Jersey Command at Camp Dix Gets Nickname.

CAMP DIX, WRIGHTSTOWN, N. J., April 7.—Out of the contest over the selection of a nickname for General Dean's troops the "Lightning Division" comes victorious. The choice has the approval of the division officers it was formally announced today. The honor of having suggested the nickname chosen from among the 300 presented goes to Private William Hicks, Jr., of Brooklyn, formerly an artist on a New York newspaper.

An investigation will probably be ordered by military authorities into the death yesterday of Private Cecil Tiffany of Flemington, who, as a recruit from Hunterdon County, arrived at Camp Dix Thursday. Hospital authorities say his death was due to acute alcoholism. Members of the Hunterdon County delegation say that although Tiffany was not a hard driuker a farewell "beer party" given by his friends was undoubtedly the cause of his illness and death.

HIKE BACK TO CAMP MEADE.

Gen. Kuhn's Men End 22-Mile March from Baltimore.

CAMP MEADE, April 7.—The Liberty division of General Kuhn's Army marched back to camp today from Baltimore, covering the twenty-two miles in the day's hike. Only a few of the more than 12,000 men dropped out on the long tramp. The start was made at daybreak from the Baltimore Parks, where the troops camped Saturday night after the parade and review by the President. At noon the boys rested an hour. Theoretically the division marched to Baltimore to stop the German invasion on the national capital. After the march Major Gen. Kuhn issued this order:

"No further information has been received of the enemy. Other troops have arrived to relieve this command for the defense of the city. This command will march to Camp Meade."

And the command did. It marched every inch of the way and lived up to the reputation it has won of being "Kuhn's Slugging Army," the lads singing nearly all the way.

TAKE 50 IN UNIFORM IN BIG RESORT RAID

Police Make Sunday Morning Descent Upon Cafes in Upper Broadway Neighborhood.

INSTIGATED IN WASHINGTON

Between fifty and sixty soldiers and sailors, under the influence of liquor, were found in the company of women, most of whom had been arrested several times, according to District Attorney Swann, who supervised a raid by police detectives yesterday morning, between 2 and 4 o'clock, upon nearly a score of all-night restaurants and clubs, between Forty-fourth and Fifty-fourth Streets and Sixth and Seventh Avenues.

While this raid was going on Army Intelligence officers were making a careful survey of the same territory, and some of the intoxicated men in uniform, found by the District Attorney's raiders, were turned over to them. The purpose of the investigation by the army officers, it was stated, was largely for the purpose of reporting to Washington on moral conditions in New York City, which had caused dissatisfaction in the Army and Navy Departments recently, according to dispatches from Washington.

District Attorney Swann said the raids carried out by members of his staff, in co-operation with the police, were undertaken largely at the instigation of army officers, who reported to him that they needed help in preventing the sale or presentation of liquor and drugs to soldiers and sailors. It was reported last night that unless drastic action is taken by the New York authorities to suppress vice and the sale of liquor to men in uniform the War and Navy Departments may interest themselves energetically in the situation. When asked last night if it had been intimated to him that drastic action would be taken by the Government unless the New York authorities succeeded in bringing about satisfactory conditions promptly, Judge Swann refused to answer.

Army Asked Co-operation.

"We have had many requests for co-operation with army officers in breaking up certain forms of vice, which have led men in uniform astray in this city," he said. "We had planned this raid some time ago, and carried it out this morning in connection with our search for witnesses against Morris Rothenberg, who is accused of murdering Harry Cohen. We had splendid co-operation from the police. Six men from Captain Dan Costigan's squad, fifteen from Captain McKenna's, and eighteen men from Captain Henry's force co-operated with us, and the raids were executed with great skill.

"We found ample justification for the protests of army officers. In my opinion many of the soldiers and sailors who were found intoxicated were deliberately supplied with liquor by men who had an interest in reducing their efficiency and lowering the morale of our army. In other words, the evidence we found leads me to believe that drinking and other forms of vice are being purposely encouraged by men in this city who want to injure America's army. For instance, we found that some soldiers and sailors were carrying small flasks of whisky which had not been sold to them, but had been given to them. This might have been done by persons inspired by misdirected good-will, but, taken with other evidence, I believe that those who are responsible want to pin with drugs and drink as many soldiers and sailors as possible.

"I don't want to be understood as saying that there is much drinking or other vice among men in uniform, but we found between fifty and sixty men in uniform who were the worse for their night's experiences, and we want to make conditions in this city so clean that not one soldier or sailor will be found here in that state.

"The district which we raided is now infested by the worst element in New York City. The old east side gangs have quit the east side and moved almost in a body into this section. Detectives who took part in the raid picked out any number of burglars, pickpockets, blackmailers, and gangsters in places within a stone's throw of Broadway, and they were all men formerly notorious on the east side.

"This condition has been gradually growing worse for three or four years. I am confident that a few more raids of this kind will break it up entirely. Drastic action is necessary if New York is to do its duty by the men in the service of the country."

100 Prisoners Taken.

The raid was the most thoroughgoing which has ever taken place in this section. During two hours, in which raiding parties of detectives were sent into one restaurant and club after another, a total of more than 100 prisoners were gathered up and taken to police stations, where thirty-three were finally held as prisoners.

The first places entered were cafés in which, according to Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith, the murder of Harry Cohen, alias "Harry the Yot," who was killed last Monday morning, was planned, and an alibi for Morris Rothenberg, the alleged murderer, was composed and rehearsed by several witnesses who have appeared in favor of Rothenberg.

The first place raided was Marshall Sofield's at Forty-eighth Street and Seventh Avenue, where Rothenberg and Joseph Galupo, Jr., who is also under arrest in connection with the Cohen murder, met on the night before the killing. Marshall Sofield and Herman Schultz were arrested there and a number of others were held to be questioned. The next place raided was the St. Regis Café in West Forty-seventh Street, not far from Broadway, where among those arrested were four men who, the police say, had records as "hold-up men" and "confidence men."

The next visit was to Wolpin's café, a large restaurant at Forty-seventh Street and Broadway, where more than 300 persons were present when the police entered. The detectives picked out fifteen men and women, most of whom had been identified as old offenders, and took them to police stations.

By that time swarms of men and women from neighboring cafés had gathered on the corners. Detectives Cassasse, Shay, Kerwin, Mugge, and others began picking out those with records from the crowd, which soon dispersed under this attack.

"You can't arrest me. I haven't done anything," was the standard protest of most of those taken into custody.

They were told that, in that case, they would be released, provided they showed their cards proving that they had registered for the draft. Not one of the men arrested was able to do this, and their failure put the right of the police to arrest them beyond question.

Several men and women were then arrested in the E. & L. restaurant and the Amsterdam Café, in West Forty-fourth Street, and then the detectives raided the Sharps and Flats Social Club, in West Forty-sixth Street, where it was charged that liquor was being sold without a license.

One Army Officer Caught.

Only one army officer in uniform was found during the raids, and he was sober. He protested indignantly when he and his woman companion were prevented from leaving. One of the detectives told him they wanted to know a little more about the woman he was with first.

"This is a perfectly respectable young lady," he exclaimed, indignantly, "whom I have known for a long time."

Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith looked at her and said: "Aren't you the girl who was arrested at the Paradise Café and sent away four years ago?"

The girl burst into tears and admitted that she was the same person. The army officer then admitted that he had made an awkward blunder, and District Attorney Smith allowed him to leave.

The prisoners, numbering 100, were taken to four stations, where those who were believed to be more or less innocent persons in bad company were liberated. The thirty-three who were locked up took their arrests philosophically. Only one of them went to the trouble yesterday to inquire about being bailed out.

District Attorney Swann said yesterday that the thirty-three prisoners would be questioned today at his office.

"Some of them know a good deal about the Cohen murder," he said. "Others can tell us about gambling. Others will have to testify about the selling of liquor to men in uniform. Evidence of this kind will be turned over to the Federal District Attorney and to the Army Intelligence Department."

Police Inspector Henry said yesterday after the raids:

"I believe that this will have a great moral effect. This element must get out of the city. Undoubtedly many quite innocent persons were embarrassed by these raids, but a lesson of this kind is not amiss to them when they are out between 2 and 4 o'clock in the morning in very shady places. It will teach them not to be out in the early hours."

MRS. SHEPARD TO SOLDIERS.

Speaks of War's Duty at Service in Collegiate Church.

Mrs. Finley J. Shepard was an impromptu speaker to several hundred soldiers and sailors at a service held in the Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue and Forty-eighth Street, last night. She said she counted the loss of American lives in the war below the value of American duty to fight for a virtuous and righteous cause.

"Death is not the worst thing," added Mrs. Shepard. "Far worse than this would be the loss of our honor and virtue. The war comes home very close to me. My brother Frank is in the Somme region and my sister Anna is now in Paris."

The pastor, Dr. James Malcolm MacLeod, urged thrift and the conservation of vital necessities for the conduct of the war.

"The pressure of the war," he said, "is doing at least one good thing; it is introducing greater simplicity into our national life. It is teaching us to eat simpler food and wear simpler dress. If everybody today exercised thrift, there would be enough for all. We must purchase Liberty bonds and we must invest in War Savings stamps. We must preach the gospel of retrenchment."

FIELD MASS AT CAMP UPTON.

4,000 of the 7,500 Men in the New Draft Attended.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, L. I., April 7.—A field mass celebrated at an improvised altar on the parade ground of the depot brigade this morning was attended by 4,000 of the 7,500 new draft men who came here last week. Last night the Knights of Columbus were asked to obtain two Catholic Chaplains to say mass for the new men and the 39th Engineers, a newly formed unit now in the old civilian camp. Father Lawrence J. Bracken, Chaplain of the Knights of Columbus, said mass for the former and Lieutenant John J. Sheridan, Chaplain of the 306th Field Artillery, for the latter. Father Sheridan's service was conducted on a rough, stump-covered field adjoining the engineers' area. It was attended by 1,500 soldiers and attachés of the base hospital.

Fifteen thousand visitors came to camp today. The Long Island Railroad ran seven trains of twelve cars each, and more than 500 automobiles came in from various points. The baseball team of the Training School for Officers defeated the 367th Colored Infantry nine by a score of 15 to 2 this afternoon. Sergeant Leon Cadore, formerly of the Brooklyn Nationals, pitched for the school. Several thousand persons saw the game.

CHURCH TO BE REOPENED.

Chelsea Congregation Gets Old Westminster Presbyterian Property.

After ten years of litigation and a loss of about $40,000 in time and legal fees the Westminister Presbyterian Church in Twenty-third street near Seventh avenue, is to be reopened this time in the possession of the Chelsea Presbyterian Church. The latter, under the charge of Rev. William Neely Ross, has for two years rented the old Methodist Church in Twenty-fourth street near Ninth avenue. This property will now be for rent, the Methodists having abandoned it as a place of worship.

Some years ago the New York Presbytery dissolved the Westminister Church for infractions of its regulations and held the property. Litigation has finally established the right of the Presbytery to control all church property within its jurisdiction. The Chelsea Church takes over the property with a substantial congregation and a larger Sunday School.

ARM ALL SPECIAL TROOPS.

Auxiliaries of Every Kind in Our Army to be Equipped for Combat.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Practically all special and auxiliary units of the army hereafter will be armed, the War Department announced today.

Divisional engineer regiments, engineer trains, corps engineer regiments, field searchlight companies, pontoon trains and even mining troops will be fully armed, while all classes of railroad, surveying and printing, water supply and mechanical engineer units will receive rifles on a basis of 20 per cent. of their enlisted personnel.

C. M. Phelps's Summer Home Burns

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 7.—The Summer residence at Hemlock Dam, near Fairfield, Conn., of Charles M. Phelps of New York City was totally destroyed by fire this afternoon. The loss was $12,000. Mr. Phelps is connected with the Austrian-American Steamship Company, which before the war operated thirty-six transatlantic steamers.

EXPLOSION ON TRANSPORT.

Two Workmen Badly Burned and Thrown from Scaffolding.

Two workmen in a repair gang on an army transport at Fletcher's Machine Works, at Fourteenth Street and the Hudson River, Hoboken, were seriously injured yesterday by an explosion of gas in the hold of the ship. They were working on a scaffolding when their acetylene torch ignited a pocket of gas that had been generated by several torches and machines used by the repairers. Both men were badly burned, and the force of the explosion hurled them from the scaffolding. Timothy Fitzgerald of Bayonne received a fracture of the left ankle. He was taken to the St. Mary's Hospital in Hoboken with Michael Riley of Hoboken. The vessel was not damaged, and other workmen continued their work in the hold.

An emergency call for all the fire apparatus in Hoboken was sent out yesterday when army officers at the army embarkation piers saw a heavy cloud of smoke rising from the hatches of an army transport lying at Army Pier 1, formerly of the North German Lloyd line. Fire Chief Dunn found that the smoke was coming from burning packing in one of the exhaust fans in the engine rooms, and the fire was put out easily with no damage to the vessel. The bearings of the fan had become overheated, setting fire to the packing.

GERMANS COUNT GAINS ONLY

Loss of Half a Million Men Lightly Balanced Against an Advance.

Speaking last night at a meeting at the Hotel Plaza, to raise funds to provide two ambulances for a hospital near Soissons, France, Frederic R. Coudert declared that at this crisis of the war there was no place for pessimism among the American people, but that the nation should be filled with confidence and determination to beat the Germans. The Allies will win the war, Mr. Coudert said, because without victory there will be no existence for them.

Scenes on the western front were shown by Charles de Flores, an American who has served in France as an ambulance driver. The ambulances for which the meeting was held will be provided for by a fund known as the de Flores Fund.

Explaining German methods, Mr. Coudert said that before a drive an officer of the General Staff would carefully estimate the number of men who would be lost in attaining a certain objective. If it were found that a number approximating 500,000 would be lost, it would be balanced against the advantage, and without other consideration regarding the awful lose of life and the suffering the drive would be ordered.

RAID DRAFT SLACKERS.

Minneapolis Night Resorts Yield Nearly a Thousand Prisoners.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 7.—Thirty men were held at the county jail tonight for investigation by agents of the Department of Justice following raids conducted by Home Guardsman and Sheriff's Deputies on pool rooms and dance halls here last night, when nearly a thousand men who did not have their registration or classification cards were taken into custody. Clerks worked all night checking up the men's records. According to the authorities, a majority of the men held either failed to register or did not return questionnaires.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot-Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide."

The Plattsburg Camp Manual advises men in training to shake Foot-Ease in their shoes each morning.

One war relief committee reports, of all the things sent out in their Comfort Bags or "Kits," Allen's Foot-Ease received the most praise from the soldiers and men of the navy. It is used by American, French and British troops, because it takes the Friction from the Shoe and freshens the feet. There is no foot comforter equal to Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic, healing powder to be shaken into the shoes and sprinkled in the footbath, the standard remedy for over 25 years for hot, tired, aching, perspiring, smarting, swollen, tender feet, corns, bunions, blisters or callouses.

THE LIFE HISTORY OF THE "MAN OF MYSTERY"

The Real Col. House

By ARTHUR D. HOWDEN SMITH

in the

New York Evening Post

Few People know the real Col. House, President Wilson's counselor and friend, Ambassador Extraordinary, the astute politician, persistently refusing public office, yet moulding the political fortunes of others. The unassuming private citizen, yet the most powerful personality in present world politics.

Now for the first time you may know Col. House as revealed in his life story in the New York Evening Post.

How he elected four Governors of Texas; why he supported Woodrow Wilson for the Democratic nomination for President in 1912; why he advocated Woodrow Wilson's renomination in 1916 and how he engineered his election. Always a close student of European affairs, he foresaw the World War long before war was declared. As President Wilson's personal representative he visited the European capitals in May, 1914, in an effort to prevent war, only to discover the grim determination of Germany and the unbelief of France and England in the possibility of war. His subsequent visits as representative of the U. S. Government, culminating in the great war conference of the Allied leaders in Paris, where it was conceded that he was the dominant figure.

The Truth About President Wilson and Col. House

This life story of Col. House is more than interesting biography. It re-writes the entire diplomatic history of the war and explains the war policy of the Wilson administration. Every American will read it with amazement, pride and profit.

The Man and His Methods

Here is that rare individual who seldom makes mistakes, who sees the future almost as clearly as the present, who rules yet seems not to rule.

With keen appreciation and sympathetic spirit, Arthur D. Howden Smith tells of Col. House's Youth and Early Career—His Methods—His Philosophy—His Purpose in Life.

FRIENDS' UNIT SAFE IN ZONE OF BATTLE

Smith College and Other Relief Workers Also Reported to be Out of Danger.

PROPERTY LOSS EXTENSIVE

Vincent D. Nicholson, Executive Secretary of the American Friends' Service Committee, received a cable message yesterday from Charles Evans, Chief of the Bureau of the Friends' Unit of the American Red Cross in France, announcing the safety of the unit, fifty members of which were in the region of the great battle, at Ham, Liancourt, Esmery-Hallon, Golancourt, and Gruny on the Somme and Aisne. The message read:

The work of the Friends' unit had been little affected by the German offensive, Mr. Nicholson said.

"Only fifty out of 350 workers were engaged in this region," he added, "while the largest work of the Friends' unit is done in the region of the Marne, considerably to the east of the German drive. In a part of this region, where almost no reconstruction work has yet been undertaken, the Friends have been urgently asked by the French authorities to assume entire charge of the work."

Red Cross Gave Aid.

J. Henry Scattergood, who spent five months in France last year as a representative of the American Friends' unit and as a member of the American Red Cross Commission to France, said:

"We rejoice in the cabled advices from our representatives and from other agencies that all of our workers in the Somme region as well as those from the Smith College unit and other relief organizations are safe. Many Red Cross trucks were rushed to their help, and made possible a much easier journey than would have been made earlier in the war.

"As to actual loss, the French people themselves have been the real sufferers. Our hearts go out to these poor souls who, after making a brave effort to get a fresh start, are now once more forced out of their homes. Fortunately their number is comparatively small, because probably not more than 20 per cent. of all the population of this previously destroyed district had found it possible to return. This was especially true in the villages within six miles of the front occupied before this drive, where no civilians at all had been enabled to return. The same applies to the old No Man's Land region, several miles wide, where the fighting continued for two and a half years.

"We are thankful that our workers were in a position to aid these newly stricken French people, and that this and other opportunities for immediate service make it all the more incumbent on sympathetic Americans to extend the much needed help. The French Government had its tractor plows at work on the newly stricken lands last Autumn, and had planned for 400. It is likely that all these have been lost. Our own unit has probably lost two tractor plows and other agricultural material in the two new farm centres there. Others, such as the Smith College unit in Grecourt and the Philadelphia unit in Villequier-Aumont, have probably been able to escape with comparatively little loss."

Lost Three Warehouses.

"The American Fund for French Wounded civil branch in Blerancourt has probably suffered much more heavily on account of the more permanent character of their plant. The greatest actual loss of any relief organization has probably been that of the American Red Cross itself, which had at least three large warehouses in the recaptured regions."

The speakers mentioned are Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Currency and Banking; Colonel Samuel McRoberts of the Ordnance Bureau, and Bainbridge Colby of the United States Shipping Board.

'APRIL' COMES TO THE PUNCH & JUDY

CALLED "ODD NEW COMEDY"

A Sentimental Variant of the Theme of "Eyes of Youth," and "Yes or No?"

APRIL, a comedy in three acts and six scenes, by Hubert Osborne. At the Punch and Judy Theatre.

The Woman	Pauline Lord
Her Husband	Mitchell Harris
Her Son	Jay Strong
Her Daughter	Margalo Gillmore
Her Father	Burr Caruth
Her Mother	Mrs. Jacques Martin
Her Friend	Julia Herne
Her Neighbor's Boy	Gordon Morris
Her Husband's Wife	Francesca Rotoli
The Strange Gentleman	Charles Hopkins
A Very Rich Man	Alphonse Ethier
His Son	Franco Bendsten
His Son's Friend	Charles Meredith
His Footmen	Robert Morton / Frederick MacDonald

James Huneker once remarked that the real riddle of the Sphinx is how to lead a double life on fifteen dollars a week. "April," which opened last Saturday at the Punch & Judy Theatre, shows how it can be done without even that inconsiderable expense, and, furthermore, without the least infraction of the conventions. Indeed, the tenor of the little play is sentimental, very; and the upshot is a moral of the order most approved theatrically.

In "Eyes of Youth" a cynical sphere reveals in a succession of trance dreams the heroine's several marital might-have-beens. "Yes or No" shows two contrasted fates simultaneously in the manner of a two-ringed circus. "April" is a blending of both. The heroine is happy in her family life, but feels cramped by her husband's lack of worldly success. They cannot even afford a vacuum cleaner. So she wishes she had married a fake promoter who has become rich. A "Strange Gentleman" (reminiscent perhaps of The Stranger in "The Third Floor Back") materializes out of a spot in the wall paper and conducts her through a marital experience with the successful crook.

In this second state she is bedizened and bejeweled, wearing her diamond tiara even at a home dinner on Christmas Eve; but she is woefully unhappy in her husband and children. So, still guided by the strange prophet of what might have been, she returns to her humble home to find it glorified. Her husband has his job again and can pay the installments on their house; her son has won the scholarship that is to take him through college, and the future shines bright with hope of the vacuum cleaner.

The moral, as aforesaid, is of the order most approved in the theatre. But suppose wealth had brought our heroine a really larger life, and an extended opportunity for helpful influences—as occasionally somehow happens. And suppose that fidelity to humble John had involved real poverty, privation. This also has been known to occur. Would the Cook's Tour through the land of Might-Have-Been afford a moral equally approved theatrically? Alas, it is to be feared that the thought embodied in the play is as shallow as it is deeply tinged with sentimentality. In real life, fidelity to John and to little Johnny too often means that grim, abhorrent thing, a life with no faint, glimmering hope of vacuum cleaners.

Incidentally the writing of the play is as naive and crude as its morality. To the great playgoing public, which has stamped with approval the two previous pieces of this order, it is possible that neither disability would be a hindrance to popularity. But "April" has a further and quite serious handicap. The program calls it "an odd new comedy." It is very far from new, and it is odd only numerically, being third of its kind. Furthermore, it is only by courtesy or custom that it can be called a comedy.

As in all the productions of Charles Hopkins, the staging is in excellent taste and (except in the milieu of diamond tiaras) pleasantly atmospheric. And the rest is so capable throughout that it is the greatest of pities it was not provided with material out of which something could be made.

REOPEN CENTURY ROOF.

New Managers Put On Another Lively Midnight Revue.

The more or less sporadic place of entertainment on the roof of the Century Theatre, rechristened the Century Grove by the new managers of that playhouse, was reopened on Saturday night with a lively midnight revue of the type to which New York and its visitors have grown accustomed through the kindness of Mr. Ziegfeld. Palpably designed for the entertainment seeker who would rather look than listen, the new revue offers many attractive bits of femininity in the usual unusual costumes, some exceedingly good dancing, eccentric and otherwise, and considerable undistinguished singing. As a midnight entertainment, accordingly, it leaves nothing to be desired.

Foremost among the performers are Gordon and William Dooley, whose equals in the field of eccentric comedy and super-eccentric antics are not easily to be found. They have two side-splitting numbers, one of them new. Then there is also Carl Randall from "Oh, Lady! Lady!!" taking it all rather seriously and not beginning to do himself justice as a dancer. The feminine portion of the cast suffers a trifle by reason of its lack of a distinctive personality, such as that of Miss White, but there is some graceful dancing by Frances Pritchard and some highly satisfactory looking by the remainder of the company.

A bit could be cut out of the entertainment to advantage. The restrictions imposed upon a roof show make it difficult to achieve anything resembling variety, and if the succession of musical numbers be too prolonged there are likely to be those among the audience who will wish that there were not quite so many. The entrepreneurs of the Century will probably find it to their advantage in the long run to give their patrons too little rather than too much.

AMERICAN AIRS HEARD.

War Tunes by Maud Powell and Others by Friends of Music.

Maud Powell, the violinist, played to an enthusiastic audience at Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon some of the music she has found her fellow-Americans eager to listen to on a transcontinental tour in this year of war. "The Belgian," Cesar Franck's sonata, with Arthur Loesser, part of a Sibelius concerto that Miss Powell first gave in this city with Safonoff, and a Russian "Song of Autumn," adapted from Gretchaninoff by Arthur Hartmann, were favorites, with the Beethoven-Auer "Oriental March," and the Coleridge-Taylor "Deep River."

Miss Powell presented a group of American tunes, her own artistic arrangements of "Kentucky Home," "Shine On," "Old Black Joe," and "Kingdom Coming," which last, she said, had stirred audiences in the West with its spirit of prophecy, renewed in this war. Among four encores after the matinée she gave her violin version of the beautiful "Chant Hindou," Macmillen's "of the Chopin "Maiden's Wish," and others of Poldini and Bazzini.

Samuel Gardner and Victor Kolar, two young New York violinists, heard their own brief manuscripts for string quartet performed by the Flonzaleys at yesterday's final concert of the Friends of Music at the Ritz-Carlton. An American program included numbers at greater length by David Stanley Smith and C. M. Loeffler, which have been heard before now at concerts of the Kneisels. For Mr. Gardner this was a début as composer, and his music contained interesting use of Russian tunes.

MATERNITY CENTRE IN VIEW.

Woman's City Club Members to Show How Mothers Are Aided.

Co-operating with the Federal authorities in the national baby-saving campaign, the Maternity Centre of the Women's City Club will keep open house at 219 East Seventy-ninth Street this week, and guests will be welcome to inspect the work. The organization of nursing work and medical service will be explained, a model baby outfit shown and method of instructing mothers in the purchasing of material, cutting and sewing, and knitting. Miss Anne Stevens, the nurse in charge, will explain the aid given to mothers in enabling them to obtain expert treatment.

There are two special committees connected with the centre whose work is to see that the mother is provided with nourishing food at a nominal cost, and that she obtains the service of a working housekeeper where she has no one at home to aid her. The mother is often injured, it is found, and the health of her baby affected by the necessity of taking up the care of her house too soon. Among those interested in the centre are Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Jr., Chairman of the Administrative Council; Mrs. Willard Straight, Mrs. Frank Vanderlip, Mrs. Elon H. Hooker, Mrs. Harmon August, Miss Katherine Dreier, Mrs. Samuel Straus, and Mrs. Joel Spingard.

TO ENTERTAIN NURSES.

Committee Announces Club Facilities for Women Going to France.

The Committee on Nursing of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense announced yesterday that arrangements had been completed to provide club facilities in New York for nurses in the national service who pass through this city on their way to France, at the Central Club for Nurses, 132 East Forty-fifth Street, which is co-operating with the Y. W. C. A.

Between 300 and 400 nurses of the American Red Cross, who are shortly to leave for France, will be entertained at a tea to be given by Mrs. James Speyer, a member of the Committee on Nursing, at her home, 1,058 Fifth Avenue, on Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Amy Hilliard, Superintendent of the Bellevue Training School for Nurses; Mrs. George B. McClellan, Chairman of the Committee on Nursing; Miss Anna T. Maxwell, Superintendent of the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses; Miss Florence Johnson, Director of the Atlantic Division of the Red Cross Service, and Mrs. E. M. House will be associated with Mrs. Speyer as hostesses.

NEW GARMENTS FOR NEEDY.

Workers in Needlework Guild's Campaign Will Report Today.

Workers in the campaign for 100,000 new members for the New York Branch of the Needlework Guild of America will make their reports at a meeting at the Cosmopolitan Club, 135 East Fortieth Street, at 3:30 this afternoon. The full quota reached will mean 200,000 new garments for the needy, as two garments apiece is the initiation fee. Miss Lillian Wald will tell of conditions among the poor and of the greatest need that she has ever known in her life, at the Henry Street Settlement, of layettes for babies.

Mrs. Truman H. Newberry, President of the National Guild, will tell of the progress of the National organization in its drive for 2,000,000 members and 2,000 new branches. The Needlework Guild is the only large organization which gives only new garments in its relief work.

Opera Benefit for Italian Soldiers.

The Metropolitan next Sunday will give a gala benefit for Italian soldiers' families in the United States, when the leading artists, both "Italian and allied," are announced to appear at grand opera prices. For the first time in years, Mr. Caruso will sing on a Sunday night, his numbers including the "Pagliacci" air, a duet with Mr. Scotti from "Forza del Destino," and with others the quartet from "Boheme." There will be solos and ensembles by Martinelli, Muzio, Amato, Alda, De Luca, Didur, and others, ending with the patriotic air of Mameli and the Garibaldi hymn.

ARNOLD DALY PLAYS IN PATRIOTIC FILM

"My Own United States" Is Based On Hale's "A Man Without a Country."

PICTURES OF THREE WARS

Marguerite Clark in "Rich Man, Poor Man"—Rialto Gives "His Majesty, Bunker Bean."

Arnold Daly appeared on the screen of the Rivoli Theatre yesterday in "My Own United States," a patriotic play based upon Edward Everett Hale's "A Man Without a Country." Mr. Daly was three different characters in the piece, Lieutenant Philip Nolan, the original man without a country; Lieutenant Philip Nolan, 3d, grandson of the original, and Philip Nolan, the present day scion of the family, who, by going to the world war, upholds the family honor thrown away by the first Lieutenant and redeemed by his son and grandson.

The story begins when the young man of today sits down to hear his family history. The pictures tell the story, and Mr. Daly makes his first change of character, becoming Lieutenant Philip Nolan, 1st, the friend of Aaron Burr and contemporary of Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson, all of whom appear in the play. He is arrested on a charge of complicity in Burr's schemes and in a fit of anger against the country which he thinks is unjust damns the United States and expresses the wish that he might never again hear the name of the nation. His wish is granted, for he is condemned to remain at sea under the American flag surrounded by officers and men who are forbidden to mention the United States to him. A succession of scenes show the vainly repentant man growing older in his ostracism and suffering agonies of mental torture.

Opportunities for Character Work.

The son, who had not been born when Lieutenant Nolan was banished, grows up and fights in the Mexican war. His son is a young man when the civil war breaks out and enlists for defense of the Union. Mr. Daly appears in this part and is shown in a number of scenes of the time, in which President Lincoln and General Grant appear. The last scene goes back to the young man who began hearing the story and who, when he has heard it, reaffirms his national love and loyalty and joins the army for overseas service.

The play covers a long era of American history, and yesterday's audience was moved to frequent applause by the scenes of persons and events that marked the life of the nation. Mr. Daly has wide opportunities for character interpretation, not only as three persons, but in different ages of the same man, and his abilities carry him far as a screen actor.

Mr. Daly appeared in person at last night's performance as a Four-Minute Man and spoke for the Liberty Loan.

Other numbers on this week's bill at the Rivoli are an overture called "American Festival March," composed by Hugo Riesenfeld for the first anniversary of the Rialto Theatre in April, 1917, scenic pictures entitled "Silent Wonderlands of the West," the fourth instalment of the stirring Official Italian War Pictures, and the Rialto Male Quartet.

Marguerite Clark in "Rich Man, Poor Man" is the feature at the Strand this week. Her character is that of a girl who is substituted for a boy as the heir to the wealth of John K. Beeston. After imagining herself the true granddaughter of the rich old man, played by Frederick Warde, Betty Wynne, the girl, is told that the forgery by which her position was secured has been discovered and her life is about to become a tragedy, when further revelations establish the fact that the young man she loves is the rightful heir. So the fortune is kept in the family and everybody is happy.

Bunker Bean in Pictures.

"Strange Fishermen of Russia" is an interesting series of motion pictures showing the process of catching, cleaning, salting, and packing fish in a small southern port. The Strand program also includes selections from "Cavalleria Rusticana" and other pieces played by the orchestra; "The Italian Salad," a musical satire by the Halsey Octette; a violin solo by Mary Zantay, a comedy cartoon entitled "Bobby Bumps on the Road," and an organ solo by Ralph H. Brigham and Herbert Sisson alternating.

Jack Pickford attempts to put on the screen the humor and psychology of Harry Leon Wilson's "His Majesty, Bunker Bean," at the Rialto this week, and, aided by some clever photographic tricks, succeeds in causing considerable amusement, but one who has been introduced to Mr. Wilson's characters by the author himself misses something in their motion picture appearance, although Mr. Pickford, Louise Huff and the others in the cast play their parts with spirit.

A succession of really beautiful scenic pictures supposed to illustrate "The Cruise of the 'Quickern'ell'" is marred by the introduction of inane captions and comments.

Peter Tschaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" is well played by the Rialto orchestra as an overture; the Rialto chorus is delightful in a medley of American folk songs, Annie Rosner pleases singing "In Dreamland" and "Friend Husband" is the type of slapstick comedy which optimistic persons interested in the photoplay believe is disappearing.

JEWISH UNITY PROPOSED.

Rumanian Convention Applauds Plan for a National Body.

A proposal that all Jewish organizations in the United States should be united into a national body with Nathan Straus at the head was received with enthusiasm at a convention of the Rumanian Jews of this country and Canada, who met yesterday in the Hebrew Girls' Technical School at Fifteenth Street and Second Avenue. The suggestion was made by Samuel Goldstein, President of the Jewish Federation of America.

The convention passed resolutions asking President Wilson to use his powers when a peace had been won to compel fair treatment of the Jews in Rumania. In his address Nathan Straus said:

"I have come here to say that I have every reason to believe that our great President has the interest of our people at heart and that he will have no terms with the German Kaiser which will not have the far-reaching effect of bestowing equal rights upon mankind the world over."

TO PASS ON PACIFIST BISHOP

Views of Western Prelate Have Left Him Without a Diocese.

The House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church, which will meet in secret session in Synod Hall on Wednesday, will again consider the case of Bishop Paul Jones, who resigned as Bishop of Utah in December of last year at the suggestion of a commission of three Bishops, who investigated the charges that Bishop Jones, by his Socialist views and his opposition to the nation's course in the war, had injured the standing of the Episcopal Church in Utah.

Bishop Jones has remained a Bishop without jurisdiction since his resignation. Whether further steps shall be taken in his case, to officially disavow any connection between the Episcopal Church and those preaching pacifism, will be decided on Wednesday, it was reported yesterday.

It is expected also that the House of Bishops will elect a new Missionary Bishop to the Philippines in place of the Right Rev. Charles H. Brent, who has been elected Bishop of Western New York. Bishop Brent is now serving in France.

KILLED IN BURGLAR TRAP.

Lunatic from Danvers Asylum Shot by Watching Storekeeper.

DANVERS, Mass., April 7.—After an all-night vigil in his store Charles F. Skillings, Postmaster at the Hathorne station, today shot and killed Henry Grush, an inmate of the Danvers Hospital for the Insane, who, Skillings said, tried to enter the store through a window. Skillings was arrested on a charge of manslaughter, and was later released on bail furnished by his wife. He will be given a hearing in the District Court at Salem tomorrow.

According to the police, Skillings, who conducts a small store in connection with the Post Office, has complained that burglars had made frequent visits during the last week. Last night, with Samuel Lewis, foreman of a nearby farm, he remained at the store in the hope of catching the robber. At daybreak, he told the police, a man tried to climb through the window, and Skillings fired, but missed him. Running outside, he encountered the man again and fired twice, both shots taking effect.

The hospital authorities say that Grush was considered harmless and was allowed considerable liberty.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The fourth annual "Follies" ball, which includes an entertainment participated in by the players of both the Ziegfeld "Follies" and the "Midnight Frolic," will take place on the New Amsterdam Roof on Thursday night, April 25.

"Rock-a-Bye Baby," a musical piece made from "Baby Mine," will be given its first performance in New Haven tonight.

Clara Palmer has been engaged for a role in "Quack! Quack!" a musical comedy which the Shuberts will soon offer.

The annual performance in aid of the Sick Fund of the Hippodrome Employes' Association took place yesterday afternoon at the Globe Theatre, with an audience made up exclusively of members of the Hippodrome organization. Many of the Hippodrome entertainers were on the program, in addition to Julia Marlowe, who recited "The Battle Hymn of the Republic;" James T. Powers, Andrew Mack, and others.

Bessie McCoy Davis, it is announced, will continue in vaudeville this season and next.

Houdini of the Hippodrome has accepted a challenge from the men of the recruiting office for the Tank Corps of the National Army and will endeavor to escape from an army "restraint suit" at the Hippodrome next Sunday night. The occasion will be a performance in honor of the thirteenth anniversary of the Hippodrome.

LONDON STREETS LESS SAFE

Reports Show Fewer Accidents in Proportion Here.

The National Highways Protective Society has just received from Scotland Yard, London, the record of fatal accidents on the streets of London for the year 1917, which shows that automobiles caused the death of 482, tramcars 65, wagons 183. The 482 deaths due to automobiles include 128 persons killed by omnibuses.

Colonel Edward S. Cornell, Secretary of the society, comparing these fatalities, finds that either the operators of buses and trolley cars are more efficient in this country than in London, or that the public obeys the signals of the traffic officers better in New York.

The comparison of the number of trolley cars operated in New York and the fatalities due thereto shows that, whereas in London sixty-five persons were killed in the year by tramcars or trolleys, with a daily average of 3,400 cars in the street, eighty-three persons were killed by trolleys in New York, with a daily average of 4,533 cars.

Omnibuses in London caused the death of 128, with a daily average of 2,000 running, whereas in New York, with a daily average of 160 to 190 omnibuses, one person met death.

The report of the London police shows that pleasure motoring has ceased entirely in England, private cars all being employed in some war work.

ASKS FOR EXTRA SESSION.

Record Would Have Jersey Legislature Fix Trolley Fares.

George L. Record, counsel for the Associated Municipalities in the case of the application of the Public Service Railway of New Jersey for an increase in fares to 7 cents, has written a letter to Governor Edge urging him to call an extra session of the New Jersey Legislature to amend the Public Utility statute. Mr. Record says the company contends that a recent decision of the Supreme Court of New Jersey relieves it of its franchise 5-cent fare limit. He adds that the Public Service statute was never intended to have that effect and calls on the Governor to have the Legislature amend the statute.

"I therefore suggest that you convene the Legislature in extraordinary session," says the letter, "and recommend an amendment of the Public Utility statute, providing in substance that nothing in the statute shall be construed by any court to relieve any company operating a street railway from any of the obligations imposed upon it by the original franchises granted by the local public authorities."

Striking the Keynote

The Life Extension Institute, with its Hygiene Reference Board of 100 members, was organized on a purely humanitarian basis to conserve the health of the nation and make life better worth living. Ex-President Taft is the Chairman of the Board of Directors, and many other distinguished men are back of the movement. Its program provides that two-thirds of the profits be set aside in a trust fund for health propaganda of a national scope.

Recognizing the splendid mission of the Institute, we were proud to cooperate with its officers in laying advertising plans and preparing copy. The first advertisement to appear after our preliminary conference was a clear message with the right psychological background and within safe ethical lines. It appeared in the Sunday edition of a New York paper. Up to noon the following Wednesday eight hundred inquiries had been received; at the close of the week nearly a thousand were in—and all from that single insertion. The inquiries were all of good quality and they resulted in many memberships.

Since that first advertisement others have appeared in the newspapers and magazines. The returns continue to come in and are most gratifying. There is every reason to expect the Life Extension Institute to grow and develop, as it truly deserves, through the printed advertisement, the word-of-mouth recommendation from enthusiastic members and the excellent methods of the Institute.

A NOBLE RIVALRY FOR THE LOAN.

There are several things to be hoped for in the "drive" for the Third Liberty Loan. First, that the entire three billions may be subscribed and oversubscribed long before the end of the thirty days indicated by the Secretary of the Treasury as the period of the effort. Almost certainly we shall see that hope come to realization. The country is aroused, it thrills and tingles with the spirit of rivalry, as we see from the number of towns and small cities that filled their quota of subscriptions almost before the race was started, and instantly laid claim to the award of the honor flag.

We are now well schooled in the technique of loan subscriptions; everybody knows how it is done. Millions of Americans own bonds of the earlier issues. They will be asked for fresh subscriptions and urged to get their friends to subscribe. The appeal reaches not only the mass, but the individual, every owner of a bond becomes an active agent of the Treasury, and the circle of subscribers automatically and rapidly expands.

We should like to see New York, that is the Federal Reserve District of New York, distanced in the race, beaten by the rest of the country. Our allotment is $900,000,000; the committee has fixed $1,500,000,000 as its goal. The goal can be reached easily, but it will be better if the other Reserve districts refuse to let New York have such a disproportionate share as one-half of the loan. This is a transaction in which the whole American people have an interest and a duty; every part of the country will take a pride in doing its full share. If the general response is what we fully expect it to be, New York will have to be content with something less than the amount named by the committee.

But the first day's work for the loan in this city and district gives fair warning that there can be no loitering, that our competitors must put on seven-league boots of zeal and activity if New York is to be kept from reaching a billion and a half before the flag falls. Saturday was a half holiday, there were but three hours for business, yet $100,000,000 of bonds were subscribed for. The organization here is admirable, the spirit of the community earnest and enthusiastic, as it is throughout the country. In the number of subscriptions and in the promptness with which the total is reached we hope to see the record of the former loans surpassed.

THE SHIPS FROM JAPAN.

Our Government will soon have in its service more than forty Japanese ships. It has bought twelve and charters for at least thirty have been granted by the Government of Japan. A majority of these vessels are ready for work. Several of those purchased will arrive at San Francisco in May. Already they may have started to cross the Pacific. Others will come to our Atlantic ports by way of the Panama Canal. Troops, munitions and other supplies will be carried by them to France.

Our war partners in Europe need wheat. In response to urgent appeals we promised a few months ago to send 75,000,000 bushels before harvest time. But on March 1 we were 27,000,000 bushels behind in shipments. Last week the soldiers' wheat bread ration was reduced in France. Last year's crop here was short, and the quantity available for the remainder of the crop season is small, not more than enough to satisfy a normal demand for home consumption. Our "visible supply" at the end of March was only 5,531,000 bushels, against 49,611,000 one year ago. In New York it had declined in a year from 4,933,000 to 53,000. There are about 180,000,000 bushels remaining in the whole country. Mr. Hoover asks that consumption be at once reduced by 50 per cent., to 21,000,000 bushels a month, in order that what our allies need may be sent to them. "This country," he said to the hotel keepers from all parts of the land who agreed to use no wheat until the next harvest, "is their only source of supply." Government officers are searching for wheat that has been withheld from market. Grain so hoarded has been seized in Texas, and two farmers in Nebraska are under indictment for holding 20,000 bushels. It may yet be necessary for the Government to assume control of the entire supply and regulate distribution of it.

Australia has 216,000,000 bushels of wheat in excess of the quantity required for her own people. From the recent harvest there is a surplus of 80,000,000 bushels, and 136,000,000 have been awaiting shipment for more than a year. Unable to export this grain directly to Europe, Australians expressed a desire two months ago that it should be carried across the Pacific to San Francisco, to replace here equal quantities of American wheat sent to Europe from our Atlantic ports. But we have had no carriers in the Pacific for such service.

Why should not the twelve Japanese ships we have bought and the thirty which have been chartered begin their work by going down to Australia, taking on cargoes of wheat, and bringing them to San Francisco or New York? If we should export our own available wheat with the least possible delay, it would soon be replaced by supplies thus received. These ships should not come to us from the other side of the Pacific with empty holds. Their cargo space might well be filled by Australia's neglected wheat.

THROWING STONES IN GLASS HOUSES.

Representative LENROOT, elected a Senator in Congress from Wisconsin last week, said on Saturday, as he had said before the election, that he would support Mr. WILSON in the Senate, as he had supported him in the House, in all measures helpful to the prosecution of the war. His Democratic opponent, Mr. DAVIES, could have promised no more.

The somewhat sour partisanship which, in the House of Representatives and out of it, the Wisconsin election has evoked, is a waste of time, to say no more. Both Democrats and Republicans are to blame. What boots it to put time-tabs on the patriotism of the two parties, or to squabble as to which has the better or the worse "record" between the beginning of the European war and America's entrance into it?

Why not shut up about the past, be charitable—and both parties need a good deal of charity—to past errors, and, without futile boast or quarrel, give every energy to the winning of the war?

THE GREAT GERMAN DECEPTION.

For telling the truth about his mission in London, about the efforts of the British Government to prevent the war, and about the rejection by his own Government of Sir EDWARD GREY's overtures for peace in August, 1914, Prince LICHNOWSKY, former German Ambassador to Great Britain, is in imminent danger of being put on trial for high treason. Just at the moment when the State's attorneys are considering the evidence against him Herr VON JAGOW, German Foreign Secretary from 1913 to 1916, ostensibly attempting to controvert the damning evidence of the Lichnowsky memorandum and pretending to expose its "inaccuracies and perversions," actually and pointedly corroborates the testimony of LICHNOWSKY as to the sole vital point of the controversy, the responsibility for beginning the war.

Prince LICHNOWSKY, either because he has been long enough silent under the accusation that he did not correctly inform his Government of Britain's intentions in that fateful last week in August, or because of remorse of conscience, or a real love for the truth of history, made plain his opinion that if his representations and Sir EDWARD GREY's appeals for a conference of the Powers had been heeded in Berlin there would have been no war. His testimony sets forth, what all the world outside the Teutonic alliance knows to be the fact, that Great Britain sincerely desired peace, not war, and that she strove to avert the struggle by bringing about a conference of representatives of England, France, Germany, and Italy to take measures for influencing Austria and Russia to keep the peace.

VON JAGOW bears testimony to the peaceful disposition of England. When he took office in 1913 England was ready to enter into friendly agreements with Germany concerning the Bagdad Railway and other questions. "An agreement had almost been "reached just previous to the outbreak "of the war." He affirms that England "played a conciliatory rôle and urged moderation upon Vienna" after the dispatch of the note to Serbia, insisting, however, that Germany also urged moderation, of which there is no evidence—quite the contrary. He puts himself in a position of squarely dissenting from the opinion laboriously built up in Germany by individual, collective, official, and persistent falsehood, that England was the cause of the war. These are his words:

> I do not intend to adopt the theory now widespread among us that England was the originator of all the intrigues leading to the war. On the contrary, I believe in Sir EDWARD GREY's love of peace and his genuine desire to arrive at an understanding with us, but he had allowed himself to become too hopelessly entangled in the network of Franco-Russian policy. He could find no way out and therefore failed to do that which had been in his power to prevent the world war. War was not popular among the English people, therefore Belgium had to serve as a battle-cry.

To this Captain PERSIUS, in the Berliner Tageblatt, adds this contribution: "An understanding ought to be easier "now that we have heard from the "two opposing forces, from VON "JAGOW and LICHNOWSKY, that England was not responsible for the war, "as hitherto has been believed in "wide circles in Germany."

Upon what mountains of lies, Ossas on Pelions of organized, calculated, deliberately studied falsifications, the Imperial Government raised the banner bearing the legend kept always before the eyes of the German people, "England began the war." At first Russia was the culprit; she mobilized and forced the hand of Germany. But early in the first year of the conflict the tune changed. "England began the war" was the text of every utterance, and the battle-cry of all Germany was "Gott strafe England." If an avenging God is to have a part in the matter at all, it can no longer be denied, even in Germany itself, that the vials of his consuming wrath should be emptied upon the heads of "the Potsdam gang," the Hohenzollern himself, his Ministers, and the brutal, bloody-minded chiefs of the military party who lied to the German people, conspired to delude and deceive them into the belief that England was the cause of the war, that her jealousy of Germany's commercial growth prompted her to a course of intrigues that made war inevitable.

It was a sorry tale, the proofs of its falseness were multitudinous and instantly forthcoming, but the German people believed it. "Gott strafe England" was on every lip, the "gang" of Potsdam started the cry, pulpit and press took it up, it resounded through all the Empire. It was a monstrous deception, devised to hide Germany's guilt. Yet for that the German people went to war, for that millions of them have been slain or maimed, for that their country has been made insolvent, for that the name of Germany has been made detestable to mankind.

What are the German people going to do about it, now that from German witnesses they have learned the truth, now that they have been told how their masters, their pastors, their professors, and their newspapers lied to them?

LIGHT AMONG THE COMRADES.

Signs are not lacking that in Europe no less than in America there is a tendency among Socialists to escape from the spiritual suzerainty under which the German Socialist Party has long held its brethren in other countries. If the hard-heartedness of HOFFMANN and the serpentine manoeuvrings of KUEHLMANN and CZERNIN at Brest-Litovsk have had the effect of disillusioning extreme radicals who maintained confidence in the misunderstood virtues of the German Government long after Belgium, Armenia, and the Lusitania were available as evidence, it is becoming apparent that the helplessness of the German Socialists in the face of the eastern treaties of peace is also bringing disillusionment as to their capacity for liberalizing Germany.

Our own Socialists, or those of them who did not follow the lead of STRONG, WALLING, and the rest in repudiating the St. Louis platform last Spring, have apparently not got so far as yet. The best they seem to be able to do is to objurgate HOFFMANN and the Kaiser. But the Socialists of Europe are beginning to wonder if SCHEIDEMANN's passivity is the best that is to be expected of the German Socialist Party. Cable dispatches yesterday brought word that among the Dutch-Scandinavian committee, which hitherto has seemed to be anxious for almost any sort of a peace, and whose interest in suppressed nationalities seemed sometimes to depend on who had suppressed them, there is not only widespread horror at the behavior of the Germans in Russia but a growing feeling that German Socialists might have done something more than to abstain from voting for the treaty ratifications, especially since they voted for the war credits immediately afterward.

Still more outspoken is the Vienna Arbeiter Zeitung, chief organ of the Austrian Socialists, which recently laid a large share of responsibility for the failure of the German strikes at the end of January to the attitude of the Socialist leaders in the Reichstag. Says the Arbeiter Zeitung:

> If the workmen are told day by day that the Reichstag is working for the most beautiful peace by understanding, and that the Government is acting according to the decision of the Reichstag majority, then the workman is scarcely being educated to take up the struggle against the Government. * * * A few Generals, a few influential bank directors and big manufacturers can, in given circumstances, influence policy more effectively than the whole Reichstag majority. Thus it can happen that a considerable part of the working classes decides upon a political strike against the Government which for three and a half years has enjoyed the support of the majority of working-class Deputies in the Reichstag.

These are harsh words for SCHEIDEMANN, and from close at hand. In his speech in the Reichstag on Jan. 25, to which wide publicity has been given because of his demand for complete restoration of Belgian independence, and his statement that even if France and England were conquered Germany would still have to fight America, he said: "The Russian revolution would have brought "us peace long ago if America had "not entered the war." But what kind of a peace? In this same speech SCHEIDEMANN demanded that the Government make peace with Russia, or get out before it was swept out. Peace was made, a peace which tore Russia into rags. SCHEIDEMANN abstained from voting for it; he said that the Socialists did not desire that sort of a peace with the Entente. But that is the sort of peace with the Entente that the Russian revolution would have brought, if it had brought any.

It is not so important, though it is still true, that SCHEIDEMANN clings to the talk of Germany fighting a defensive war, and that his insistence that a military decision is impossible is as disappointing to the peoples of the allied countries as to the Germans. What the European Socialists are beginning to see is that the German Generals and diplomats made with Russia the sort of peace that the German Socialist Party, with all its prestige and size, had said would not do; and that the German Socialist Party could not do anything about it but make some half-hearted protests, which were followed by support of the next war credit.

BISMARCK was a man who knew when and how to be defeated. He went to Canossa—the Vatican beat him in the Kulturkampf; but in this war there has been no protest from German Catholics against German violations of sacred edifices and outrages upon the personnel of the Church. BISMARCK had to yield something ultimately to socialism, but he got in return a Socialist party which is still voting money to the Government to carry on its "defensive" war on the Somme and the Black Sea. And only now does it begin to appear to the Socialists of neutral countries that perhaps that sort of Socialist Party is not going to be a very effective agent of the world-wide working-class revolution.

ANOTHER BOLSHEVIST FIASCO.

Through the roar and flames of the guns on the western front it is still possible to catch a glimpse of another fiasco in the eastern theatre of war, one which happened some time ago, but one of which definite information has thus far been withheld from the waiting and breathless multitudes of adventurous spirits in other lands who have been grappling with the horned dilemmas of the Russian alphabet. Long ago we heard rumors that the torch of revolution had swept over the alphabet with everything else in Russia and had singed off a few of the tentacles and wiggletails which made Russian letters dance before the eyes of foreign students of the language like so many goblins on crutches.

Just what did happen to the Russian alphabet in the revolutionary shuffle we now learn for the first time in a belated dispatch of The Associated Press. Three letters, after many centuries of use, have been summarily executed as superfluous. Only three letters. If that is all that happened, a chorus of groans, Dantesque in dolefulness, will undoubtedly arise out of that deep inferno where the struggling and remorseful students of Russian have been praying and praying for some upheaval that would leave that alphabet dismembered of at least a dozen or more letters.

In fact, it was generally agreed in all of the allied countries that the only possible good that could come out of the frenzied change-all-at-once reign of Bolshevism would be a sweeping and radical change of the Russian alphabet. But even there the Bolsheviki have failed to make good their reign of terror and justify their existence.

Only three letters, and those letters by no means the worst offenders in the alphabet! The feetah, which was a Greek letter and respectfully treated as such, appeared too seldom to cause much trouble; the yaht was so essentially and characteristically Russian that no one could mistake it for anything else, and the simple form of the e, like our small i, was much easier to grasp and remember than the double form, like our u, to which it has given exclusive sway. A very conservative change indeed, and one which will hardly offer much relief to the martyrs of the tongue who have been tortured to madness not so much by the letters now retired as by the letters which have been allowed to remain. Unless something is done to tttachs, a letter we reproduce as shtch—smashtchina, for instance; the ccchhhs, the jjjjs, and shhhhs, and the mischievous little hard and soft "znaks" which pretend to specify the value of preceding syllables by leaving that value mostly to instinct (or imagination, it is hard to believe that Russians and irritated students of Russian will ever agree on the oft repeated claim that "Russian is really the simplest of all languages to learn."

The political significance of the alteration of the alphabet is striking. The very moderation with which it was done indicates that the Mensheviki and not the Bolsheviki, were responsible for the change. Indeed, ample proof of that fact is contained in the last line of The Associated Press dispatch, which states that the "yaht has been a stumbling block "to many, not only to foreigners, but "even to the middle class Russian." The middle class Russian—in other words, the bourgeoisie. Apparently the yaht was removed to please the bourgeoisie, which necessarily means that the change must date back to some period, probably the Kerensky régime, when the bourgeoisie were last in a position where they could command any consideration for their tastes and their feelings in the matter. Certainly it may be taken for granted that if the Bolsheviki had had anything to do with revolutionizing the alphabet, the fact that the removal of the yaht would have been pleasing to the middle classes would have been enough to stamp such a procedure as "counter-revolutionary" and "hostile to the interests of the international proletariat." Consequently the yaht would have remained.

It follows, then, that the Bolsheviki have not as yet taken a whack at the alphabet. Their intentions in that direction, malicious or otherwise, were probably interrupted by the German jugglers of language at Brest-Litovsk, who were interested at the moment not so much in the modification of the Russian language as in the modification of Russian territory.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Surprising Light on the Kaiser. A new stick with which to beat the Kaiser has been found by The Medical Review of Reviews. To do that, nowadays, is no small achievement, and though any stick is good enough for the purpose, mere laymen will be apt to question the reality of this discovery—to suspect that the claimant to honor for high service doesn't himself believe that he has earned it, but has concocted a ponderous scientific joke for the amusement of the initiates who form the great majority of his readers. What he says, however, is interesting, and can pass for important if true.

And what he says is that in infancy the Kaiser was nursed by a Westphalian peasant woman, and that as a result his characteristics all through life have been strikingly plebeian—"of an essential vulgarity." Among his notable traits are listed an anachronistic form of piety, rare in other than the lower classes, and an exceedingly bourgeois attitude toward the modern aspirations of women—an attitude that led naturally to the formation of the well-known opinion that beyond "children, church, and cooking" women should not venture to look. Moreover, it is declared that the Westphalian peasant woman who supplied the imperial nursling's first needs has a son of her own who in several respects is curiously like the Kaiser—has the same square head and chin, the same intent look, and the same tone of easy familiarity in conversation of and with "the old German God."

To sum up, The Medical Review of Reviews asserts that the Kaiser "has never revealed any intellectual trait beyond cultivation by fortunately situated persons of the German peasant class" and that "he is before everything a poseur, without a single royal attribute." Just what are royal attributes is a matter of opinion. Some might think them dignity, wisdom, a noble generosity, and the like, while others might enumerate vanity, selfishness, ruthless ambition, and an insane delusion as to difference from and superiority to ordinary humanity. One doesn't get much forarder in that direction or also where this astonishing theory brings one out with respect to babies nourished by the milk of cows or goats.

A Chance for All to Enlist. It is not in itself an unimportant fact that 2,000 employes of the Lord & Taylor firm have formally organized, each to do, according to individual capacity and circumstances, all and everything that he or she can to make the country an effective ally of the other nations opposed to the Central Empires. Even more important is it, however, that these 2,000 men and women, under the leadership of S. W. REYBURN, President of this company, have set an example not only worthy of imitation by other firms, but one that should be imitated by everybody in the United States who for one good reason or another is not under obligation to undertake military service on land or water.

Those of us who cannot be fighters are not thereby freed from the duty, or deprived of the privilege, of helping, directly and personally, to win the war. As has often been said, this is a war of peoples, not of armies and navies only, and for every civilian there is a task to be found for the looking or the asking. Not to perform these tasks is to be a slacker, which is the same as a coward or a traitor and not much different from being both. For refusal or failure to do what one can is to help the enemy.

A long, carefully thought out list of the activities open to those who must stay at home is presented in what might be called the vow of patriotic dedication that has been formulated by and for the Lord & Taylor employés. Few indeed will be unable to find in that list as published an opportunity for effective personal service—service in its way and degree as valuable as that rendered by the men who carry rifles at the front, or from just behind them train the big guns on the would-be destroyers of civilization and liberty throughout the world.

It is well, and more than well, to lend money to the Government, especially when the lending involves something or much of sacrifice, but the buying of a sound security is not in itself a sacrifice. It is an investment, and to make it is not enough to constitute duty done for anybody. For everybody there is war work that demands doing—a use of time and strength and intelligence that will hasten, much or little, the day of victory—the triumph of the Good Cause.

Of Schools Bad and Good. There is a special compliment for THE TIMES in the fact that a Newark High School is using its dispatches from PHILIP GIBBS and its other able correspondents at the front as a means of giving the pupils daily instruction in the momentous events of these days. The selection thus made is a recognition pleasing to us not only of our effort to present in full and promptly the happenings of a conflict on the outcome of which the destiny of the world depends, but of our success in presenting them with vividness and feeling, in order that they may appeal, as they should, to the heart as well as to the mind—to the great mass of undifferentiated citizens of both sexes and all ages except infancy.

But it is not alone in making what we must think a wise choice for its vehicle of instruction that this Newark school deserves credit. In all too many schools all over the country discussion of the war, or even mention of it, in the presence of the pupils, is forbidden! That, in every case, is either despicable or treasonable. Its motive must either be a cowardly fear of offending some of the pupils or their parents by condemnation of German acts or policies, or else sympathy on the part of Principal or teacher with those acts or policies, and consequent refusal to condemn them.

The argument sometimes made that young minds should not be allowed to dwell on the so-called horrors of war, is the merest camouflage for one or the other of the reasons just mentioned. From time immemorial children have been allowed, or forced, to learn as much as they would or could of ancient wars. In their histories there is not much else, and, of all wars, this is the one which it behooves our children best to understand. As Mr. GIBBS himself once well wrote—seemingly in answer to some stupid critic who found his dispatches "shocking"—what men could do, and especially what they could endure, in the heroic performance of duty, that he could write and we at home could read and should.

He was quite right. People who "can't read about the war, it is so depressing," are not, as they would have us believe, of a superior sensitiveness. It is their cold callousness, their dull selfishness, their base ingratitude for services rendered by their betters that set them apart from common and decent humanity.

VOLUNTEER WAR NURSES.

Young Women Anxious to Serve—The Plan Successful in England.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I cannot help taking exception to the suggestion to draft our women to act as nurses at this time to relieve the supposed shortage of nurses, as it is evident by a misunderstanding of the minds and the wishes of thousands of young women who have been trying since we entered the war to get information, location, and instruction on this very subject, and it is because the various war agencies for nurses have showed scant courtesy, or interest, in these splendid women, who have been most anxious to qualify for work along this line, that I am offering a few suggestions gleaned from my personal experiences for the first two and a half years of the war in England.

There, as here, it was early found there were not enough graduate nurses to meet the demand, and they had no time to put nurses through two years' training. Instead, the British Medical Corps rules that these willing, educated girls, over 18, many of them daughters of peers, and the best families of England, should be taken into the hospitals as V. A.'s, meaning "volunteer aid," where these gentlewomen have done the meanest work in the hospitals, scrubbing, mending, and waiting on the trained nurses, until, in due time, after many days of drudgery, they have qualified by the thousands as trained nurses, and it is these women today, in England, and in British hospitals back of their lines, who are caring for the thousands of wounded of the last drive.

To be a V. A. in England ranks next to being a V. C. To wear a V. A. today is to wear an honor a little higher than most honors. These two honors in England have proved most potent in drawing together all classes abroad in a common person stronger than any that has moved the nation for a hundred years.

Ever since we came into the war I have been urging that our Government make a similar place for our young womanhood. I deem it little less than calumny to accuse our young women of slacking, as I have talked with hundreds of our college girls, from one end of the country to the other, who constantly ask me how they may best serve their country, where they may take the necessary instruction to qualify as nurses, and where they may work once they know what to do.

As early as last August I discussed this very subject in Washington with a Red Cross medical representative, and later in New York, at the Atlantic division, always to be told they could use only graduate nurses, and women over 25 years of age, while thousands upon thousands of our educated women under 25 wait in vain for suitable work to be assigned to them, and so I make protest, in their name, against the result of a draft suggestion, when all that is necessary is to give them a chance to do their bit; where they wish to work, lower the age limit, the years of probation, and cut the red tape that is hampering the patriotic wishes of our young women.

When one goes to a hospital for an operation, after the first three or four days, who is it cares for the patient, serves her food, cleans her room, and waits upon her through the long hours? Certainly not the graduate nurse, but the little probationer who has been there for six months or a year, and who is learning of you how to be a nurse. At least this has been my experience in two serious operations through which I have passed. So why not let our Government again learn that lesson from our allies, and place our young women above the age of 20 under trained nurses, two of them to each nurse, in the care of our wounded, both here and abroad, as we shall surely come to this very soon, if we repeat the losses England has suffered.

I well remember in those first days of the war, when France, Serbia, Russia, and Belgium pleaded with England for nurses, and when hundreds of these brave, fearless women crossed the Channel for various parts of the war zone and took up their duties under the most trying conditions, remaining there, many of them forever. And now that we are called upon to enter this conflict, and have sent our sons by the hundreds of thousands to those horror-stricken countries, shall not their sisters follow them and be permitted to care for them, as the Australian and Canadian women followed their loved ones, and are still doing, because they believe it their share in this conflict? I, for one, trust we shall not foolishly and prudishly hinder our women from sharing these duties with other English-speaking women wherever needed, but especially to care for our own men in our hospitals.

The Pacifist's Retreat.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The pacifist opposes sending our troops across the water, preferring to await the enemy on our own soil. Prefers again even to await the enemy's entrance upon the sacred soil of his own State, and when the doubly sacred soil of his own county or town is invaded would content himself with throwing up both hands with "Oh, well, what is the use of fighting now? It is wrong to fight any way."

A BAR TO PAN-GERMAN SCHEMES.

Armenians and Georgians of the Caucasus Can Fight the Invaders with the Aid of the British Now in Mesopotamia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The destruction of more than a million of innocent Armenians in the Turkish Empire during the last two years by the Turkish Government, dominated by Germany, is today a matter of history. The extermination of the whole Armenian race has been the fiendish ambition of the Young Turk gang dominated by Enver and Talat. The men had been massacred wholesale. The old men and women and children have been deported from their homes; a great majority of them have perished on the way to Mosul by hunger, disease, and torture, and now only a handful of people remain in Northern Arabia and Syria, who owe their lives to the relief given by Americans through the Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief.

A great tragedy has been enacted by the murderous Turk, in defiance of all the laws of God and man. Germany and Austria-Hungary, both signatory powers of the Berlin Treaty of 1878, which guaranteed the security of life and property of the Armenians in the Turkish Empire, the only two powers which were in position, as allies of the Turk, to fulfill their treaty obligations in safeguarding the lives of these innocent Armenians, and that just by saying the word, have kept a criminal silence and let Enver and Talat carry on their devilish intentions in regard to the Armenians unobstructed.

Never in the long history of even Turkish atrocities is to be found such a systematic, methodical, and thorough-going attempt at extermination of a whole race. It was evident from the beginning that the whole plan and its execution were more than the Turkish brain could have conceived. The Turks in general were shocked by it. Many of the officers themselves condemned it as German policy and politics. The participation very often of German officers in Turkey in the work of destruction of Armenian life and property and violation of Armenian women has tended to strengthen this conviction on the victims themselves that Germany was a party in the atrocities. The students of the Near Eastern question who are well acquainted with the German ambitions in that country have long been convinced that Germany was to be blamed directly for Armenian atrocities when she refused to interfere with the work of destruction of the Turkish Government when she could have stopped it at will. It has been evident from the beginning that it was part of Germany's war plan to do away with the democratic and liberty-loving Armenian people in Turkey, who were, so to speak, a stumbling block in the way of Germany in her ambition to control and exploit the Turkish Empire, and through the Berlin-to-Bagdad Railway threaten the Eastern possessions of Great Britain.

The Brest-Litovsk peace treaty made by Germany exposes her bloody hands to the world. It is no longer conjecture or a supposition, but it must be accepted as a matter of fact, that while the brutal work of the destruction of the Armenians was done by the hands of the unspeakable Turk, the voice which ordered it and the brain which planned it were those of Germany.

The Brest-Litovsk peace terms forced by Germany upon the Bolshevist leaders, by which Russia was forced to cede to the Turks the districts of Kars, Ardahan, and Batum, cannot be interpreted in any other way. This is the reward which the Turk receives at the hands of Germany for doing a clean job of massacring over a million Armenians in Asiatic Turkey. Now Hadji Wilhelm, the defender of Islam, the great victorious war lord, while visiting punishment upon his enemies, Russia and Rumania, remembers his bosom friend the Turk by handing over to him the Caucasus, saying, "Come, thou good and faithful servant. Thou hast been faithful in destroying the life and property of Christian Armenians in Turkish Armenia; now I make thee ruler over Russian Armenia to extend your rule of massacre and plunder over there also. Thou hast been faithful over small areas, I'll make thee ruler over all Armenia. Enter into thy reward." Is there anything more disgraceful in all the annals of human history than this most treacherous act of war-mad, Kaiser-made Germany?

It may be asked, "Why is it that Germany is so much interested in the extermination of the Armenian people?" For a very obvious reason, which only needs to be stated in order to be understood. This world war is being waged by Germany, primarily, to secure for all time the undisputed control of the territory that lies between the Bosporus and the Persian Gulf for the purpose of German colonization and exploitation of the rich natural resources of Asia Minor, and through the Berlin-Bagdad Railway to strike a deadly blow at the Eastern possessions of Great Britain. The indolent and ignorant Turk was an easy mark for German intrigues and quite willing to become a vassal of Germany for all time, but the intelligent, liberty-loving, and democratic Armenian people, who have been imbibing for a century American ideas of liberty and democracy through the missionaries and American educational institutions, were too much for the Kaiser. The Armenians, in one word, were the stumbling block in the way of German ambitions of colonization and conquest in the Near East, so they had to be trampled down and crushed, and, if need be, exterminated, to make way for German ambitions. This explains the sad plight of the Armenians in the Turkish Empire.

Germany, however, has been cut off from the route to India by way of the Berlin-Bagdad line, thanks to English military successes in Mesopotamia, Egypt, and Palestine, but the collapse of Russia and the occupation by Germany of the Ukraine, with the capture of the important Black Sea port of Odessa, have opened a new path before Germany to threaten and invade India. This is the road of Berlin-Batum-Baku-Bombay line. Again, as fate would have it, the Armenians of Trans-Caucasian provinces are in the way of the accomplishment of German intentions. Therefore the logic of the Brest-Litovsk peace terms, forcing the Bolshevist rulers of Russia to turn over to the Turk the districts of Batum, Kars, and Ardahan in the Caucasus, so that the Turk might make a clean job in clearing the way for Germany. All this in the name of the high-sounding principle of self-determination.

This is the greatest insult offered by Germany to the intelligence of the world. Could any sane man believe that 2,000,000 Armenians in the Russian Caucasus, if they had to choose, would for a moment entertain any such idea as subjecting themselves to the miracle of the murderous Turkish Government? We need not speak here of the cowardly and contemptible act of the Bolshevist leaders who, while preaching high moral principles, have bought peace for themselves at the expense and with the blood of the Armenians and Georgians in the Caucasus, for they have been traitors no less to their own country and nothing better could be expected of them.

Fortunately, the Armenians of Russia, unlike the Armenians in Turkey, are well situated to express their own wish and will and to determine their own political destiny by their own sword. The Georgians and the Armenians of the Trans-Caucasian district have already joined their forces and have mobilized their men to fight to the finish against the invasion of the murderous Turk. Daily papers have already reported the stiff defense these people are putting up. Let us hope that the Allies will recognize the Republic of the Caucasus and make every endeavor to give such assistance as might be practical. The armies of England from Mesopotamia and Palestine might render a great service by a hard blow at the Turkish Army from the rear. The Armenians, who have been the torch bearers of Christian civilization in Asia and the advance guards of Western ideals of liberty and democracy, deserve the sympathy and support of the people and the Government of this great Republic. In this war no nation has suffered and sacrificed more than the Armenians. Their martyrdom and heroism will remain a treasure of all Christendom. Armenia is fighting the battle of humanity. The late William Gladstone never spoke a truer word than when he said, "To help Armenia is to help humanity."

More News of Our Forces.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was glad to see your good editorial article in your issue of April 4 regarding the order suspending the publication of the daily casualty lists in France, which to the layman certainly seems inexplicable and without reason; and also the practice of keeping from the public the location of American units on the battle line. The names of celebrated regiments of the Allies, and also of the Germans, often appear as being located on certain fronts and participating in the great struggle. The Germans doubtless have ample facilities for ascertaining what particular units are facing them, and the information cannot be of any important advantage, as the Americans have at present no regiments of special recent fighting renown, though some gained fame in our liberty war of the 60s.

In yesterday's Connecticut papers was printed for the first time a casualty list of forty-two members of a Connecticut regiment, probably the result, it is stated, of a German raid in the American sector at Toul March 17, the families being notified by telegraph only the night before. This is a long time between the acts for those concerned to be kept in ignorance.

Like many others, the writer has two sons in the service, one an officer of engineers on the French front, and the other with the Naval Reserve forces in French waters combating the submarines, and shares the general concern and anxiety as to the whereabouts and welfare of the American boys.

It is earnestly hoped that the Government will take the American people into its confidence, and inspire them with further efforts.

More Room for Coal Storage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The coal famine of the Winter just closed is due more to the owners of dwellings and buildings and to the architects thereof than to the miners, transportation companies, and handlers of coal. To save renting space in all classes of buildings the storage capacity for coal is in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred not sufficient for one-half of the Winter's consumption. I know of a business building, size 100x100, eight stories high, annual consumption about 200 tons, where the coal storage is for only ten tons. Again, I know of a church where the consumption is about the same as above where the coal storage is for eight tons. In private houses I have for many years put in the cellar from twenty to twenty-five tons of coal on the first prices of the year. Owners of buildings and architects should be compelled to furnish sufficient coal capacity for at least one-half of the annual consumption.

The Times in Chicago.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am prompted voluntarily to express to you my constant appreciation of THE NEW YORK TIMES, which is so far above the standards of efficiency of any other paper in supplying the real, worthwhile news of the day that even after reading all the Chicago newspapers daily I find I am not up to date until I have received THE NEW YORK TIMES and digested its contents two days later. The marked contrast is that your publication gives me the news of the world in which I am vitally interested, rather than the local news which seems to satisfy publishers of the average newspaper.

For instance, the copy of the House bill of Congress authorizing the third Liberty Loan was not available in Washington until April 2. Various officials of the Federal Reserve Bank, Chicago, and the Executive Department of the Liberty Loan Committee of Chicago (Seventh Federal Reserve District) were also anxiously awaiting information regarding the proposed Congressional act. It was not until April 2, when I received THE NEW YORK TIMES of March 30 containing a full copy of the act, that I was able to use it in supplying the desired information to them.

At 5 o'clock tonight the Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank asked me if I had a copy of the act and I was glad to send him the above clipping of THE TIMES of March 30. Either the Treasury Department is hopelessly unable properly to serve the Federal banks or a 2-cent investment in THE TIMES beats every other service known to Chicago.

The Collinsville Lynching.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Every good citizen must regret and condemn the recent acts of mob violence in the South and West.

Nevertheless, these without doubt are the direct result of our namby-pamby policy of dealing with spies and traitors.

So far as any one can learn, of the hundreds of these vermin that have been taken not one has been shot or hanged. Is it any wonder, then, that misguided mobs resort to violence?

War, like charity, should begin at home, and the sooner we start it over here the sooner we shall be in a position to help end it "over there."

If to do this means that we must put the nation under martial law, then let us do that thing—not next month or next year, but now!

SONG—1918.

Blow, wind, blow,
From the mountains or the sea,
And banish the mist that veils my eyes—
Send back my dreams to me!

Sing, wind, sing,
Till I only hear your song,
And never a sound of the battle roar
Through the night so long, so long.

Blow, wind, blow,
And bear my kisses far
To a lad who is sleeping deep and still Under a blazing star.

FRANCE PICTURED AS HUGE WAR CAMP

BATTLEFIELD LIKE A DESERT

Picardy So Torn by Armies That It May Never Be Fit for the Plow Again.

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, March 22.—The first thing that impresses the stranger on his arrival in France is that war is the chief and only business of the nation. This impression comes when the steamship arrives along the solid stone quay, lined with khaki or light blue uniformed soldiers, and never ceases throughout France, from the Channel coast to the sun-kissed shores of the blue Mediterranean.

Before this war began Port Said, at the western end of the Suez Canal, was looked upon as the most cosmopolitan town in the world. Today its record has been completely eclipsed by the grand old Channel port where from 15,000 to 20,000 soldiers pass through daily on their way to or from the front.

Two days ago I stood in the square by the cathedral for two hours and watched the hundreds of soldiers from the East and West pass by. The babel which strikes the ear includes almost every known tongue and dialect from Whitechapel to Manchuria.

There were stolidly built English soldiers bronzed by the sun and hardened by the cold wind and rain in the Ypres shell holes, kilted Scotchmen with square, hard jaws and red, strong-boned knees; bright-eyed Irish lads with their hats on one side winked at the French shop girls; tall sinewy Australians with their surging gait and hats looped up after the manner of King Charles's Cavaliers.

I saw the Lancers from the northwest of India, infantrymen from Rajpootana, and the active Ghoorkas from the foot of the Himalayas.

In the middle of a group of Manchurians, Tonkinese, Algerians, and Moroccans with their yellow fezes the well-set-up figure of a young American soldier could be seen. He was trying to make himself understood among his polyglot surroundings. Canadians, New Zealanders, negroes from the Congo South Africa, New Guinea, and Madagascar swarm through the streets. Italian, Russian, Serbian, and Portuguese soldiers are among those who have come to France to make war against the Germans.

During my six weeks' tour of the British, French, and American fronts and the lines of communication, I traveled hundreds of miles by automobile, hand cars, and railroad trains. From Nevers, the central city of France, to the Channel ports, apart from Paris itself, I saw no signs of commercial life of any kind on the road. Troops marching in many directions; lines of lorries filled with provisions, stores, and forage, and farm carts heaped with wood for the camp fires and kitchens were the principal vehicles that one met hastening through the country. Sometimes an automobile going at fifty miles an hour with the General Staff flag affixed to the glass wind shield, would whizz by after the military chauffeur had made the welkin ring with his toots on the powerful horn in an effort to make the lumbering French wagons move out of the way.

Impressed by Australians.

The roads through the towns and villages are packed with lorries and camouflaged guns mounted on carriages ready for a call to meet an enemy attack. Sometimes we found lines of motor buses which formerly carried passengers in London or Paris, all boarded up and waiting in a woody road for an emergency.

The finest spectacle I saw was a division of Australian artillery and cavalry moving along a winding country road somewhere between Arras and the coast. The sunshine reflected on the highly polished accoutrements of the men and the harness of the horses. The Anzacs have been in France for two years and look as fresh as if they had just landed, and the Colonials with their great stature mounted on the spirited Australian horses formed a picture that one would not easily forget.

Marshal Joffre, in speaking of the Australians, said to me the other day at his bureau in Paris:

"I always look at the Australians when I see them on the march and admire their muscular proportions. They have borne themselves courageously in the big war."

At different points the officers of the Royal Naval Air Service in their neat blue uniforms were met with on the way to the aviation fields, from which they make nightly raids on Germany.

Apart from men of war, I saw thousands of men and women working in the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., and numerous other humanitarian organizations which have helped the British Tommy to endure the hardships of the campaign.

Some months ago the French were so much impressed with what the Y. M. C. A. huts were doing for the Tommy when he came out of the trenches that they petitioned the General Staff of the army to have a similar organization to minister to their comfort. Now the French soldiers have 400 huts at the front, and more are being erected, which are all under British and American management.

Battlefield a Vast Waste.

The Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick of the Union Theological Seminary of New York City was with me on the trip along the British front, and was greatly impressed with what he saw of the organization and spirit of the officers and men. He said:

"I wish that every American could share the effect produced by this extraordinary trip along the British front. For one thing it would make our people understand the immense sacrifices which our allies have borne and are bearing. I have seen battlefields churned as far as the eye could reach into a shapeless mass, with every trace of dozens of villages gone, save a few charred timbers on heaps of débris. The havoc is so complete that even the birds never return, and the Government must set the land to forest because it cannot be plowed. It is worse to walk through towns that the Germans have deliberately blown to pieces, with not a house left standing and no one living there except those who, like gophers, burrow underground. And the visitor finds all this with the human agony that is represented in it borne with a fortitude and cheer that are almost incredible.

"For another thing, the American comes away with a vivid admiration for the British and their army. The organization of the immense business behind the lines is superb. As for the spirit of the men, it is like that of a bulldog, which has clinched his grip and is too busy even to growl. But most profoundly one comes back impressed with the need of American help. These people who have borne so much and are fighting so hard are counting on America with almost pathetic eagerness. They are banking on our immediate decisive help. We must not fail them. Leagued with allies of such spirit, we not only can win this war but afterward can combine to make the world a far more decent and fraternal place for the race to live in."

Among other places visited by Mr. Fosdick and myself was Bapaume, which has just been recaptured by the Germans. It had been completely wrecked during the fighting in 1916, and the Germans blew up all the buildings before they evacuated the town. There was nothing but ruins left of the cathedral and town hall, and the only inhabitants were the British Tommies who lived in the cellars, which they had fortified and converted into dugouts.

The monuments erected in the cemetery by the German troops to the officers and men who had fallen in the siege were afterward shot to pieces by their own artillery and lay scattered over the graves.

COMMEMORATE OUR FIRST YEAR OF WAR

APPEAL BY PREACHERS

Bishop Lawrence in Letter Says Church Is Consecrated to the President's Ideal.

A service commemorative of the entry of the United States into the world war was held in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine yesterday morning. The Very Rev. Howard C. Robbins, Dean of the Cathedral, conducted the services and delivered the sermon. Every seat was occupied long before the ceremonies began. "God Save America" and the "Star-Spangled Banner" were sung following the offertory anthem.

Dean Robbins read a letter from Bishop William Lawrence of Massachusetts, Chairman of the War Religious Commission, addressed to the clergy and laity. It reported that since the campaign to provide religious care for the troops in the field had begun, including the offering of Jan. 27, about $600,000 had been contributed.

The letter also said that now the Church was following the boys overseas chaplains have been provided, and the soldiers know their church, of whatever denomination, is in behind them. It referred to the announced purposes of America in the war, as set forth by the President, and said the Church had consecrated itself to this ideal.

The letter disclosed three ways in which loyal Christians can help the work along. The first was to buy the new Liberty bonds to the extent of personal sacrifice. The Government needs every dollar possible and it is the duty of Christians who cannot do anything else. To sustain and support the Government with their purses. Then it is their duty to help by obeying the food conservation regulations. Thus much may be accomplished in upholding the courage and morale of the boys fighting to save the world for right and freedom. The third and last method, the letter said, was to give wholehearted obedience and support to every end of every kind that the Nation may make on its people.

Dean Robbins reminded his hearers that the service commemorating the first year of the entry of the United States in the war was a service of dedication of body and soul to the ideals the country is striving for. One year ago the Nation took its place beside those other Nations that had been fighting long and steadfastly to decide on what the world shall be in the future.

"This decision," said the Dean, "was not made hastily or impulsively. It was made calmly and deliberately. It was made only after braving all things, bearing all things, enduring all things, until nothing was left but war.

"The decision had brought immediate gain. It had unionized the nation as nothing else could have united it. The war had brought the whole people to one mind. Labor had never been so eager in support of the country as now. Labor troubles, such as have been known, would have been almost fatal.

"Germany had made it plain," said the Dean, "that only one action could be effective in war—the action of force. She had made it plain that only by meeting force with greater force can she be prevented from imposing her domination, her rule, on the world, to the extinguishment of right, justice, and freedom. The Allies had long waited the coming of America. They knew it must come in the end, and when it did come, one year ago, they were eager to welcome the great western republic."

Dean Robbins said that the urgency today is greater than it was a year ago. The Allies, against great odds and under a mighty strain, still held fast that unbroken line. "It is America's task now to help them keep it and ultimately break through the other way. They are war-worn, unutterably weary, but still steadfast and defiant. America is fresh, ready to go in, backed by unlimited resources in men and material. America must give, give, give, that the end may be secure. The hope of the world, the hope for freedom, the hope for right lies with America today. It is the duty as well as privilege of America to make good use of this duty."

READ POETRY ON WAR.

Church Audience Hears Authors—Dawson Praises Present Standards.

Speaking at a meeting held yesterday afternoon at St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Second Avenue and Eleventh Street, to give several American poets an opportunity to read poems that they had written on the war, Miles M. Dawson, who acted as Chairman, said that while the poetry written on the present war did not equal the grandeur of our ideals in regard to it, it was immeasurably superior to that written during the Revolution or the civil war.

Among the poets who read were Berton Braley, Amelia Josephine Burr, Margaret Widdemer, Marguerite Wilkinson, and Mrs. Aileen Kilmer. Mr. Braley also read a poem written by Joyce Kilmer, written in Europe where he is now serving as a private in the Rainbow Division.

"They shall not pass!" In dugout and in trench
The phrase was mottoed as the poilus fought.
The earth and sky were but a shambles, fraught
With gas and bursting shells and with the drench
Of shrapnel. Yet, in all the battle-stench,
'Mid horror heaped on horror past all thought
The thin line stood. A miracle was wrought;
They could not break the Will that held the French.

Each human soul must meet its own Verdun,
That crisis when the armies of despair
Attack the fortress in a serried mass;
Not by brute strength may this great fight be won,
But only by the Will that can declare
In face of all Hell's hosts, "They shall not pass!"

SEES GOD'S HAND IN WAR.

Bishop Cooke Says Struggle Is to Vindicate Almighty's Power.

Bishop Richard J. Cooke of Helena, Mont., who enlivened the annual session of the Newark M. E. Conference yesterday with an attack on pacifists and disloyal aliens, again stirred the conference today when he said the real reason for the world war was to vindicate God Almighty against the brutal philosophy of damned men. The Bishop declared God wants to let the world know that he still remains supreme in power.

The Bishop criticised those who live only for the worldly and material things, and condemned the theory that this world is a place where only the fittest can survive. He said this theory was brought from the jungle by Darwin and his theory on the descent of man.

OLD, BUT BRITISHER ENLISTS

His hair was gone on top and gray on the sides. He fidgeted uncomfortably during most of a talk by Lieut. Col. F. Frazer Hunter, D. S. O., of the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission last night in the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre. He cheered when a woman in the gallery shrieked, "Shoot the Germans!" and when Colonel Hunter declared there wasn't a man—emphasizing the last word—in the audience who wouldn't be in France if he could, he seemed almost unable to keep his chair.

At last Colonel Hunter reached the end of his talk about the feats of British arms in many parts of the world and asked for volunteers to serve under the British colors.

"Young or old, come shake my hand," he urged, "and we'll find some sort of duty for you."

Half a dozen youths scrambled toward the stage at that and the elderly man, moving slowly all by himself, followed them to the corner of the footlights, from which they sprang "over the top" to the stage. Unconscious of the eyes upon him, he surveyed the jump and shook his head. Then slowly he worked his way through an entire row of spectators until he reached the middle aisle.

By the time he had reached the steps and clambered to the stage, the others had been grasped by the hand, the recruiting seemed to be over and everyone wondered just what he was going to do. Colonel Hunter looked at him curiously. The old man straightened and raised his hand to a salute that told plainer than words that he had seen service long before. And just then the audience "got it." The old fellow was volunteering!

By and by the noise died away, the man's name was registered along with the others and Lieutenant Gordon Sherris of the Black Watch, succeeding Colonel Hunter, explained British official moving pictures of the war.

Colonel Hunter said last night that though the western front was engaging the world's attention the Germans were not neglecting other attempts to find the shortest way to Paris, even if it was the "longest way around," and he emphasized the importance of a dozen different British campaigns, asserting that more than a majority of British soldiers today are engaged on other than the western front. In India alone, he said, there had been a dozen battles which would have rung around the world if it hadn't been "for the sideshow in France." Telling of the fighting in other parts of the world, he said that at one time but two officers in the whole of his own regiment were left alive.

SAYS THIEF LOST MONEY.

Ex-Warden Osborne Tells of Failure of Deal with Police Chief.

Ex-Warden Osborne of Sing Sing, now with the naval prison at Portsmouth, told the Free Synagogue congregation in Carnegie Hall yesterday that he knew of a Chief of Police of a principal city in New York State who wrote recently to a notorious pickpocket with his own hand and signing his own name, telling him financial times in his city were good, the people have money, and proposing that the thief come on and enjoy the free run of the city, paying the chief $200 a week. The pickpocket accepted, but Osborne said he found it didn't pay. Mr. Osborne had much to say about New York local and State conditions. Speaking of the local conditions he said:

"If the men in this city's administration go to Heaven when they die, give me for mine hell with a fourteen-karat smile on my face."

Mr. Osborne told of receiving recently at Portsmouth as a prisoner a lad who had stayed beyond his furlough with his widowed mother. The local authorities heard of his case, locked him in the village jail, kept him beyond the ten-day limit, returned him and got the $50 reward. The lad is now serving a year in jail, but Osborne said he purposed to get him reinstated before the year is up, and already has the ear of Secretary Daniels for his case. The Portsmouth plan under Osborne is to send men back into the service after they have served their terms, not to discharge in disgrace as formerly, and Osborne said he is now working to change public opinion, and especially opinion among enlisted men in the navy, to treat the returned men fairly and not as criminals.

Yvette Guilbert Closes Season.

Sings Scandinavian Music.

Mrs. Staberg Hall, an experienced singer of Scandinavian music, appeared at the Princess Theatre yesterday afternoon in a program of many composers from the northern lands of Grieg and Ole Bull. The entertainment was as unusual as the languages, Norse, Swedish, and Danish, were rare on the local concert stage.

ROOSEVELT AIDS RECRUITING

Colonel Says He Envies Men Who Have Chance to Enlist.

"It will be a mighty sight pleasanter hereafter for the young men of today to explain why they did go into the army instead of how they stayed out of the army," wrote Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in a letter received yesterday by the recruiting detail at 721 Fifth Avenue, sent here to get several thousand volunteer soldiers to fill up vacancies in the ranks of some units in the Twenty-seventh Division, U. S. A., "New York's Own Division" at Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C.

Referring to the men of the 27th Division as veterans, whose prospect of soon getting to the front was a cause of "envy" to himself because he could not go, Colonel Roosevelt wrote:

"I like what you say about the fact that 90 per cent. of the officers in the division have risen from the ranks, and that Major Gen. O'Ryan himself began his service as a private in one of the regiments now under him. This represents true American spirit, and when we get our universal service every officer in the army and the navy will have served a year as an enlisted man before he is eligible for appointment as an officer.

"Every effort is now being made to hurry our army divisions across the ocean. I am proud beyond measure that all my kinsfolk of military age are at the front with the forces—sons, sons-in-law, nephews, cousins.

"This is the greatest war in history. America must do her full duty in it. I envy every young man physically fit and all above or below the draft age who now have the chance to join your division, and unless he is conclusively able to show good reasons why he does not do so he will have a whole lot to explain to his children in the future unless he comes in."

Capt. Tristram Tupper, in charge of the recruiting here, said 400 men had been enlisted since the drive commenced, and there are now needed about 2,000 more enlistments to complete the division. These vacancies resulted largely from transfer of men to special services overseas, to promotions and to reorganization of units.

A company of soldier-actors from the 27th Division will bring their own musical comedy, "You Know Me, Al," to New York, opening on Thursday at the Lexington Theatre, to raise $15,000 for building a portable theatre to take with the division to France, it was announced by Captain Tupper.

There are fifty men in the cast, and with them will come a brass band of forty-five men. It will cost $5,000 to get the scenery and company here. At the conclusion of the show here one performance will take place at the Belasco Theatre, Washington.

GIANTS ALLOW ONLY THREE CLEVELAND PLAYERS TO REACH FIRST IN HOUSTON GAME

INDIANS GET ONLY ONE HIT OFF GIANTS

FLETCHER HAS BUSY DAY

Shortstop Drives in Three Runs and Carries One Across Himself in Game.

Special to The New York Times.

HOUSTON, Texas, April 7.—The Giants made a strong come-back in the second game of their series with the Cleveland Americans here today. The New York National League champions winning with yards to spare by a score of 6 to 0.

The Indians were a feeble outfit today compared with the dashing band which humbled the Giants in Dallas. They gathered in only one hit, and this blow was canceled when Lew McCarty threw out Marty Kavanaugh trying to steal second base. The Clevelanders got only three men on base.

Jesse Barnes, the pitcher whom the Braves are trying to recall, and Jeff Tesreau were the Giant boxmen who completely befuddled the Indians. Barnes allowed only one hit in his five innings, while in Tesreau's four innings he permitted no hits, but issued two bases on balls.

The Giant offense looked much better. Long Bob Groom, the former Washington and St. Louis Brown pitcher, was bumped hard in the early innings. Long Bob, however, stuck to his tape for the entire nine sessions and closed strong, allowing only one hit in the last three innings.

Gus Getz, a former Newark player, gave the Giants quite a lift around third base in the second inning, and New York got off to a lead of two runs. Getz muffed Zimmerman's fly, and Heine scored on Fletcher's double.

In the second inning the Giants rolled up four more runs and practically ended the game. Barnes walked and scored on Young's long double. A pass to Burns, and Groom's fumble on Zimmerman, filled the bases. Doyle's single drove in Young, but Sneaker nailed Burns at the plate. Fletcher then drove out a single, sending in Zimmerman and Doyle. Fletcher wielded the big bat of the game, driving in three runs and scoring a fourth.

McGraw does not take seriously the report that Herzog will rejoin the Giants, and says the New York Club will put up a fight to retain Doyle and Barnes.

T. R. INDORSES SUNDAY BALL

"Gives Wage Earner a Right Which He Should Have," Says Roosevelt.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt yesterday indorsed the Lawson bill, which would legalize Sunday baseball in this State, according to a statement issued last night by Judge Francis X. McQuade, an advocate of the bill, on his return from a trip to Oyster Bay.

Judge McQuade called on the former President to explain the provisions of the measure which was recently passed by the Senate, and will soon come before the Assembly. At the close of the interview, the Colonel was quoted by Judge McQuade as saying:

"I am very much gratified to know that my nephew, Senator Ted Robinson, had the wisdom to vote for the Sunday Baseball bill. It has my hearty approval, because it gives to the wage earner a right which he justly should have."

CARPENTIER HURT IN FALL.

PARIS, April 7.—Georges Carpentier, the French heavyweight pugilist, says that he has finally given up all thought of going to the United States to box and that he will devote the time during the period of his convalescence to teaching physical culture and boxing at the Normal Gymnastic School in Joinville.

Carpentier said today that he hoped that he eventually would be able to return to his aviation work when he was entirely recovered from the injuries to his head received in a fall of an airplane.

This is the first intimation that Carpentier, a skilful French pugilist, who has been for a long time in the French aviation service, had been injured.

BRAVES EASY FOR YANKEES.

Huggins's New Fighting Team Too Much for Boston.

Special to The New York Times.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., April 7.—The seventh game of the Yankee-Braves series will be played here tomorrow. Said one of the Yanks today: "I hope the Braves show some fight before the series is over. So far they have been so easy it has not even been good fun."

The series stands six games to none in favor of the Yankees, with five more to play, so the New Yorkers have it won already. The Yankees have done excellent work, though the Braves are presenting a much weaker front than a real big league team should. Almost any big league team could make mincemeat of the Braves the way they are playing at present.

Boston needs Hersog and needs him badly, though the club and Hersog are as far apart as ever. Hersog has gone home to Ridgely, Md. Yesterday he received a telegram from P. B. Haughton from Boston sent collect, and which read: "Boston club will give you $3,000 bonus and assume your New York contract provided you will not bring suit against the New York club or the Pennsylvania Railroad during this season."

Hersog declared the telegram was not satisfactory, that there was no mention of next year's contract, and that if the Boston club desired to converse with him further it would have to send a representative to Ridgely to see him.

The fine pitching of Slim Love has been a feature of the one-sided New York-Boston series to date. Love on his two starts has had the Braves helpless, and has shown a better curve ball, a better mixture, better motion and batter fight than ever before.

Scuffy Huggins's cutthroat appears to have helped Love immensely. The other young pitchers were wobbly early in the week but are steadier now. The team's fielding has been sharp and steady on such fields where it was possible to do any fielding, and in batting Frank Baker tops them all with averags of .850, Pratt .405, Ruel .400, and Hannah .429. Vick as a pinch hitter has hit .400, and other averages are as follows: Gilhooley, .190; Miller .200; Ward, .222; Pipp, .250, and Walters, .200. Walters went to New York tonight to nurse his maimed thumb.

Hickman's Triple Decides Game in Thirteenth Inning.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 7.—The Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Red Sox went into extra innings again today in a hotly contested game, Brooklyn winning in the thirteenth inning by a score of 4 to 3. Jimmie Hickman opened the final frame with a triple over Smith's head in left field, and was sent home with the winning run on a single by Clarence Mitchell.

The game provoked considerable bitterness during the last four innings. For the first time in the series the players began to dispute the decisions of Umpires Klem and Hart and to hurl remarks at each other. The game was stopped for five minutes while the players gathered around Hart to dispute a decision on Schang in the ninth inning.

Brooklyn should have won the game in nine innings. Rube Marquard shut out Boston for the six innings he worked and was never in danger of being scored on. Al Mamaux replaced him in the seventh and was wild at the start. In this inning Boston made three runs and took the lead, only to be tied up in the ninth. When Mamaux had passed through his bad inning he pitched the best ball he has shown this Spring, and his exhibition was highly pleasing to Manager Robinson. Burleigh Grimes took the mound in the tenth and also pitched cleverly.

Brooklyn scored in the third inning when Marquard, Olson, O'Mara, and Daubert hit safely, sending in two runs. Babe Ruth, pitched nine innings for Boston and was hit quite hard. Bush finished the game.

MOBILE, Ala., April 7.—A home run hit over the right field fence by Mobile's second baseman, Tutwiler, won the game against a team made up of purple Boston Red Sox and Brooklyn National players here today.

The score:

Boston-Brooklyn	0	7	0

BOXING LICENSE SOUGHT.

Application Will Be Made Tomorrow for Club in Jersey City.

The first application for a boxing club license in New Jersey will be made tomorrow at the meeting of the newly appointed Boxing Commission at the State House in Trenton. Thomas B. Murtaugh will seek permission to conduct eight-round contests under the new Hurley law at an organization to be known as the Murtaugh Boxing Club of Jersey City.

Murtaugh is planning to hold his opening show within the next three weeks, and is negotiating for a bout between Frankie Burns, the New Jersey veteran bantamweight, and Kid Williams, former champion. The prospective promoter has an option on two sites, each having a seating capacity of 2,000.

Makes Hole in One at Pinehurst.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 7.—Ernest Ryell, the golf professional, made a hole in one in the course of an amateur-professional match at Pinehurst today. It came on the ninth hole of the championship course. The distance is 140 yards. This is the third hole made in one here this season.

FEHER LEADS FIELD IN HANDICAP CHASE

Alexander Feher carried the colors of the Hungarian-American A. C. to victory yesterday in the Inter-Settlement Athletic League five-mile handicap road race over the Glencoe A. C.'s course. The race resulted in a spectacular finish. At the line the Hungarian-American Club athlete's margin of victory was scarcely three yards over Harry Brown, who carried the emblem of the Harbrook A. C. Feher started with a handicap of 1:45 and covered the course in 30:28 actual time. Harry Parkinson of the Morningside A. C. was third, one-fifth of a second behind Brown.

Faher ran an excellent race from start to finish. A hundred yards from home he summoned all his reserve stamina and swept past Brown and Parkinson, who up to then had been battling for premier honors.

L. Kaufman of the Brooklyn A. A. started from scratch and won the fast-time prize. His actual time was 30:18. He finished in thirty-third positon. Feher, in winning, covered the course ten seconds slower than Kaufman.

PLAN SHERIDAN MEMORIAL.

Monument Will Be Erected to Late Athletic Champion.

A monument in the shape of a Celtic cross will mark the grave in Calvary Cemetery of the late Martin J. Sheridan, former Olympic and national champion athlete. This was definitely decided yesterday at a meeting of the committee in charge of the Sheridan Memorial Fund. Among the committee members present were P. J. Conway, President of the Irish-American A. C., to which Sheridan was attached for seventeen years; Patrick V. Kyne, and John J. McHugh.

Initial steps toward the construction of other memorials to perpetuate the memory of the late athlete were tentatively decided upon.

A motion to provide a hospital endowment was made by J. T. Ryan of the Executive Committee in charge of the memorial fund. He was appointed Chairman of a sub-committee to investigate and report the cost of such an institution and to consult with some of the local hospitals with the view to determining where the endowment would be made.

It was brought out at the meeting that Frederick W. Rubien, President of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U., has practically consented to award the association's annual junior outdoor championship athletic meet to the Irish-American A. C., to be held at Celtic Park, for the purpose of raising additional funds for the memorial. The event will be held Decoration Day, May 30. A motion was also made that a statue of Sheridan throwing the discus be erected in the national stadium which will be constructed in Washington within a short time.

SPEARS RIDES TO VICTORY.

Takes Five-Mile Open Bicycle Race at Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., April 7.—Bob Spears, who rode so well in the opening bicycle meet of the season at the Velodrome last Sunday, continued triumphant today, winning the five-mile open race and finishing third in the Port Newark Handicap, at one mile, riding from scratch. In winning the five-mile race Spears had to ride around Willie Spencer and Alf Grenda, three high on the bank, but was equal to it, and won by a length.

In the handicap race it looked like a hopeless task for the back markers to catch the limit men, but Spears in finishing third was only a length behind George Chapman, who won the race with a 125-yard handicap. Tommy Smith, who had an allowance of 120 yards, finished second.

STEEL MEN WIN AT SOCCER.

Bethlehem Team Defeats Scots by a Single Goal.

Bethlehem's appearance on a Newark gridiron yesterday attracted a crowd of 3,000 football anthusiasts to Clark's Athletic Field, where the famous steelmakers won a hard-earned victory over the Scottish-Americans by the score of 1 goal to 0 in a National League championship match.

The American Association champions thereby increased their total of points to 17, retaining the lead in the competition. The Scots, who had lost a previous soccer encounter in Bethlehem by 12 to 0, were at top form yesterday and baffled the visitors until ten minutes from half time, when fast combination play between Kirkpatrick, Pepper and Murphy gave Reticen centre a chance to net the ball.

Bethlehem forced the fighting in the second half, but, on account of the fine defense of Ward in goal, did not score again. Cunningham was conspicuous at right halfback for the way in which he kept Fleming, Bethlehem's left wing, in check.

The lineup:

Bethlehem, (1.)	Position.	Scottish-Am., (0.)
Duncan	G.	Ward
Fletcher	R. B.	Twaman
Ferguson	L. B.	Feat
Murray	R. H.	Cunningham
Campbell	C. H.	Rogers
Kirkpatrick	L. H.	Monteith
Murphy	O. R.	Parfar
Pepper	I. R.	Nell
Reticen	C.	Hogan
Easton	C. L.	Eadie
Fleming	O. L.	Coe

Goal—Reticen, Bethlehem. Time—Halves at 45 minutes. Referee—C. Ward, Passaic A. C. Linesmen—J. Morrison and T. Adamson.

The West Hudsons, who will meet the Fall River Rovers in the Eastern semi-final of the U. S. F. A. Cup competition next Saturday, were treated to a surprise by the Jersey A. C. in their National League game at Clark's Athletic Feld. The final score was a tie at 3—3.

The La Sultana soccer team obtained the verdict by 2 goals to 0 against the Longfellows, of Brooklyn, in the second round of the Southern New York Football Association's Cup tie series at Astoria. Scott was the first to penetrate the Longfellows' goal and Shaw notched the second goal.

The Metropolitan League match at Morse Oval in Brooklyn resulted in favor of the Visitation elaven at the expense of Morse Dry Deck by 2 goals to 0.

Clan MacDuff and the Fulton Football Club met in a New York State League championship game at Lenox Oval, the result being in favor of Clan MacDuff by 5 goals to 2.

Paterson kept pace with Bethlehem in the National Football League, although still two points behind, by defeating the Babcock & Wilcox elaven in a rattling game at Bayonne by 3 goals to 2. At half time Babcock & Wilcox led by 1 to 0. Hayes equalized for Paterson after the restart and a penalty, converted by Neilson, put Paterson ahead by 2—1. Hayes headed in the winning goal for Paterson ten minutes from the end.

BILLIARD TITLES AT STAKE.

Metropolitan Championships to be Decided in Two Events.

Details for the first tournaments to be held by the recently formed American Amateur Billiard Association, of which William Gershel is the President, were announced yesterday. The three cushion tournament will begin tomorrow night and the 18.2 balkline tournament will start on Wednesday night. Both are for the metropolitan championship.

The schedule calls for the playing of the events in the various rooms. As yet it has not been completed beyond the first few days, other scheduling being impossible until the winners in the earlier matches are determined.

Reisler Seeks to Curb Dempsey.

It was reported yesterday that John J. Reisler had secured an injunction against Jack Dempsey in St. Louis, restraining the Salt Lake City heavyweight from participating in bouts under the management of anybody but himself. The local boxing promoter, it was stated, will take similar action in St. Paul, where Reisler expects to force an abandonment of the bout between Dempsey and Billy Miske, scheduled for May 3.

ROGERS GETS HIGH LAURELS AT TRAPS

Z. Rogers, although he will not numbered among the winners, did the best work, making a 93 out of a possible 100 targets in the high scratch race. The high handicap gunner proved to be R. B. Cole, the only one to have a full total of 100 targets.

SERVICE ACADEMIES MAY RESUME GAMES

West Point and Annapolis Hope to Meet on Diamond and Gridiron This Year.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 7.—There is a strong hope in army and navy circles here that the teams of the service academies may meet in baseball this Spring and in football next Fall. The chief obstacle is the rule requiring that all contests in which the teams take part be played on home grounds. It is believed now that this will be waived.

Both baseball managements have reserved June 1 for the playing of the baseball game, and the military academy authorities have agreed that they will play the game in Annapolis if the desired permission to leave West Point is obtained. This puts the playing of the game squarely up to the War Department.

Though no definite move will emanate from the academies, there are strong hopes that the matter will be taken up at the departments. It is thought that if permission for the baseball game is secured, no opposition will arise in the case of football.

McCleery Penn State Coach.

STATE COLLEGE, Penn., April 6.—Edward ("Bull") McCleary, 1910, will be Pennsylvania State's assistant football coach next Fall. He will handle the backfield men under the direction of Dick Harlow, 1914, the head coach. This combination gives the Blue and White a coaching staff that is exclusively a product of the Penn State system. McCleary was a fullback at Penn State on the teams of '07, '08, and '09.

The big expense is lost time

THE supreme test of the dependability of a truck is what is said of it by owners operating only a single truck, when there is nothing to replace it if the single truck breaks down. Then the cost of lost time comes home.

Lost time should be the first thought in choosing your truck.

PIERCE-ARROW Motor Trucks

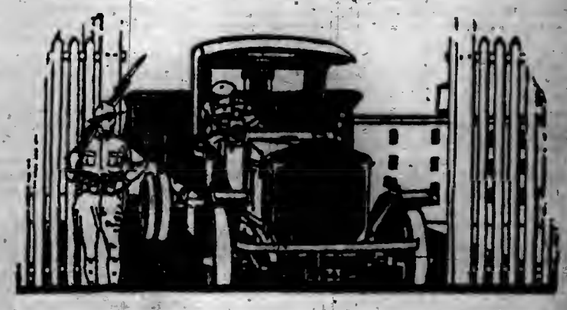
have built up many of the biggest fleets because of their records for the minimum of lost time and their ability to operate continuously on rush work. This is invariably true where accurate comparative records are kept.

In lines of business where avoidance of delays is essential, Pierce-Arrow trucks outnumber all others enormously. When uninterrupted service is vital they have wonderful records.



FOR INSTANCE:

When the Winchester Repeating Arms Company enlarged its plant to rush munition work, 11 Pierce-Arrow trucks worked day and night carrying material. When more coal meant more munitions, they hauled 280 tons daily, 8½ miles, averaging over 10 trips a day. They cut costs 86 cents a ton, saving $39,000 in a single year.

FOR INSTANCE:

When the E. W. Bliss Company of Brooklyn making shells for the war, employed 11 Pierce-Arrow trucks to haul building materials and machinery, they helped enlarge the factory. Then they carried supplies from docks as distant as Poughkeepsie. They saved in three months in demurrage alone, $7,000 in handling freight.

These are examples conspicuous because of their significance to war activities, but in hundreds of commercial activities throughout the country, where speeding up is essential Pierce-Arrows do equally notable work—earning and saving, making expansion possible.

OVERSEA COMMERCE MOSTLY WAR GOODS

February Report Shows Great Reduction in Trade, Due to Demands Upon Shipping.

NO BUSINESS WITH RUSSIA

Netherlands Got Nothing During the Month—Food and Supplies for England and France.

Details of foreign commerce movements in the customs district of New York in February, made available in a series of reports prepared by Byron R. Newton, Collector of the Port, reflect the increasing difficulties in transporting merchandise other than war materials overseas under present conditions.

Outgoing trade with all the world from New York in February was $167,137,434, against $222,352,082 in February, 1917, a loss of $55,214,655. There was also a drop of more than $50,000,000 in shipments from here to Europe in the twelve-month period, and last February's exports were valued at $125,481,816, compared with $173,754,201 in the same month a year ago.

February's incoming trade from all the world was $94,300,000, compared with $97,834,385 in February, 1917, a drop of $3,[illegible]. The biggest slump was in imports from Europe, the February total being only $25,312,504, against $31,040,510 twelve months before. South American entries gained in February, their value being $35,155,[illegible], a gain of $10,[illegible] over February, 1917. The items of gain were raw supplies, such as hides, wool, nitrates, coffee, &c.

The Custom House report showed that the American Government had put an absolute embargo upon all shipments to Russia, as not a cent's worth left New York in February, against $25,177,323 worth in February of last year.

Exports to England rose in February owing to concentration of tonnage, the month's total aggregating $80,722,401, compared with $[illegible] in the same month last year. France fared badly, as the February shipments were only $37,[illegible], where in February, 1917, such exports reached $73,[illegible], an approximate drop of $40,[illegible]. Italy's purchases here were $18,243,828, a gain of $4,[illegible].

This country's dispute with the Netherlands over diversion of tonnage was reflected in the February report, which showed that nothing went to that country. Outward bound commerce a year ago had a value of more than $3,000,000. Sweden was unable to ship any goods from here, while the limited number of licenses issued by the War Trade Board for Denmark and Norway brought a drop in shipments to those countries. Relief supplies for Belgium went forward in February to the extent of $7,196,842, while in February, 1917, their value was only $2,318,665.

Exports to Japan were set down at $1,280,160, this sum, among other things, covering 68,580 pounds of steel plates wanted in Japanese shipyards.

Among the important shipments to England from New York in February were 683,941 bushels of barley, 187,622 bushels of wheat, 270,871 barrels of wheat flour, 4 airplanes, parts of airplanes valued at $380,640, 3,114,018 pounds refined copper in ingots, 23,[illegible] pounds upland cotton, 3,771,645 pounds gunpowder, 1,474,082 pounds canned beef, 9,391,203 pounds fresh beef, [illegible],859 pounds oleo oil, 24,203,611 pounds bacon, 28,714,840 pounds hams and shoulders, cured, at a cost of $8,[illegible],013; 13,242,401 pounds lard, 52,325,[illegible] gallons fuel oil, and 1,224,088 pounds woolen rags.

French shipments included 101,712 barrels wheat flour, 28,235,880 pounds refined copper in ingots, 5,722,297 pounds upland cotton, 2,537 bales cotton linters, 1,153,245 pounds gunpowder, $2,263,030 "other explosives," 1,480,400 pounds steel wire rope, 3,805,207 pounds bars or rods of steel, 57,809 tons steel billets and ingots, 10,033 tons bolts, nuts and rivets, $109,784 worth razors, 10,040 tons steel rails, 9,622,819 pounds steel plates, 347,607 pounds ship and tank plates, 7,[illegible] pounds barbed wire, 3,470,[illegible] pounds canned beef, and 1,303,272 pounds bacon.

Exports of condensed milk to all the world in February totaled 21,225,912 pounds.

The figures do not cover the vast supplies being sent for General Pershing's army. Under a ruling of the Treasury Department all customs formalities are dispensed with in shipping Government supplies, to save time and to prevent Germany from learning the size of the shipments.

The Joint Centenary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church at 111 Fifth Avenue announced yesterday that the church would begin a campaign to raise $80,000,000 to be expended in a missionary movement to last five years. All the missions of the church have been requested to estimate their financial needs for the period, and the work will be carried out jointly by the branches of the church in the North and the South, with the co-operation of the Canadian churches.

John T. Stone, a member of the War Risk Bureau, is Chairman of the Joint Committee, and C. S. Ward of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., is to direct the campaign. It is announced that "the financial drive will not be pushed until the whole church has been educated and is awake to the purpose of the centenary movement and program."

Doing Without Is as Important as Doing

Staying at home and helping by saving does not seem like a very heroic part to play in the great war.

But it is just as necessary; just as important; just as honorable.

For every soldier who goes to fight, five tons of arms, ammunition, food, clothing and other equipment must be sent abroad.

If we consume as much food and other goods as usual, there will not be enough for our soldiers.

Your savings in MATERIALS are needed to make up that five tons for every soldier; your savings in MONEY are needed to enable the Government to buy those materials.

Our soldiers cannot fight without your help. Your part in the war is a big part—an essential part. DO IT WITH ALL YOUR MIGHT.

Buy all the Liberty Bonds you can.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Favorable Start of New Loan Drive

In the next four weeks what is regarded as Wall Street's regular and principal business will be incidental to the sale of Liberty 4¼ per cent. bonds. The Stock Exchange has anticipated the new order of things and for the past fortnight has made little use of the credit facilities of the Street. The investment houses will release practically all of their outside men and will make no efforts by mail or telephone to interest investors in corporation or municipal offerings. The banks will not neglect their commercial functions, but their chief executive officers will devote most of their time to committee work, and much of the interior machinery will be utilized in handling loan payments. The manner in which private interests have been subordinated to the nation's need reflects the highest credit upon the patriotism of the financial community. Giving liberally both of their time and money, bankers and security dealers accomplished a difficult task in securing a big oversubscription to the first two loans in this Reserve district and set an example which has been emulated in other parts of the country. The machinery of selling Government bonds is now better fitted to the job. The new campaign just entered upon will prove a greater success than that which carried through either the first loan or the second. Not only have the organizations in each of the districts been improved upon and trained to the work, but the spirit of the people has undergone a gratifying change since the arrival of American soldiers in the battle line. It will require less argument to sell this issue, not so much because investors are less critical toward the terms of the third loan as because they have passed the point at which they needed to be convinced that their dollars were essential to the success of the Allies' cause.

The tension under which the world awaited the outcome of the Austro-German offensive has relaxed as the tide of battle has slowly but surely begun to turn in favor of the Allies, but no flood of accumulated buying orders has been released to evidence the public's returning confidence in securities. Dealings last week were on such a small scale as to indicate an almost general indifference to the course of prices. Stocks were uniformly firm, but they were not in demand, even when good news and a lowering of call money rates might have been expected to cause a revival of speculative interest. People have readjusted their views and are no longer concerned with possibilities that may arise out of the ending of the war. Having been misled by premature reports of serious peace discussions they have resolutely put the thought of peace out of mind to the end that they may concentrate on war. The stock market has been put to one side, and but for the irreducible minimum of purchases and sales, which the market must handle irrespective of the activities of professional operators, it has not been of much value as a barometer of changing conditions. The Stock Exchange has performed a useful function in the past fortnight in supplying for the first time a market in Liberty bonds commensurate with the totals outstanding. Approximately $85,000,000 of Governments have changed hands in this period. It is essential that there should be at all times a broad market for these issues, without which the buyers, particularly those of large blocks, might find themselves seriously embarrassed in the event of the development of circumstances requiring their liquidation.

It is, perhaps, too much to expect fulfillment of the wish expressed by Governor Strong the other day, that there should be at least 20,000,000 subscribers to this offering—one out of every five of the population is a large percentage for this stage of the war—but it is by no means improbable that the number of buyers will exceed the magnificent showing of the last loan. The new device for relieving banks of the troublesome details connected with the handling of small purchases made on the installment plan has advantages for the subscriber as well. By providing him with a coupon book in return for his initial payment of $2 he is started in a plan of systematic saving, which should soon become automatic. The sooner this loan is completed, the sooner men can return to their own enterprises, and the measure of the oversubscription will determine when another campaign must be entered upon. It is likely that Government expenditures will increase rather rapidly from now on. The number of men in service is being expanded beyond recent expectations and now totals 1,500,000, with fresh quotas going into the training camps daily to take the places of those sent overseas. Treasury Department estimates make the cost of the first year of the war to this country about $12,000,000,000, besides which five billions have been advanced to our allies. Much of this outlay will not have to be repeated, since it represents the cost of construction of cantonments and administration buildings, shipyards, and warehouses, but the expenses of maintaining the army abroad will expand every day that the war goes on. On this basis something more than 25 per cent. of the first year's war costs have been provided for through taxation.

As expert testimony, an editorial summary of the results of three months' operation of the railroads by the Government presented by the Railway Age last week is interesting. It is found that in January, for the first time since the Interstate Commerce Commission began to compile monthly earnings reports eleven years ago, the railroads did not earn enough to pay their operating expenses and taxes, while the Eastern roads did not even cover their bare operating costs. This is accounted for by the unprecedented difficulties which the Railroad Administration had to contend against. With favorable conditions in the two months following better results accrued. By setting aside priority and preference orders and the use of embargoes, congestion in the East was ameliorated, although the car shortage increased. The administration is credited with having handled the passenger service problem wisely, reducing passenger train mileage without seriously inconveniencing travelers. It is also credited with having dealt fairly and skillfully with the labor problem. It is understood that advances in the wages of organized and unorganized employes will be granted proportionate to their deserts rather than to the amount of force it may be thought the different classes could put behind their demands. It is argued that the attempts at standardization of locomotives are likely to bring disastrous results, particularly by causing delays in the construction of new equipment, and that the Government has overstepped its rights in asking manufacturers of railway supplies to relinquish patents. Finally, emphasis is laid upon possible evil consequences of the policy of enforcing centralization through deprivation of important railway officers of initiative, while regional officers and members of the staff in Washington are overburdened with new tasks.

WANTS MAIL TUBES RETAINED

City Club Recommends Purchase by the Government.

The City Club has recommended retention and Government ownership of the pneumatic mail tubes here and in other large cities on the ground that the service is a public necessity, which can not be replaced by automobiles without subjecting mail deliveries to delay and causing congestion of traffic and increased street danger.

Letters to New York Congressmen requesting support for an appropriation for the purchase of the tube system by the Government were sent yesterday by President Nelson S. Spencer of the club. Continuation of the tube service was advised by the Joint Commission of Senators and Representatives, and Mr. Spencer urged the adoption of the report of the commission.

RADIO DEVELOPMENT ADVANCES STEADILY

Preparation Going On for Important Expansion of Service After the War.

NEW POSSIBILITIES SEEN

Direction of Cargo Ships at Sea May Have Potent Influence in Determining Prices.

Although the commercial use of the wireless telegraph has ceased in belligerent countries since the various Governments took over the plants, work has steadily gone ahead on preparations for an important expansion of this means of communication after the war ends. More than that, as the National City Bank points out in its publication, The Americas, the United States Government has made great progress in developing the wireless service and plant equipment during the war period. In respect to the purely commercial value of aerial communication, the bank makes significant reference to a new field of use.

"This is in communicating with ships at sea," it says, "in which the peculiar advantages of the wireless will make themselves felt to a large degree. The communication of land stations with ships, and of ships with each other, give opportunity for the building up of a new class of operations in international commerce. By wireless ships may be diverted from one route to another. They may set sail from port with no orders as to their ultimate destination, being merely directed to proceed in a certain direction across the ocean, and await wireless messages directing them to this country or that. For instance, a ship may load with wheat, or hides, or wool, at Buenos Aires, and depart with orders simply to proceed in a northeasterly direction. The owners of the cargo meanwhile are watching the quotations on this commodity in the markets of the United States and Europe. After the lapse of a few days conditions in the New York market may be such as to bring the greatest chance of profit. A wireless message is sent to the vessel directing it to take a course toward New York. A week later, however, while the vessel is still in the tropics, the New York market may undergo a sudden slump, whereupon another wireless order is sent to switch the ship to London.

"An even greater development of this system of control consists of actually affecting markets by means of wireless messages to ships carrying valuable cargoes. A given commodity in the New York market, for example, may undergo a considerable rise in price owing to lack of visible supplies on hand or approaching that city. Immediately wireless messages may be sent to perhaps a dozen vessels all over the world sailing toward London or some other market, and those ships diverted toward New York. The effect of this might be to reduce prices in the latter market so that later messages would be sent out changing the ships back to their former routes. By merely altering the course for a short while of vessels in the Pacific or South Atlantic oceans, users of wireless might thus affect the prices on the world's exchanges. One of the results of this wireless control of the world's commodities will be a closer adjustment of prices between markets and closer international ties."

The wireless system now being operated by the United States Government has stations at Belmar, N. B., and Tuckerton, N. J., Radio, Va., and Chatham and Marion on the East coast, which, together with the Sayville plant, now operated by the navy, communicate with Europe and Panama, and also with stations at San Francisco, San Diego and other points on the Pacific Coast. The Philippines are reached by relay at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, to Cavite, near Manila. The Marconi Company's station at Marshall and Bolinas, Cal., receives direct from Funabashi, Japan, and also by relay at the large station at Koko Head and Kahuku, Hawaii.

A plan is under way for the construction of an American wireless system to link up Latin America with the United States. A company which has recently been organized is preparing to erect a station at Buenos Aires, which will communicate directly with New York. Other stations are planned by the company at Guayaquil, Lima, Iquique, La Paz, Antofogasta, Valparaiso, Montevideo, Ascension, Bahia, Pernambuco, Para, and Rio Janeiro.

Great Britain had begun a great system when the war checked construction work. The chief stations were to be at Oxford, Cairo, Poona in India, Singapore, Pretoria, and Nairobi, in British East Africa. The Germans had before the war begun several communicating stations on foreign territory, like the one at Sayville, L. I. An attempt was made after hostilities opened to secure permission for the erection of a wireless station in Argentina. The experts on wireless operation believe that after the war ends Germany will begin anew the task of building up a new system of communication with the powerful plant at Nauen, seeking concessions for plant erection on foreign soil.

TO DEVELOP COAL LAND.

U. S. Steel Subsidiary Will Expend $4,000,000 in Kentucky.

The United States Coal & Coke Company has begun a comprehensive development of 30,000 acres of coal land which the concern owns in Harlan County, Ky. The company, which is a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, is planning to expend $4,000,000 on the work, according to The Iron Age, and the undertaking is one of the largest ever started in that State. It will be purely a coal mining proposition, with the expectation of ultimately producing from 10,000 to 12,000 tons a day.

A modern town is being built to accommodate 6,000 workmen and their families. At present 1,700 employes are at work in the mines and in the construction of the dwellings. The coal will be used in the manufacture of by-product coke at the various coking plants of the Carnegie Steel Company and other subsidiaries of the Steel Corporation.

"Carry On"

THE fighting slogan in France, gathering inspiration and significance as the conflict grows more violent and more desperate, is "Carry On." On land, on sea, in the air, it rings sharp and clear.

Into the front line trenches comes the signal to charge. The company commander swings "over the top." At his heels, pushing and stumbling through the hell of "No Man's Land" come the boys. They gain a yard, five, ten, and the machine guns speak. The commander falls, but over his shoulder, above the din of battle, he shouts, "Carry On, Lieutenant!" So on and on, till every officer falls, and the grizzled old Sergeant sets his teeth andtakes what's left of them on to the goal.

"Carry On"* must be our slogan here at home. We must "Carry On" to the utmost limit our ability, to the last dollar of our resources, till Victory is won. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder—buy all the Liberty Bonds we can. Let us keep our Bonds and save to buy more.

"Carry On"! Buy Liberty Bonds!

WALL ST. GETS TEXT OF SHORT SALE RULE

Letter of Acting Attorney General Davis to Secretary McAdoo Made Public.

LEGAL TITLE TRANSFERRED

The ruling of the Attorney General on the war tax law as applied to the taxation of stocks borrowed in the course of completing short sales of stocks was received in the financial district yesterday, enabling Stock Exchange members to study the full grounds upon which the opinion was rendered. The ruling is contained in a letter from John W. Davis, Acting Attorney General, to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo.

"I have the honor," Mr. Davis says, "to acknowledge your letter of the 14th instant requesting my opinion on the question whether the stamp tax imposed by Sections 800 and 807, Schedule A, Subdivision 4 of Title VIII. of the War Revenue act of Oct. 3, 1917, (40 Stat. 319, 322,) applies to the so-called borrowing and return of shares of certificates of stock. The said subdivision levies a tax

"On all sales, or agreements to sell, or memoranda of sale, or deliveries of or transfers of legal title to shares or certificates of stock, * * * whether made upon or shown by the books of the association, company, or corporation, or by any assignment in blank, or by any delivery, or by any paper or agreement or memorandum or other evidence of transfer or sale, whether entitling the holder in any manner to the benefit of such stock or not * * *; Provided, That it is not intended by this title to impose a tax upon an agreement evidencing a deposit of stock certificates as collateral security for money loaned thereon, which stock certificates are not actually sold, nor upon such stock certificates so deposited; Provided, further, That the tax shall not be imposed upon deliveries or transfers to a broker for sale, nor upon deliveries or transfers by a broker to a customer for whom and upon whose order he has purchased same. * * *

"Your letter makes the following further statement:

"The transactions as to which the question arises are described as follows:

"The borrowing of shares is necessary in connection with all so-called short sales. It is also necessary in connection with shares that are sold but are not on hand for delivery, an instance of which is the shares being in transit from abroad, or the West, or elsewhere. It also frequently happens that a broker may sell shares for an estate and find, upon attempting to transfer them from the name of a decedent or an executor, that additional papers, or authority, are required by the transfer office, or the transfer books may be closed for a meeting of stockholders or other reasons, and, the shares being already sold, the broker borrows to make delivery, after replacing the borrowed shares.

A Specific Case Cited.

"In the case of the short sale transaction the following occurs:

"A sells to B 100 shares of stock, which is evidenced by memorandum of sale. Under the rules of the Exchange the shares have to be delivered and paid for the day following. If the sale is a short sale, or the shares are not on hand for delivery, A applies to C, who has such shares on hand, for a loan of them. C, being willing to lend them, delivers to A a certificate for 100 shares indorsed in blank on A's agreement to redeliver to him an equivalent number of shares on demand on any business day, and the deposit by A with C of the market value of the shares as security for their return. That deposit remains until the shares are returned, subject to increase from day to day, if the market value of the shares rises, and to decrease from day to day if the market value of the shares falls. A makes his delivery under his transaction with B by delivering the certificate which he has borrowed from C for that purpose, thereby completing the transaction between A and B on which the tax is paid. When A desires to return the shares which he has borrowed A goes into the market and buys 100 shares for the purpose of delivering them to C, and on that transaction the tax is paid. These shares so acquired for delivery to C he delivers to C, and receives the amount he has on deposit with C. It is a common occurrence that C demands the return of his shares, in which event A substitutes D as another lender, going through the same process, including the deposit of the value of the shares, as with C, thus delivering to C the shares he has borrowed from D for that purpose, and receiving from C the amount on deposit with him as security for such return. This process may be repeated many times in respect of the same short sale.

"The stamp tax provided for in the subdivision above quoted, of course, applies to the sale and delivery of any borrowed shares, and to the purchase of shares for the purpose of returning them to a lender. The precise question upon which opinion is desired is as to whether the stamp tax also applies to the passing from the lender to the borrower of shares or certificates of stock 'borrowed,' and also to the passing from the borrower to the lender of shares or certificates of stock 'returned.'

Agrees with Revenue Solicitor.

"You inclose a copy of an opinion rendered you by the Solicitor of Internal Revenue to the effect that the transfer of the stock from the lender to the borrower, and later from the borrower to the lender in fulfillment of the former's obligation, are both subject to the tax. With this conclusion I agree, for the following reasons:

"1. The act by its express terms, it will be observed, covers every transfer of the legal title to shares of stock with certain specific exceptions. There can certainly be no doubt that there is a transfer of the legal title from the lender to the borrower, and later from the borrower to the lender under the circumstances stated. Shares of stock are fungible things, and their loan with an agreement to return things of the same class is the mutuum of Roman law, as to which no one can doubt that title passes from the lender to the borrower and vice versa. (Jones on Pledges, page 61; Story on Bailments, 7th ed., Sections 283, 284; Kent's Commentaries, 12th ed., Vol. II., p. 573; Hurd v. West, 7 Cowen (N. Y.) 752, 756.) Even if the article be mingled with others of the same species in a warehouse, title may pass to the warehouseman. (Kent's Commentaries, 12th ed., Vol. II., p. 590, Justice Himes's note; South Australian Ins. Co. v. Randell, L. R., 3 Privy Council Appeals 101; Rahilly v. Wilson, 3 Dillon 420;) Upon the same principle title to deposits in bank passes to the banker. (Foley v. Hill, 2 House of Lords, Cas. 28.) The Supreme Court has had occasion to pass upon this characteristic of shares of stock in several cases. (Richardson v. Shaw, 209 U. S. 365; Sexton v. Kessler, 225 U. S. 90; Gorman v. Littlefield, 229 U. S. 19; National City Bank v. Hotchkiss, 231 U. S. 50; Duel v. Hollins, 241 U. S. 523, and see as to bonds United States and Mex. T. Co. v. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co., 240 Fed. 505.) In German v. Littlefield, the court held:

"* * * that a certificate for the same number of shares represented precisely the same kind and value of property as another certificate for a like number of shares in the same corporation; that the return of a different certificate or the substitution of one certificate for another made no material change in the property right of the customer; that such shares were unlike distinct articles of personal property, differing in kind or value, as a horse, wagon, or harness, and that stock has no earmark which distinguishes one share from another, but is like grain of a uniform quality in an elevator, one bushel being of the same kind and value as another. * * *

Legal Title Really in Broker.

"The effect of these decisions is undoubtedly that even in the case of a broker and his customer the legal title to the stock is, not nominally, but really, in the broker, if the course of business so requires, although the customer may retain, as against the broker and his trustee in bankruptcy, an equitable right in rem to stock in the broker's possession of the same species as that dealt in between them.

"In accordance with this same general principle it is specifically held that a loan of stock transfers title. (Dykers v. Allen, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 497; Barclay v. Culver, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 1; Fosdick v. Greene, 27 Ohio St., 484; Dos Passos on Stockbrokers, 2d, p. 329.)

"2. It cannot be said that the borrower is a mere agent between the lender and the vendee, so as to make what is in appearance two transactions in reality only one. There is no privity between the lender and the vendee. The former looks merely to the borrower, and assumes no relationship further. There are, therefore, in substance, two transactions, a transfer by the lender to the borrower, and a transfer by the latter to the vendee, and the tax must be paid on each. The case, in this aspect of it, is governed by Municipal Telegraph and Stock Co. v. Ward, 133 Fed. 70, affirmed 138 Fed. 1006, and Eldridge v. Ward, 174 Fed. 402, and not by United States v. Clawson, 110 Fed. 994; Metropolitan Stock Exchange v. Gill, 199 Fed. 545, S. C. 211 Fed. 108, and Board of Trade v. Hammond Elevator Co., 198 U. S. 424.

"3. As for the provisos in subdivision 4, they should receive a fair interpretation in connection with the whole, but there must be clear language before it can be assumed that exemption from taxation was intended. (Cornell v. Coyne, 192 U. S. 418, 431; Ford v. Delta and Pine Land Co., 164 U. S. 662, 666; Central Railroad & Banking Co. v. Georgia, 92 U. S. 665, 674; Bailey v. Magwire, 22 Wall. 215, 226.) The first proviso deals with deposits of stock as collateral security for a loan, and the second with the transfer of stock between a broker and his customer. Under no fair interpretation can either be held to cover the loan of stock under the circumstances now under consideration.

"A loan of stock cannot be called a pledge thereof within the meaning of the first proviso. The transaction is, in effect, the reverse of that covered by the proviso. In the latter case money is loaned and stock is deposited as collateral for its return. In the case now in question stock is loaned and money is deposited as collateral for its return. In one case the debt is money, in the other stock. (See Dibble v. Richardson, 171 N. Y. 131, 137.) There can of course be no doubt that the legal title to the money loaned passes in a real sense in the case covered by the proviso, and for the same reason legal title to the stock loaned in the present case passes with like reality to the borrower.

"As to the second proviso, it is sufficient to say that the relationship between the lender and the borrower in the present case is not, in any sense, that of a broker buying and selling stocks for a customer."

RANSOM CONDEMNS SERVICE BOARD BILL

Says That Senator Thompson's Measure Leaves Nothing Desirable but Offices.

SEES HARM IN HEARING PLAN

The bill of Senator George F. Thompson to consolidate the two Public Service Commissions having passed the Senate on Thursday, William L. Ransom, chief counsel of the Public Service Commission of this district, has made an analysis of the measure.

"The Thompson bill ought to be entitled a measure to abolish the powers of the commissions," says Mr. Ransom, "but leave all the offices in existence for salary purposes."

Mr. Ransom's criticism of the bill briefly describes its provisions, which create one commission out of the two now existing, with ten Commissioners at $10,000 a year each, except the Chairman, whose salary is fixed at $10,500. Other features of the bill provide that a chief Commissioner and two associates, designated by the Governor, shall sit in Albany to take testimony in all cases where hearings are necessary; there shall also be two regulatory branches, one to sit in the first district, consisting of New York City and the counties of Westchester, Putnam, Dutchess, Orange, Rockland, Nassau, and Suffolk, and the other to have jurisdiction in the second district, composed of the remainder of the State.

Transit work is taken out of the control of the proposed commission and transferred to three members of the present commission in this district with the title of Rapid Transit Commissioners.

Mr. Ransom says that the bill would place all complainants at a hopeless disadvantage, and end the powers of the commission to compel a corporation to do anything against its will. It would displace the present procedure, he said, which gives all complainants a chance to be heard at a convenient location and not in a place so far removed as Albany, which would debar many citizens of a hearing. Other objections to the bill are described by Mr. Ransom as follows:

"If the three hearing Commissioners decided against a company, the company could, after delay, take the matter to court in Albany, by a direct appeal to the Appellate Division of the Third Department, and in this way the matter would be judicially reviewed and in reality determined by five up-State Judges, none of whom had been voted for by any resident of the City of New York. In these and other ways the city would lose contact with and control over its public utility matters, and they would be removed altogether from the local atmosphere.

Sends All Matters to Court.

"The Thompson bill also undertakes to reverse and overrule the recent decisions of the Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court, and allow the companies again to drag every order of the commission through the courts, with a full review of both the law and the facts. This delay would enable the companies to wear out complainants and save their real case from presentation to the court, if the commission should decide in favor of the complainant."

Mr. Ransom said the proposed bill would strike down the safeguards against overcapitalized and watered securities, and would restore the "good old times" when a public service company could issue stocks or bonds as it pleased. All the power the commission would have would be to see that a company did not issue more securities than it announced that it would issue. "The commissions have done an invaluable service to investors and the public," Mr. Ransom says, "in supervising security issues and ending the watering of stocks. The Thompson bill would destroy all this."

Other criticisms of the bill were that it would paralyze the organization and administration of the commission by making it "woefully irresponsible and wastefully large." The various branches could appoint stenographers, clerks, assistants, &c., as they saw fit; the Secretery could also appoint many assistants, while the regulatory branch could name engineers, inspectors, investigators, experts, and other technical employes, besides the staff of clerks and others.

Then the counsel could appoint lawyers and clerks, and so it would go on without end, to the detriment of the public patience and the injury of the public cash box. In concluding his criticism Mr. Ransom said:

Would Give Work to Estimate Board.

"The powers of a State commission appointed by the Governor should be regulatory and supervisory as to the public service rendered by franchise-holding or municipal corporations. A State commission should not be left in the dual relationship of making contracts and doing construction work. As to utilities and corporations, it should devote its whole time to regulating. At least as soon as present work is finished and subway lines now nearing completion are in operation, I have believed that supervision of rapid transit construction should be transferred to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the Public Service Commission left with duties solely regulatory.

"This the Thompson bill does not do, however. It immediately severs the rapid transit work at the present critical stage and turns it all over to three Commissioners selected by the Governor. It would seem preferable that rapid transit construction be left under the supervision of the present commission until the time soon comes when it can be turned over to the Board of Estimate.

"There are many artful 'jokers' in the bill which will delight the hearts of those who wish to make public regulation unworkable. The carefully considered immunity provisions of the present law are skillfully wrecked and a basis laid for a claim of indemnity by a corporate law-breaker if he even discussed his dereliction with some investigator of the commission. The salutary provisions of the present law as to what may be done to a person who refuses to testify or produce books and papers are carefully weakened; their 'teeth' are extracted. There are 'jokers' greatly desired by the companies in the telephone provisions; as these do not relate to matters within the jurisdiction of this commission, I shall not discuss them now. The bill seems to take all subway lines out of the control of any public authority.

"There are scores of other provisions which might be discussed, as contradictory, experimental, or detrimental; but the foregoing are basic faults. To substitute haphazard language and uncoordinated concepts for the careful provisions of the present act, now adjudicated by the courts to confer on the commission plenary powers under reasonable safeguards, would seem most unfortunate."

RAISES DISCOUNT RATES.

Federal Reserve Bank Acts in Case of Some Maturities.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, in a circular now issued announced that discount rates are to be advanced on certain maturities secured by commercial paper and Liberty bonds, these advances becoming effective immediately in the case of New York City banks, and upon receipt of the announcement in the case of out-of-town institutions.

Fifteen-day advances on both commercial paper and Liberty bonds under the new rate are 4 per cent., instead of 3½ per cent. Discounts on maturities from fifteen to ninety days are 4¾ per cent. on commercial paper, instead of 4½ per cent., and 4¼ per cent. on Liberty bonds, instead of 4 per cent. Trade acceptances up to ninety days will be discounted at 4½, instead of 4 per cent. Discounts on agricultural paper of over ninety days remain unchanged at 5 per cent. The increases in rates have been anticipated by the money market for some time, as they are only in accordance with the prevailing rates in the money market, and also are in harmony with the higher interest rate on the new Liberty Loan.

STEEL WAGE RISE MAY ADD $3 A TON

Financial Circles Wonder if Increase Will Cut Into Corporation's Profits.

The $45,000,000 wage increase to be put into effect by the United States Steel Corporation on April 15 is the subject of considerable study in financial circles in respect to the effect it will have on the organization's manufacturing costs. Applying the increase to the corporation's production of finished steel, it is seen that the additional expense in the twelve months ended April 15, 1919, will be $3 a ton, provided that the mills turn out as much tonnage for sale during the period as was manufactured in the calendar year of 1917. The output last year was 14,042,911 tons.

The advance in wages comes at a time when the prices of steel products are fixed by Government mandate, and for this reason the effect will be felt on earnings more than if normal market conditions prevailed. The corporation, and other companies which follow the 15 per cent. wage expansion, are in the position of having higher costs without the normal offsetting factor of higher selling prices. The product of a situation like this, naturally, is a reduction of profits. Whether profits in the current year are to be depressed below the level of 1917 will depend upon output. If the mills are able to turn out more steel than last year, bringing in a greater total of earnings, it is expected by the manufacturers that the additional wage outlay will be submerged, in part at least, by the expansion of output.

The Steel Corporation had two definite objects in view in voting the wage increase. The first, as Chairman E. H. Gary pointed out, was to further the production of steel needed for war work, and the second, closely allied to the first, was to keep the workmen satisfied with their incomes in this period of high living costs and to attract additional workers to the mills. Labor shortage has disturbed the employes for many months, and besides the inability of many corporations to get enough men, the quality of workmanship is reported to have declined.

WOULD CHANGE WAR TAX.

8% Levy on Corporations' Investments in Securities Suggested.

A suggestion that the excess-profits tax law be amended so that income derived by corporations from their investments in taxable securities may be separately classified and subjected to a flat tax of 8 per cent., in lieu of the graduated rates at present levied in accordance with the gross income of the corporation or partnership, has been laid before Secretary McAdoo by H. W. Briggs of E. H. Rollins & Sons, Boston.

"No excess profits can conceivably be derived from bond interest, because the return is fixed," says Mr. Briggs. "The act affords precedent for this principle, first, in the taxation of salaries at 8 per cent., and, second, in exempting the individual from any excess profits tax on income from securities. This proposed amendment would vastly broaden the market for taxable Liberty bonds among prosperous corporations and partnerships, and would improve general credit conditions by encouraging investment of the business surplus of corporations and partnerships in obligations representing the necessary requirements of other corporate borrowers, with the result that investment conditions would be substantially improved."

SAYS GERMAN STRIKE FAILED BY DISUNITY

RENDERED REPRESSION EASY

But Workers Cannot Be Denied Peace if Convinced of Pan German Lust of Conquest.

The political attitude of the German Socialist leaders in the Reichstag since the beginning of the war is given as an important reason for the failure of the recent German strikes in an article in the Vienna Arbeiter Zeitung, the leading Socialist paper of Austria, extracts from which are found in English papers. "The weakness of the movement," says the Arbeiter Zeitung, "was not the result of the energy of the authorities; on the contrary, only its weakness made their energy possible.

"Dissolving the strikers' committees and forbidding meetings do not bring one workman back to his work. The state of siege threatens those who indulge in street excesses, but is quite ineffective against strikers who sit at home with folded arms. Even the threat of militarization could not have forced the German workmen to give up the struggle if their millions had unanimously resolved to hold out.

"The most important reason for the abortive ending of the strike is undoubtedly the lack of unity among the German working class. Even in Berlin the strike was not general; in many factories only part of the workmen went out, while the rest continued their work. In many cities, such as Munich, the workmen divided according to party; the Independent Socialists struck, members of the old party went on with their work.

"The most important industrial districts were only slightly affected. On the Rhine, in Westphalia, in Silesia, even in Saxony, where lie the chief fortresses of Independent Socialism, only a small section struck; and even where they struck there was no uniform action.

"And to these new drawbacks of the German workers' movement must be added the old. It was always the weakness of German Social Democracy that it had least influence on the very sections of the working class whose strike would involve the greatest economic charges. The railroad workers now take the first place in the movement in other countries; only in Germany have they always stood outside the ranks of the class-conscious workmen. Of the miners and iron founders, too, only a part is Socialist; a very considerable part follows the Centre and the Polish Nationalists.

"These facts explain the weakness of the movement and also the energy of the Prussian authorities. The German Government would have hesitated to take violent measures if it had had reason to fear that such measures would provoke an extension of the movement to the railways, mines, and foundries.

Influence of Social Democracy.

"How is it that the German working class, after three and a half years of unheard-of sacrifice and deprivation, is not capable of carrying through a struggle for peace with the same unanimity and clearness of aim as in many former struggles? This, at least, is partly due to the unfortunate development of German Social Democracy during the war. It has united with the Centre and the Liberals in the Reichstag bloc. It has thus scored various successes—the inclusion of progressive parliamentarians in the Government, the Reichstag resolution in favor of peace by understanding, the reform bill in the Prussian Parliament." [This reform bill, it may be added, has never been passed, and current events show how much the Reichstag resolution of last July amounted to.]

"But this policy, which made Social Democracy the ally of bourgeois parties and the support of the Government, was fiercely attacked by the (Socialist) opposition, which finally constituted itself as a separate party. The old party saw itself forced to defend its policies against attacks from the Left; hence it had to represent its successes as greater than they really were. For instance, it had to overemphasize the importance of the Reichstag peace resolution, to smooth over its ambiguities, to exaggerate the influence of the Reichstag majority upon the policy of the Government.

"But if the workmen are told day after day that the Reichstag is working for the most beautiful peace by understanding, and that the Government is acting according to the decision of the Reichstag majority, then the workman is scarcely being educated to take up the struggle against the Government. The bloc policy and the action of the masses are mutually exclusive; those who themselves belong in the Reichstag to the majority which supports the Government cannot create the atmosphere in which alone united action by the masses is possible.

Conflicting Courses.

"Nor, indeed, was that the intention of the German Social Democratic majority; the general strike came without any act on its part and against its will. When the strike was there, the leaders none the less placed themselves at its head; but the masses having been educated for three and a half years to trust the Government's intentions, were naturally not willing to make heavy sacrifices in a struggle against this very Government.

"In other democratic lands such a situation can hardly arise, for the parliamentary majority determines the policy of the Government. In Germany it is different. A few Generals, a few influential bank Directors, (Presidents,) and big manufacturers can, under given circumstances, influence policy more effectually than the whole Reichstag majority. The unedifying picture which German Social Democracy presents today is at bottom the result of German sham-democracy, of the poverty and backwardness of German political life.

"But, in spite of all, we hope that even the German strike will not have an unfavorable effect on future development. The German Government did not have to give the workmen any definite assurances, but it has learned that every extension of the war provokes the greatest social dangers; and if this time it still found it easy to dispose of the strike, because a large section of the working class still has confidence in it, all the force at its disposal would avail nothing if the whole German working class once acquired the conviction that the Government is prolonging the war for the sake of Pan-German lust of conquest."

BUYING UP GERMAN MEDALS.

Dutch Collectors Gather Them as Curios—Herald Victories Unwon.

THE HAGUE, March 20, (Associated Press Correspondence.)—A big business has developed in Holland in German curios, particularly in medals struck by the Germans to commemorate victories or, sometimes, prospective victories which never materialized. These latter medals were usually never publicly issued or were withdrawn upon the failure of the operations. Their rarity naturally adds to their value to the collector and dealer.

Probably the rarest of the German medals is one which was struck to commemorate the anticipated capture of Verdun. It is one of the best specimens of German medal, and only six existing copies are known to the Dutch curio dealers. Those six are being held at a valuation of about $1,000 each.

The passion for striking medals has not yet died down in Germany, and scarcely a week passes without several new varieties reaching the markets here. One Dutch collector of these medals has spent $10,000, and now has over 600 medals, which he values at $50,000.

American Bankers' Council Delayed

In order not to interfere with the Liberty Loan campaign, members of the Executive Council of the American Bankers' Association have voted, by referendum, to postpone the Spring meeting of the council to May 9, 10, and 11. The meeting will be held at Hot Springs, Ark., as originally planned. The former date was April 22, 23, and 24.

FAVORS STATE INVENTORY.

State Controller Travis, in the course of the work of his office, recently discovered that no inventory had ever been made of the exact amount of real property belonging to the State of New York, and that there was no definite record of either its amount or value, or of transfers and conveyances. Accordingly he has submitted a suggestion that such an inventory of real property should be taken, and a central bureau established for recording all future conveyances.

"No lists of property held by the State are kept," the Controller says, "other than the record showing land acquired by the State under tax sales or mortgages, or in forest preserve counties by the Commissioners of the Land Board. The lists fail to show accurately the boundaries of the different parcels. Moreover, it was formerly the custom when lands were acquired by the State to have the title placed in the names of the various State institutions. Consequently the deeds do not run to the people of the State, and in many instances, therefore, no record exists in any State office."

SOLDIERS' OUTINGS ABROAD.

Pershing's Men Spend Leave in Towns of Department of Savoie.

AIX-LES-BAINS, March 1, (Associated Press.)—Between 300 and 500 American soldiers are arriving or leaving here each day on special trains. Smaller numbers are entering and leaving the towns of Chambery, Challes-les-Eaux, and other places in the Department of Savoie, which has been selected as the first great leave centre of the American Army. These soldiers are America's first "permissionaires" on general leave. All of the first arrivals have been members of the first expedition to reach France, and likewise the first to see active service in the trenches.

The question of taking care of men on leave has been one of the most important recreation problems with which the United States Army has had to deal. After consulting with representatives of the Young Men's Christian Association and other welfare organizations it was decided to experiment with the plan of selecting in turn various interesting places in France to which the men could be sent. General orders were then issued granting each officer and man in France a leave of seven days, exclusive of travel time, once every four months. Free transportation is provided to men who spend their leave in centres selected by the army. Leave to Paris and other cities in France outside the leave area is only provided in exceptional cases.

When the army selected the Department of Savoie as the first leave area the Young Men's Christian Association immediately began to make plans for the reception of the men. Arrangements were made with hotel proprietors whereby they would open their hotels earlier than usual and reserve a certain percentage of their rooms for soldiers. All hotels in the department which contracted with the Young Men's Christian Association to provide the necessary accommodations were divided into three classes, according to the rates to be charged. These rates were fixed at 11, 14, and 17 francs a day for room and board, with the understanding that no tips were to be given by the men.

At Aix-les-Bains the Young Men's Christian Association leased the big Casino for the exclusive use of the soldiers. This includes a large theatre, assembly hall, and reading, writing, billiard, and game rooms. Afternoon and evening concerts and theatricals are given in the theatre, with both professional and amateur talent as attractions. The soldiers have made full use of the handsome Casino, which is in operation from 9 o'clock in the morning until late at night. The Young Men's Christian Association has also leased the Casino at Challes-les-Eaux and theatres in that town and Chambery.

The famous thermal baths at Aix-les-Bains have also been thrown open to the soldiers for a nominal fee, and they are proving very popular, especially among those men who arrive in Aix fresh from the trenches of northeastern France. A number of playgrounds and fields have also been leased, where baseball diamonds, football gridirons and outdoor basketball and tennis courts are being laid out. Automobile drives have been begun and each morning hiking parties start on trips to the summits of neighboring mountains.

AMERICA MUST EAT LOTS OF SEA FOOD

Predicted That Within Two Years We Shall Much Prefer Whale Meat to Beef.

IT HAS A GOOD FLAVOR

Quite Free from Fishy Taste, It Is Much Esteemed by Those Who Have Eaten It.

Dr. Hugh M. Smith, Commissioner of the Bureau of Fisheries of the United States and the world's foremost authority on fish, says: "The European war will benefit the masses of this country by bringing to their attention the fact that fish can advantageously supplant meats in every American home and at the same time build better bodies less expensively. I believe I am safe in asserting that within two years whale meat, a genuine table delicacy, will be preferred to beef, especially in the territory contiguous to our Atlantic and Pacific coasts."

Whales have heretofore been caught for their oil and whalebone or else have been made into fertilizer. It is estimated that last year in American waters the carcasses of these sea giants thus wantonly wasted would represent in food equivalent between 30,000 and 35,000 heads of steers. The flesh of all species of whales, porpoises, dolphins, and other cetaceans is excellent for human consumption, and it is only a question of time when, both fresh and preserved, it will be in demand and extensively utilized.

Whales and porpoises are mammals, like cattle and sheep. In reality they are "meat" and not "fish." In texture and appearance their flesh resembles beef, though the color is dark red, and the flavor is more like steak than anything else. It is absolutely devoid of all fishy taste and can be highly recommended to those who have the opportunity to purchase it. Each huge animal of the whale family is capable of furnishing about five tons of excellent food, worth approximately ten times more than when sold for oil, bone, or fertilizer. Recently residents of Seattle, Washington, and Portland, Oregon, have been fortunately able to buy whale meat, one of the fishing concerns in that region finding it more profitable to thus dispose of their catch than to use it as formerly. It sold in the market for 10 cents a pound and was eagerly purchased by all classes of people and pronounced excellent. The best hotels, clubs, and cafés featured it on their menus, and it was ordered by so many diners that the supply was speedily consumed.

Canned porpoise and dolphin meat are also favorably regarded by many. Incidentally, it may be well to remark in this connection that swordfish, a dish for epicures, is a true fish and not a mammal.

No country in the world has its coasts, rivers, lakes, and bodies of water populated with such a great variety of edible fish as has America, and no people on earth have overlooked as have we Americans these wonderful natural food preserves.

Along the Atlantic Coast the chief "neglected fish" are the sculpins, the dogfish, or greyfish, sharks, four species of sea-robins, many varieties of flounders, which, when caught, are always thrown away, and the whiting, a first cousin to the cod, which at times on our northeastern coast is so plentiful as to fill to overflowing all nets and traps. The Mexican Gulf has numerous shell and other fish in the "neglected" class. On the Pacific Coast are the sable-fish, an aristocratic member of the cod family; the numerous rock-fish, or trout, of which there are seventy-five different kinds found from Bering Sea to the Mexican boundary, and smelts of all classes and descriptions, which are invariably discarded. The eulachon, or candlefish, deserves special mention, owing to the fact that it is extremely rich in fat and the expressed oil has been used for centuries by the Indians for lighting and cooking purposes. At certain seasons of the year this fish clogs the rivers emptying into the Pacific. Canned or frozen it would provide a cheap and excellent ration. As it is, no one ever thinks of it as a comestible.

The Alaskan seas are destined to become the most wonderful and most prolific fishing grounds known. A recent discovery in the waters which lave Alaska's indented shores, evidently designed by nature to afford havens to fishing craft and to serve as sites for packing establishments, is the "atka fish," or "attu mackerel," which is found in abundance in this region. Extensive halibut feeding localities have also been brought to light, while the amount of sable fish secured increased from 346,161 pounds with a monetary value of $8,621 in 1916 to 1,060,980 pounds worth $39,697 in 1917, and there is every possibility that the catch for the next season will be at least four times the present one.

Alaskan herring up to last year were caught only for bait, oil, or to be converted into fertilizer. Experiments conducted by the Government revealed the fact that for smoking, salting, or kippering they proved far superior to any similar fish.—W. E. Aughinbaugh in Leslie's.

CITY SURVEYED FOR STORAGE BUILDINGS

Big Alteration Program if the Government Decides to Act.

MANY MAY HAVE TO MOVE

Some Shift Upward in Lumber—Brick Price Goes Down—Plaster Blocks Up.

Officers of the Army and Navy Departments have completed a survey of three, four, and five story buildings located in various sections of Greater New York that may be taken over by the United States Government for use as storage warehouses.

If the plan under consideration is carried out there will be a vast amount of alteration work to do to the buildings that will keep all available local building labor at work for some weeks to come and strain the resources of small building contractors to their utmost.

The sections where the virtual commandeering of houses will take place are not announced for publication for obvious reasons; but it is expected that announcement will be made from Washington within the near future that approximately 500 such buildings have been or will be taken over.

The plan originally was to build large terminal warehouses for the accommodation of Winter supplies for the army and navy, but the scarcity of building materials and lack of labor combined to force the authorities to take the quicker method of meeting the problem which had to be faced at once so as to help clear the railways.

The plan is, in many instances, to rip out certain floors in these buildings and to install hoists and chutes for quickly handling goods, and the majority of the structures affected will be inside the half-mile restricted zone of both rivers in Manhattan and Bronx. In Brooklyn there is some question as to how extensive the movement will develop, but the Bay Ridge section is likely to be one of the districts most affected in that borough.

Queens has been visited and also Richmond, where, however, it was found that there were few structures available for such purposes. This action is almost sure to result in the absorption of all available business and some housing space in Manhattan, Bronx, and Brooklyn, and is expected to result in some concession being made to Eastern manufacturers in the matter of obtaining coal for building material production this Summer.

Already there has been a decided improvement in the coal shipping situation to building material plants. Some of the plants manufacturing Portland cement in the Hudson and Lehigh districts have received intimations this week that shipments will be coming their way by the end of this week.

One interesting feature in this connection is that since the world war began potash has been exceedingly scarce in this country until it was noticed that the vegetation surrounding cement plants all over the country was greener and more healthy than in other sections of the same communities. Investigation proved that in the dust out of the smokestacks of cement mills important potash deposits were found.

This discovery has prompted the Fuel Administration at Washington to view with consideration the threatened shut-down of these plants from undersupply of coal.

The strike of the bricklayers' helpers came to a settlement last week with a new wage scale of 47½ cents an hour until July 1 and 50 cents an hour after that date for the remainder of the year. The settling of this strike and the simultaneous arrival of thirteen barges in the market on Saturday brought the price of Hudson common brick down to $9.50 a thousand, with quotations decidedly weak at that level. Some of the better grades of brick are still quoted at $10 a thousand, wholesale.

Plaster blocks, as indicated a fortnight ago, advanced in price. Two-inch furring advanced half a cent to 6½ cents; two-inch block, solid, advanced 2½ cents, quoted 9½ cents; three-inch hollow block, same; and four-inch hollow block, 11 cents, an advance of 2 cents.

Several price changes are reported by the Dow Daily Building Reports in the current wholesale price lists for April as follows: Red cedar, 6-inch, is up $1, quoted $32.50; A is up $1, quoted $31, and B is up $1, quoted $24.50. In the interior wood department few changes have taken place, with these exceptions: Ash is up 5, quoted $75 and $80; basswood is up $9.50, quoted $64.50; cypress $2, quoted $65; hemlock, $3, quoted $33.50; Virginia base $3, quoted $33.50; poplar $5, quoted $68.50; spruce $2, in all sizes mill run, culls out; No. 1 clear, $5.50 and $7, quoted $60.50 and $65.

Experiments are under way in the cement industry to copy the German plan of manufacturing high-powered shells out of concrete. Tests show that the American product lends itself to this new application of this material as a war munition factor, and a plan is now being worked out to perfect a new system of forming the shells under heavy pressure, coating them with a thin veneer of metal so as to permit the shell rim to follow the rifling of the high-powered guns, so that to all intents and purposes the finished shell is of solid steel, but in reality is formed largely of concrete as a covering for high explosives.

The Portland Cement Association recently sent its local representative to California to study the construction methods of concrete shipbuilding, and there is in contemplation a plan to bring together all the concrete engineering profession in this vicinity for the purpose of establishing and perfecting the concrete shipbuilding industry in this harbor.

AMERICAN FUND NEEDS AID.

Organization Now in Charge of Americans in French Hospitals.

The following cable message was received yesterday at the New York branch of the American Fund for French Wounded, 73 Park Avenue, from its headquarters in Paris:

"American Red Cross has appointed the American Fund for French Wounded its agent for visiting American wounded in French hospitals. We are undertaking the work with great enthusiasm. Please transmit this news to all committees and have them assure the mothers of wounded boys that our friendship with the French makes us particularly fitted. This greatly enlarges our work."

Owing to the present situation in the war zone the American Fund for French Wounded is in need of immediate funds for its work among the French hospitals where American wounded are being cared for. Checks and money orders should be mailed to 73 Park Avenue.

Exhibition for Sandoz Mission.

Tomorrow afternoon will be the first of the gala Tuesdays at the New York Salon of Modern French Paintings, over which Mrs. Newbold Le Roy Edgar and Mrs. Robert Bacon are presiding at the former Vanderbilt residence, 677 Fifth Avenue, and which Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand came on from Washington especially to visit on Saturday. These paintings are under the auspices of Jules Ratzkowski, director of the Société des Artistes Françaises and the Société des Beaux Arts of Paris, and together with autographed posters are being shown for the benefit of the Sandoz Mission, the "Heroes Without a Halo" of France. Liberty bonds are to be sold very actively. Mrs. George F. Baker, Jr., having inaugurated this feature on Saturday. Miss Andree Bartlett is to sing, and the New York Navy Yard Band will play.

CHARITIES NEED $300,000.

Federation of Jewish Philanthropies Discusses Raising of Funds.

Means for meeting a deficit of $300,000 were discussed yesterday at a conference of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies at the Jewish Centre, 131 West Eighty-sixth Street. More than 300 men and women were present.

In his opening remarks, Felix M. Warburg, President of the federation, said that many who last year pledged $10 a year did not pay. "We have felt that by making a 5 per cent. cut in the budgets of societies we would do nobody any harm, because in many instances their activities have been reduced," said Mr. Warburg, "but we do not wish to make an additional reduction of the budget. Instead, we must devise some way to raise the money needed."

It was finally decided that all plans for raising the funds be placed in the hands of the directorate.

A meeting to institute a drive for 10,000 additional members for the Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary, 9-11 Montgomery Street, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Samuel R. Travis, 11 East Eighty-sixth Street, and was attended by 200 prominent orthodox Jews.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Two fairly strong anti-cyclones dominate the weather east of the Mississippi, one over the Canadian Maritime Provinces and the other over the upper Missouri Valley. Between these two anti-cyclones a trough of low pressure has caused numerous rains in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States, the Ohio Valley, and the lake region. In the South, especially along the East Gulf coast, the rains have been unusually heavy and they have been attended by severe thunderstorms. The temperature changes have been quite irregular in the areas of rainfall and it is slightly cooler, and in Atlantic coast districts slightly higher temperatures prevail.

Showery weather will prevail in the next forty-eight hours in Atlantic coast districts south of New England, also in the East Gulf States and Florida. A period of cooler weather will set in over the lake region and Ohio Valley Monday, which will bring somewhat lower temperatures in Atlantic coast districts Tuesday.

ORDER BY M'ADOO FORBIDS GIVING OUT LOAN TOTALS

The Secretary of the Treasury Wishes to Avert Danger of Overconfidence.

RULING MAY BE REVOKED

MANY BIG SUBSCRIPTIONS

Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank Takes $3,000,000 and Hamilton Trust of Brooklyn $1,600,000.

Wilson Subscribes $1,000 to the Loan at a Theatre

WASHINGTON, April 8.—When subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan were called for at a local theatre here tonight, the first subscriber was President Wilson, who occupied a box in the audience. Announcement that the President had taken $1,000 worth was followed by prolonged cheering.

Because of orders received from the Treasury Department in Washington yesterday forbidding the New York Federal Reserve Bank and the Liberty Loan Committee to make public any figures showing the totals of subscriptions filed it was impossible last night to measure the progress of the Third Liberty Loan campaign in this district. Previous to the receipt of this order it was learned unofficially, but on trustworthy authority, that the advices of subscriptions in hands of the Bond Division of the Reserve Bank early yesterday showed a total of $105,394,000. The difference between this figure and the $74,000,000 announced on Saturday night, represents subscriptions filed with the various banks in this district on that day, but reports of which did not reach the Reserve Bank until yesterday morning.

This total of $105,394,000, covering, as it does, Saturday's applications, shows an increase of about $5,000,000 compared with the $100,000,000 estimated published in THE TIMES of Sunday.

Loan "Thermometers" Discarded.

The Treasury Department's order advising the Liberty Loan organization not to announce any figures caused considerable confusion, and appeals were promptly sent to Washington suggesting that the order be rescinded or modified. Because of the ruling it was necessary to discontinue the use of all the loan "thermometers."

It was explained in a dispatch from Washington last night that the dangers of overconfidence in conducting the Liberty Loan campaign had prompted Secretary McAdoo to adopt the rule of not giving to the public statements of amounts of subscriptions during the appeal for support of the war by buying the bonds. It was said that during the previous campaign local jealousies were aroused and, it is believed, caused serious disadvantages. The rule, it is declared, is tentative and not final or permanent.

No official explanation of the order was authorized here, officers of the Reserve Bank saying that they were merely obeying instructions. The publication of subscriptions has been regarded by many as an effective stimulant of the campaign.

Order Strictly Obeyed.

The Publicity Department of the Liberty Loan Committee, in its desire to obey strictly the instructions issued in Washington, even refused to make public individual subscriptions filed by banks and corporations. It construed the order as placing a ban on all publicity having to do with figures. Notwithstanding the fact that a great many subscriptions of considerable size were filed yesterday, there were made available for publication only the following brief list, compiled from information received from various sources:

Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank	$3,000,000

ALLIES DECIDE ON NEW AIR PROGRAM

Britain to Make Battleplanes and United States Other Kind of Aircraft.

TO SPEED BIG GUN OUTPUT

Senate Committee to Make a Statement Covering Field of War Supply Production.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The Senate Military Affairs Committee worked until late tonight upon a statement, which is expected to be made public within the next two days, going into the entire production of war supplies, as developed from witnesses who have recently appeared before it.

One feature of the forthcoming report, it was said tonight, would be the substantiation of recent assertions in the Senate that only one airplane had been shipped to the American Army in France, while no more than thirty-seven—as Senator New stated on the Senate floor—would be in France by July 1 next. This statement, it is understood, was made before the committee by Major Gen. Squier, Chief Signal Officer of the Army, and Howard E. Coffin, Chairman of the Aircraft Production Board.

From General Squier, Mr. Coffin, and other aircraft experts the committee is understood to have been informed that arrangements have been perfected by which the manufacture of airplanes will be greatly speeded up within the next few weeks. But there is no assurance that America will have any appreciable equipment of airplanes in France until far toward the end of the Summer.

Liberty motor machines, the committee was informed, are not be used in battle planes, but will be utilized with heavy bombing planes and for those doing photographic and scouting work. The Government, it is understood, has adopted the British Rolls-Royce engine airplane for battle purposes, and 6,000 of these have been ordered for the American Army.

One point the Military Affairs Committee will bring out, it is reported, is that the United States is to turn out great numbers of bombing, scouting, and photographic planes for the Allies, so the latter may devote themselves to building battle planes.

The committee's report is to assume an encouraging tone, it is understood, as to future production by the United States, not alone as to airplanes, but other war devices. The necessity for ships to transport soldiers and equipment will be dwelt upon.

As to artillery production, witnesses before the committee have stated that everything was being done to speed up factories to the top notch. But, as evidencing the necessity for the utmost endeavor, it was pointed out to the committee today that the British, in the present German drive, have lost three times as much heavy artillery as the United States has constructed during the entire period of its entry in the war.

Machine gun manufacture is now progressing, the committee is informed, so that a considerable output may be expected within the next few months. The light artillery program is also said to be "promising."

BOLO CONFESSES, GETS A REPRIEVE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 8.—The expected has happened. It is officially announced this afternoon that Bolo Pacha, whose execution was understood as likely to take place this morning at Vincennes, made a statement last night regarding other pending treason cases, and his execution has been postponed so that his assertions can be verified.

Bolo's last hope of avoiding the death penalty appeared to have vanished yesterday morning when President Poincaré refused his final appeal against the sentence. During the day, however, Bolo's counsel, Albert Salles, informed the authorities that the condemned man wished to make a statement. Captain Bouchardon, on behalf of the court-martial, at once sent a representative to the Santé Prison and took down a statement from the convict's lips.

The nature of this statement has not been allowed to transpire except to the extent that it closely concerns other treason cases now pending. After reading over the statement Captain Bouchardon considered it sufficiently important to apply to General Dubail, Military Governor of Paris, under whose authority the execution would be carried out, for the prisoner to be respited for a sufficient time to allow his statements to be verified. This respite was immediately granted, and Bolo can look forward to another lease of life.

How long this respite will last will, of course, depend on the value of his statement. A conference took place this morning between Captain Bouchardon and other officials who conducted the case against Bolo, but the result has not yet been disclosed.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Monday, April 8.—Last night and early today the enemy's guns were firing heavily along parts of the British line. This morning, when I went south of the Somme, this bombardment continued. It is almost beyond doubt preparatory to another phase of the German offensive, in which the enemy may again attempt to drive a wedge between the British and the French. He still has large concentrations of troops north and south of the river, and as the days pass he is bringing more guns into position.

At the same time the Germans are demonstrating further north, by very heavy shellfire around Arras, and further north than that, near Armentières and La Bassée Canal, where they put over many gas shells last night, the possibility that they may make another strong attempt to turn the British defenses around Arras, while striking hard for Amiens, hoping by a success south of the Somme to make the British positions untenable north from Albert.

This is their obvious intention, clear as sunlight to the enemy; so we need make no mystery of it to ourselves. But there is a wide gulf between intention and achievement, and the German storm troops have learned very painful and tragic lessons lately, which have given pause to their high command. Nevertheless, the menace is serious and will be thwarted this time, as before, only by tremendous courage on the part of the British.

There was a heavy, wet mist this morning, amounting to a thick white fog over the low-lying ground. It was such a morning as that of March 21, when the German avalanche began to move. The gunfire in continuous thunder rolls made it seem certain to me that another great battle was beginning; but no reports had been received up to midday, and I could get no news of any important German action. But the storm of battle may break out again at any minute, and upon the issue of this next phase depend the enemy's hopes and our security.

Concerning German Morale.

April 7.—My observation of the tremendous sacrifice of men which the German high command has been making in its desperate efforts to win a decisive victory, which I have emphasized in previous dispatches, caused me to write something which has been misquoted against me.

My critics allege that I prophesied that the German morale would be too bad to warrant the Germans to undertake the great offensive which they began March 21. What I really said was that I did not believe that the morale of the German troops would withstand five months of a battle like that of Verdun, with its constant drain of blood, and that opinion I still hold—not because I underestimate the courage of the enemy, but because I believe the German soldiers will revolt against this abominable sacrifice of their manhood without a certain promise of victory, those which they have received having again and again proved illusory.

Germans Still Expect Victory.

For the moment they believe in an early victory and an early peace, but in a few weeks, when that faith has proved vain once more, there will be a great reaction, and their spirit will be sickened by the thought of all their dead and mangled men. Every day their losses are piling up, even when no big battles are fought. It often happens, as it did yesterday morning, that waves of men are seen assembling for attack and are dispersed before they begin an assault.

That was opposite Corbie, on the north bank of the Somme, and I went there yesterday to see what was happening. Nothing very much was happening, because of the breaking up of those waves, but the scene was strange enough, and to me fantastic, because I used to know old Corbie and its fine church with two tall towers which look down the broad and beautiful vista of the Somme toward Amiens when it was far behind the red edge of war. Now Corbie is just behind the British front line, and yesterday, when I went up to the left of it, bursts of wicked machine-gun fire swept from the ground about, gun flashes winked from its hillsides, and the enemy was in the Bois de Vaire, which looked down upon the Valley of the Somme from the opposite bank.

Above the river winding around Corbie is a ridge, to which the enemy is climbing from Marcelcave, and where he is close to Villers-Bretonneux, whose houses and unfinished square-towered church straggle along the western end of the ridge on the road to Amiens, away there to the right as I stood, with its great cathedral looming up mistily. The smoke of German shells rose from Villers-Bretonneux, and the air was filled with the high-pitched snarl of German shrapnel searching for the British air squadrons floating above this valley. There were seventeen British planes up at one moment as I looked up into the sky yesterday.

Every quarter of an hour or so the British machine guns opened fire with terrific tattoos of shots, but always they quieted down again, and no gray wolves debouched from the Bois de Vaire or came prowling down the road which runs like a white tape over the hillside from Villers-Bretonneux.

I talked with some gunner officers thereabouts, standing by their batteries ready for action. They were chatty fellows, having had some nights of sleep after their adventures on the way down from the Cambrai salient. They were pleased with their position in a sweet, clean country, which had not yet been churned up by shells, and looked at the slopes opposite and reckoned that if the enemy tried to come along them they would have wonderful targets.

British Cavalry in Action.

The Commander in Chief has mentioned the splendid work of the British cavalry in the recent fighting, and I am now able to write things which I wanted to write before, because in the first days of this battle I saw cavalry riding out to meet the enemy round about Ham and Guiscard, and afterward do patrol work below Delville Wood and Pozières. From March 22 onward they fought, mounted and dismounted, helped to stop gaps in the line and stem the German tide, charged Germans on foot and Germans on horseback, cleared woods and roads with machine guns and rifles, rode out in patrols to reconnoitre the enemy's position, chased German advanced guards out of villages, and acted as rearguards to the British infantry. Their losses were not light, but light for all the service they did in the hours and days and nights of grave peril. On March 22 they dismounted and held the Ollezy-Ham line when the enemy was bearing down in vast numbers, and some dragoons fought all night, covering the withdrawal of the tired troops. They could leave only a few men to look after the horses, and it was the men of a labor battalion who one night led their horses to the next position, each man with fifteen horses tied together on one rope, which was not an easy job on a dark night, with poor, frightened beasts.

The British cavalry had hard fighting around Guivry, and on the 26th they moved up to help the French, who were meeting the enemy hordes bearing down on Noyon. The British squadrons had their left flank exposed when they were ordered to hold Porquericot Ridge, on which the enemy was moving. They went at full speed, pressing their horses for-

Plans Peace by Combining Capital of Germany and Foes

COPENHAGEN, April 8.—The Berlin Tägliche Rundschau says that Mathias Erzberger, the Centrist leader, is planning a great propaganda in favor of international and economic peace.

His scheme includes agreements for the placing of British and American capital in German industries, so that at least half the money invested in German industries would be Anglo-American, while German money would, to a great extent, be invested in England.

He advocates also that the three countries should have identical labor legislation.

FRENCH FIGHT STUBBORNLY

But They Are Driven Across the River, Following the Loss of Folembray.

FOE IN SUPERIOR FORCE

But Paris Says His Progress Is Being Hampered and He Is Suffering Large Losses.

BERLIN, April 8, (via London.)—Continued successes in the operations against the French south of the Oise are reported from general headquarters.

Advancing toward the Ailette River, the German troops have driven the French to the western bank of the stream, following the taking of Pierremande and Folembray yesterday.

Heights to the east of Coucy-le-Château (southeast of Folembray) were taken by the Germans today. Another force, advancing from Barisis, has occupied Verneuil.

The night communication reads:

In continuation of our attack on the southern bank of the Oise we drove the enemy out of his strong positions on the heights east of Coucy-le-Château.

The day bulletin from headquarters reads:

On the battlefront on both sides of the Somme the fighting activity remained limited to artillery duels. Local attacks by the British in Hangard Wood and by the French near Grivesnes failed, with heavy losses.

On the southern bank of the Oise our successes of Saturday forced the enemy to evacuate parts of his positions between Bichancourt and Barisis on the night of April 6-7. Yesterday we continued our attacks, and threw the enemy back to the western bank of the Ailette, after having captured Pierremande and Folembray.

Enemy columns retreating from Bichancourt along the Oise were attacked on the flank by our machine-gun fire from the northern bank of the river, and were shot down with the heaviest losses.

Our troops, advancing on the eastern border of Coucy Wood and by way of Barisis, stormed a hillock northeast of Folembray and advanced as far as Verneuil. The number of captured prisoners has increased to over 2,000.

FALL BACK, FIGHTING HARD.

French Troops Hampering the Foe, Says Paris.

PARIS, April 8. — Heavy pressure continues to be exerted by the German forces in the region between the Oise and Ailette Rivers, southeast and south of Chauny.

Here the advanced sections of the French troops, according to the night bulletin of the War Office, are resisting and hampering the advance of the enemy and causing heavy losses.

Guns on both sides between Montdidier and Noyon were engaged in lively duels today, but there was no infantry action.

The day report recorded violent artillery actions along the line of the Hindenburg offensive, especially on the left bank of the Oise, and told of the activity of French patrols in bringing in prisoners.

The night report of the War Office reads:

During the course of the day the enemy pressure continued north of the Ailette River in the region of the lower

AMSTERDAM, April 8.—The German newspapers so far received here publish only a summary of President Wilson's Baltimore speech, and, for the most part, reserve comment until the full text of his speech is available.

The Vossische Zeitung speaks of the wide gulf between President Wilson's words and deeds, and says that where the President confesses his conversion to the policy of force his words have a theatrical sound and lack the force of conviction.

The Tägeliche Rundschau says:

"Our readiness for peace simply does not exist for President Wilson. He accuses us of striving for world dominion, although the statesmen and representative assemblies of the Central Powers have repeatedly emphasized their self-restraint and desire for peace."

The Vorwärts says:

"The hopes placed in their great ally across the Atlantic, with her mighty resources, buoy up our enemies and drive them to ever-renewed resistance. There is now no other solution for the world confusion than a complete German victory also in the west."

The Kruppe' organ, the Eseper Allgemeine, considers that the American danger will become acute for Germany when peace is in sight.

"Meanwhile," it adds, "our diplomatic position will be improved. As a neutral the United States would have been very dangerous to us, because we would be apt to overestimate her strength, which now, as an enemy, we know. The danger from America will be largely diminished if our negotiators firmly refuse to budge an inch from the fundamental position we have gained by terrible sacrifices."

The Frankfurter Zeitung admits that America is capable of great achievement but needs time, which the Entente cannot afford to lose.

AMERICANS ROUT GERMAN PATROL

TWO RAIDS ALSO REPULSED

Enemy in One Chased Back and Forced Out of His First Line of Trenches.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, April 8, (Associated Press.)—A large German patrol attempted a surprise attack on the American outposts in the sector northwest of Toul early this morning, but was dispersed without being able to reach any of the American positions.

A Corporal in a listening post saw the Germans approaching. He waited until they were within a few yards of him and then challenged. The enemy answered with rifle fire, whereupon the American outposts opened with heavy machine gun and automatic fire, scattering the Germans and driving them back to their own lines.

A violent artillery duel went on all through the night along the whole length of the American front. The Germans threw more shells into the American positions than in any similar period for the last few months. The American batteries replied vigorously.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, April 7, (Associated Press.)—On the front northwest of Toul Friday night the Germans attempted two raids, but both were repulsed. American infantrymen went out of their trenches on the second occasion and chased the Germans from the German first line trenches into the support trenches. Details of the action were made public in the following official report issued tonight:

"The enemy raided our trenches at two points. The first attack was repulsed easily. In the second the enemy was allowed to reach our wire entanglements. Then our fire opened, and a moment later the American infantrymen rushed out in attack, driving back the foe. The pursuit was continued until the first enemy trenches were emptied and the Germans had been driven back to their support trenches.

"Enemy artillery activity was followed by extremely active shelling by our heavy artillery, which silenced two enemy batteries."

Walter Kernan, overseas Commissioner of the Knights of Columbus; his assistant, J. Bennett Nolan of Reading, Penn., and Major James Connolly of New York, representing the Catholic Hierarchy of America, called on General Pershing at General Headquarters today to outline the work which the Knights of Columbus are starting in France. General Pershing offered every facility to expedite the work, and promised the hearty co-operation of the army authorities.

Mr. Kernan announced that temporary headquarters already had been established in Paris and that eighteen secretaries, who arrived last week, had been assigned to places at the main debarkation ports and with the field forces. Additional secretaries, he said, were on the way from the United States.

LAST STRUGGLE NEAR, PARIS THINKS

Confident That the Allies Will Withstand the Germans' Supreme Effort.

HIGH FAITH IN WILSON

President's Latest Speech Inspires Soldiers, Already Fired by Foch's Genius.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Monday, April 8.—With the greatest military assault in recorded history proceeding within a shorter distance from the city than that of Trenton from New York, and itself under constant shellfire from the battlefront, Paris has borne the ordeal as serenely as the sculptured Venus de Milo, and enters the fourth week with increased confidence.

The fact that the German offensive has been held practically stationary for two weeks furnishes one source of encouragement. Another is the faith in Foch's leadership. A third is the cumulative evidence of German exhaustion. Germany is making a huge demonstration in Picardy, and may still strike savagely at the allied line, but she will never again be as strong as three weeks ago. Her force spends itself like the shoreward wash of a receding tide.

But perhaps the most potent cause of confidence is President Wilson's clarion call which has infused new energy at the front and behind the lines. A definite feeling has been created that "the last quarter of an hour" is approaching, and that the Allies can stick it out.

As one looks back over the thrilling and perilous three weeks one sees that the turning point came with the command being taken over by the Generalissimo. As in every other campaign, Foch has shown himself a master workman.

The battle of Agincourt was fought a few miles back of what is now the British front. In that battle the English sent a bugler to challenge the French to come on and strike the first blow. Far different is war today. Stealth has superseded chivalry. The Germans won the first round because they could hide in the low-lying mist, and perhaps the English lost because they were not prepared for crawling, snake-like methods.

A story that makes one weep for the fine but ineffective courage of the best fighters is that of the glorious 51st Division, composed largely of the Black Watch and Seaforth Highlanders. Astride of the Cambrai-Bapaume road they looked toward Cambrai for the oncoming Germans, who crept finally from the direction of Bapaume, and the first the gallant Scotch knew German machine guns were shooting them down from behind.

BRITISH UNDER HEAVY FIRE

German Guns Began Intense Bombardment Sunday Night.

INFANTRY IS QUIESCENT

LONDON, April 8.—This has been a day of very heavy shelling of the British line by the German artillery, but without any infantry attacks.

The hostile gunfire has been especially severe around Bucquoy, (midway between Albert and Arras,) according to Field Marshal Haig's report tonight.

The German artillery really began its renewed activity last night, and this increased along the entire British front.

A slight gain of ground on the south bank of the Somme to the east of Vaire is recorded by the day report of the War Office.

Except for hostile artillery activity on different parts of the battle front, and especially in the neighborhood of Bucquoy, there is nothing of special interest to report.

The day bulletin of the War Office reads:

We advanced our line slightly during the night on the south bank of the Somme, east of Vaire-sous-Corbie.

North of the Somme a few prisoners and a machine gun were captured by us in the neighborhood of Neuville-Vitasse.

Heavy hostile gas shelling has taken place also between Lens and La Bassée Canal and east of Armentières.

Like Prelude to Big Attack.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 8, (Associated Press.)—Intense artillery work was carried out by the Germans at various points along the British battle front throughout last night and this morning.

North of the River Scarpe and south of the Somme River German guns conducted this morning a heavy bombardment, such as heretofore has indicated an impending attack.

From 8 o'clock last night until midnight the enemy heavily bombarded with gas shells the area between Cité Ste. Emilie and La Bassée Canal, in the Lens sector.

The Germans also threw large quantities of gas east of Armentières.

Throughout yesterday the German gunfire was unusually heavy in the region of Arras.

Late last night the German guns also were very active in the area south of Villers-Bretonneux, below the Somme. Again this morning at 4:50 o'clock the German gunners opened a terrific fire southwest of Hangard Wood, in the same area.

POUNDING AT MANY POINTS.

Germans Particularly Anxious to Extend the Bucquoy Salient.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 7, (Associated Press.)—Attacks and counterattacks continue to spring along the British battlefront. While none has seemed large, compared with the intense conflicts of the first days of the German offensive, yet all are important in that they represent the foundation for bigger events.

Twice last evening and again this morning the Germans undertook to advance their lines at points north and south of Albert, and each time they failed.

At 8 o'clock this morning a considerable enemy force advanced for an attack in the vicinity of Bucquoy, north of Albert. The Germans were seen while still a mile away and the British artillery and machine guns put down such a barrage among them that the assault was stopped. Afterward the enemy reformed his forces and made another effort, but this was checked without the use of infantry.

An attack delivered last evening southwest of Albert, where the enemy had been battling determinedly to get a strong grip on the Albert-Amiens Railway. Under cover of a heavy machine gun barrage the German infantry surged forward against the British line, but was met with such a withering rifle and machine gun fire that it was compelled to retire.

Another onslaught was attempted near Serre, south of Hebuterne. Two short but intense periods of barrage fire were put down off the British defenses. At 7:30 o'clock the German infantry rushed forward in force. As the Germans advanced they were caught in a tornado of British artillery fire which plowed through their ranks and completely smashed them.

The German efforts at Bucquoy today near Serre were continuations of their attempts to get themselves out of a bad position in this region, where they have been since the big drive was stopped.

At this point the Germans are holding a very sharp salient which bulges out into British territory along a line roughly represented by Bucquoy, Hebuterne, Colincamps, Auchonvillers, and Hamel. The salient is somewhat saucer shaped, the outer edge being on high ground. Upon these elevations the British sat down at the end of their retirement and since then have defied the enemy to dislodge them.

Within the salient is an inhospitable zone which formed a part of No Man's Land in the first battle of the Somme. Not only is the ground shell torn, but the whole sector is dominated by British machine guns, which send never-ending streams of bullets swirling down into the enemy camps, which present excellent targets.

If the Germans were to start the second phase of their grand offensive now and were forced to "kick off" from their present position in this salient, they would encounter great difficulties in maintaining satisfactory communications across the desert which lies back of their front line. They need the high ground on the edge of their saucer before they can begin a big attack, so that they can get their guns forward. Otherwise the artillery would be outdistanced and everything would depend upon the infantry.

It was because of this situation that attacks were made Friday by the Germans. Four fresh divisions were brought up for this operation, and a huge number of guns were brought into play, especially over the back areas. Considerable quantities of gas were thrown into the vicinity of Fonquevillers, indicating that the Germans did not intend to try to advance to a great depth, since this gas hangs about for a long time.

The enemy was simply trying to get a hold on the dominating ridges. They failed to advance at most points about the salient, and even lost a stretch of ground by a counterattack by the British between Hebuterne and Rossignol Wood, where the British pushed forward about 200 yards.

At Bucquoy the Germans had some success, and got a footing in some places, but their attack as a whole was a failure. Their casualties were very heavy, because of the dominating positions held by British machine gunners and riflemen.

The British counterattack at Aveluy Wood, south of Mesnil, yesterday was an entire success, and the old positions were regained. The men who went through this fight say that the Germans lost three killed to one for the British. It was a desperate fight. The British stormed the wood after battling forward with machine guns and rifles and then continued the battle with hand grenades and bombs. The Germans clung desperately to their positions but were gradually forced to fall back, leaving many dead.

Prisoners, captured by the British when Ayette was taken Wednesday, say that the casualties among the German officers and non-commissioned officers have been very heavy since the beginning of the offensive. The situation is so bad regarding non-commissioned officers that the higher command has been bringing back into line those previously combed out because of age or wounds.

A German airman, just taken prisoner, was formerly a schoolmaster. He said that the British had more and better airplanes than the Germans, and this accounts for the fact that the British aviators did far more work over the enemy lines than the Germans did. He said that the Germans could not run the risk of wasting machines in this sort of warfare.

The schoolmaster was convinced firmly that the war would end this year. While he did not say so directly, he implied that he thought the Germans would wear the Allies out, for he insisted that the Germans would keep on attacking.

HINDENBURG WAS CONFIDENT.

Our Work Requires Only Time, He Told Kaiser as Battle Began.

AMSTERDAM, April 8.—Karl Rosner, war correspondent of the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger, says that Field Marshal von Hindenburg, in the course of a report to Emperor William on March 21, the day the present battle began, remarked:

"We must wait. A battle is a living thing. We must allow time for everything to mature. Our plan is devised on a great scale. Our work will be effective. It requires only time."

American Officer's Estimate of the Casualties.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, April 8, (Associated Press.)—An American officer who has returned from the battlefields of northern France, where he has been virtually since the beginning of the German offensive, estimates that the Germans have lost at least 300,000 men in killed, wounded and missing.

This officer was formerly in the British Army, and is familiar with conditions.

Coucy Forest. The advanced sections of our troops resisted and hindered the advance of the enemy, who was in greatly superior numbers, inflicting upon him heavy losses.

On the Somme front, between Montdidier and Noyon, there was no infantry action, but the two artilleries displayed spirited activity.

The day report of the War Office says:

French patrols were very active, bringing in prisoners.

FRENCH GUNS AND MEN ARE STILL COMING UP

Highways Behind Montdidier Dotted with Columns of Men and War Material.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, April 7.—There was a premature touch of Summer in the air of the battlefield west of Montdidier yesterday afternoon. A few showers had laid the dust that whitens the hands and faces as well as the blue coats of the troops marching up or coming up by motor wagons, so that they look like bakers.

Instead of showing rolling gray clouds rising from creeping columns the highways were dotted with serpentine columns of men and horses, hooded supply carts, lumbering lorries, guns and caissons, all making for places immediately behind the front.

Light ambulance cars dashed arnund the slower vehicles and leaped ahead toward the dressing stations. High above a few airscouts swam and sparkled against tha cloudy blue.

This region of Santerre consists of high plateaux, divided by deep valleys, the largest of which, and the streams, railroads, and highways with them, gravitate toward Amiens.

There are no fields in the English sense, for there are no hedges, but an open expanse, patched alternately with reddish brown, where the land has just been plowed for beets and with green, where the young corn is springing up. It is a little broken with orchards and small woods, now richly bedded with anemones and cowslips.

Thousands of young men, carrying rifles and heavy packs, tramp daily through these flowery woods, and hundreds trickle back by the same ways with the devilry of war stamped forever upon their bodies and minds.

The railway from Clermont by St. Just to Amiens, which is the enemy's immediate objective, lay a mile behind us. Some shells that wheezed overhead may have been intended for it, but the traffic goes on, thanks to the drivers and guards, who are as good soldiers as others.

The front stretched invisible behind the ridges that run down to the Avre from Rouvrel, which is north by west of Mailly-Raineval and Sauvillers, through Griveanes and Cantigny to near Mesnil-St. Georges, and Montchel, where it crosses the river.

At the latter point a sharp attack was repulsed yesterday morning. There and at Cantigny and Grivesnes it is evident that the Germans have at length got some of their heavy guns at work, but in artillery we have at present a decided superiority. In infantry, too, the terms are becoming more equal. There will be no call on the French side henceforth for one man to stand against anything from four to ten.

USED 25 DIVISIONS VAINLY.

Germans Beaten by French, Mustering Only a Third as Many.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 7, (Associated Press.)—Twenty-five divisions have been used by the Germans in four days in their efforts to break through the French line and reach the railroad running south from Amiens. All attacks have been checked by the wonderful resistance of the French, some of whom were thrown into the line as soon as they arrived on the battlefield.

The Germans are obtaining only insignificant results in their attempts to advance compared with the number of troops engaged, which is at least three times more than the number of French defenders.

The cheerful confidence with which the French troops go into action is most remarkable. They feel they are better than the enemy and make light of the German superiority in numbers. The French command continues to work on the principle of using the smallest possible number of troops to stay the German rush, thus retaining the reserves for possible attacks elsewhere.

Powerful trench mortars have made their appearance behind the German infantry, but up to this time these have not influenced the situation to any extent. In some cases the guns have been unable to approach within an effective range. On the other hand, an enormous number of machine guns pour an intense barrage into the French lines and at the same time German infantry try under cover of this fire to get close to the French line in small groups and establish pockets from which to leap forward at the proper moment.

This procedure was quickly neutralized by the French, and the Germans are now resuming massed attacks in which their men come under the direct fire of French machine guns, rifle grenades, and 75s, which inflict terrible losses. The 75s do terrific execution, cutting wide lanes through the enemy ranks.

The German commanders appeared to pay little attention to this slaughter, their aim being to reach the objective whatever the cost.

Mont Renaud, near Noyon, saw repeated attacks from the Germans throughout Saturday, but all were futile. This hill was the first point where the French barred the German advance through the Oise Valley toward Compiegne and Paris. When the Germans first swept down from Noyon the hill changed hands repeatedly. The ground gives striking evidence of the fearful nature of the battle in the number of German bodies that can be seen. Since March 30 the French have not budged. In fact, they have gained some ground on the northern slopes of the hill. The Germans occupied two hills overlooking Mont Renaud, which possess little practical value, although they afford a view of what is going on in Noyon and slightly beyond that town.

ALLIES' POSITION IMPROVING.

British Review Says Recent German "Successes" Have No Value.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Every day finds the Allies in a better position to resist with definite success the great German offensive, according to an official review issued today by the British Military Attaché here. French, British, and American reserves are pouring in daily to help check the German drive, the review asserts.

"The opening of the third week of fighting east of Amiens," says the Attaché, "finds the position of the Allies steadily improving.

"A very strong effort by the enemy to drive down the Somme to Amiens, during which he used about twenty-five divisions on a front of a few miles, was stopped last week with complete success; only in one place was the German line advanced, and then only to a depth of less than a mile on a narrow front.

"North of Albert the British advance beat off repeated and vicious attacks without bending.

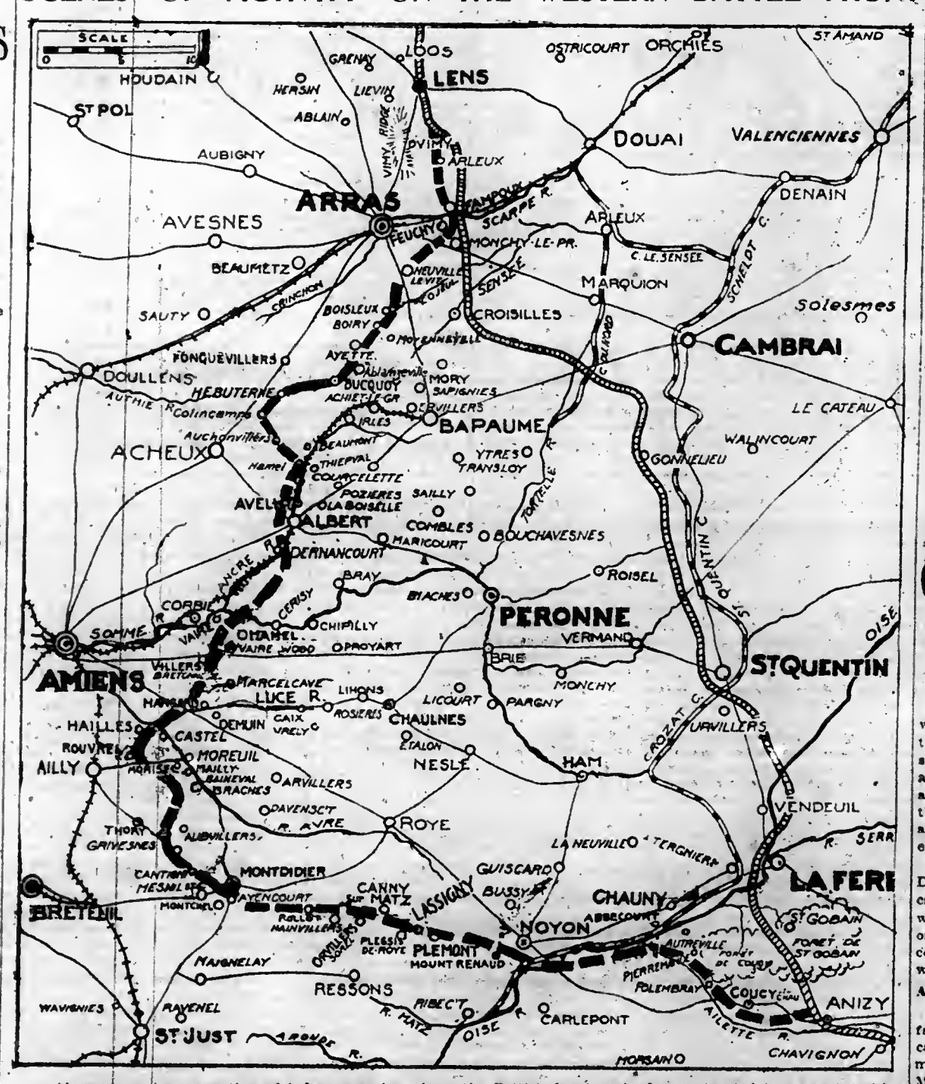
"Near Montdidier the French withdrew a short distance to strong positions. The enemy is nowhere within nine miles of Amiens; he is still three miles distant at his furthest point of advance from the main Amiens-Paris railway, the cutting of which would bring him no real victory. The best proof of his discomfiture is the use that he is making of minor incidents for window-dressing purposes.

"A short time ago in the course of the steady advance of the British army in Palestine a small force was thrown across the Jordan to cut the Hedjaz Railway. Its work done, it retired from the waterless waste through which the railway runs and rejoined the army. This retirement was advertised by the Germans as a triumph for the Turks, who are alleged to have thrown the British force back over the Jordan.

"Similarly, the Germans are gloating today over the capture of Pierremande and Folembray, in the neighborhood of Chauny and the forest of Coucy. As a matter of fact, these 'successes' are valueless. Such advance as they imply is at the extreme south of the battle zone, somewhere forty or fifty miles from Amiens. Its tactical value is no greater than its strategic value. Pierremande and Folembray are only outposts of the real French position in that neighborhood, and there is no reason to believe that they were more than lightly held.

"Doubtless the Germans will make further great efforts before they acknowledge the failure of their great Spring drive, but it is safe to say that each day that passes finds the Allies in a better position to resist with definite success. Each day their reserves, which are already considerable, are being swollen by fresh contingents from their own armies and that of the United States."

SCENES OF ACTIVITY ON THE WESTERN BATTLE FRONT



Almost complete cessation of infantry action along the British front yesterday contrasted in marked fashion with the heavy German gunfire that developed at many points. The artillery went into violent action during Sunday night, and was of such a severe character during the day as to impress unofficial observers with the belief that an important attack might be imminent.

The most severe German fire was in the neighborhood of Bucquoy, where the Germans have been persistently active of late in an endeavor to better their positions in the salient, embracing an area commanded by ridges, from which they are severely punished by the British guns.

On the French front the only noteworthy activity, outside of heavy artillery duels at various points, was in the region below the Oise, in the Chauny sector. Here the Germans in large force are pressing the French back to the Ailette River. At some points Petain's forces are apparently on the western bank of the stream already, but they are fighting a retarding action as they fall back.

The War Situation

The little village of Bucquoy has figured in recent dispatches more frequently than any other point in the battle zone. It has been the scene of endless attacks and counterattacks, of the bitterest fighting in all of this great German effort. And the fight is still going on incessantly.

In order to understand the importance of this point we must regard the German plan as a whole. Briefly it was to reach the sea and cut the British and French in two, provided that this could not be done before the sea was reached. But this cannot be successfully done on a narrow front. To push a wedge up the Somme through Amiens would be to invite disaster—a disaster which might well be accompanied by the capture of thousands of men and of much heavy artillery. As they would go forward in such a wedge, their lines would constantly grow longer, the point of the wedge sharper, the danger of a break in one of the sides greater.

This was not at all the German plan. They never expected to forge their way to the sea through any such configuration of the battle line. If they go it must be on a wide front or not at all. They do not dare do otherwise.

In order to accomplish this, in order that the salient which they have created south of the Somme may become a strategical salient rather than a tactical one, the British line north of the Somme must give way. It will not do if the wedge is widened through a giving way of the French line along the Oise. This might be effective if Paris were the objective, but it is not. The objective is the sea, and the further the Germans go to the south the further away from the sea they get. Only a break in the British line will save the situation for them. If we follow the British line north from the Somme and review in our minds the efforts that have been made to force it, we shall have an idea of what the Germans have been doing and why. The angle between the Somme and the Ancre brook has been the scene of heavy fighting. The Germans have made every effort to cut their way through this angle—a bloody angle—and so turn the British positions from Albert north. This they have failed to accomplish. They have stormed time after time Albert itself in an effort to break the British grip on the west bank of the Ancre, and have also failed totally. They have tried to force the British back from Bucquoy, and have again failed, but refuse to acknowledge their failure and are still fighting. The reason for this is found in the British positions about Arras—particularly in Vimy Ridge and the heights of Notre Dame de Lorette.

The hills immediately back of Bucquoy make excellent defensive fighting ground. While the floor of the valley of the Ancre is only about 60 meters above the sea, behind Bucquoy the hills rise to 150 and 160 meters. It is the highest bit of ground either to the north or the south. It stands, then, as a guard to the line along the Ancre to the south, and, what is more important, to the southern approaches to Vimy Ridge and Notre Dame de Lorette. If Bucquoy holds out as it has done during the many difficult days since it formed part of the British battle line, the main positions to the north are safe from attack except from some position north of Lens. If Bucquoy gives way, if the Germans drive the British back beyond their old positions before the battle of the Somme, Vimy Ridge will be taken in reverse, and may fall again into German hands.

It is Bucquoy, then, which is holding up the entire German advance. By this is not meant the village itself, but the area of which Bucquoy is the centre. The village is only a shambles, torn to pieces by artillery fire. But the hills still exist, and these are the object of all of the Bucquoy fighting.

Falling at Bucquoy, what will be Germany's next move? The indications are that what she tried in the south and failed to accomplish, she will try in the north in the hope that on a new front her efforts will prove more effective. As this is being written, the British front from the Scarpe to Armentières is under heavy shell fire. This may mean but little. On the other hand it may presage a heavy infantry attack north of Lens. If this proves to be the case the German effort will be made for the purpose of driving a loop about the Arras positions in order that they may be flanked. It is doubtful whether Germany will ever make another frontal attack here. Her last defeat on this part of the line was most conclusive. A hundred thousand men on a ten-mile front made no impression, accomplished nothing but an enormous swelling of the casualty list. This lesson is one which cannot be ignored.

Therefore we may expect the German high command, if it attempts to take Arras at all, to follow the more usual German method of enveloping it by attacks on the flanks. The attack on the southern flank has failed, the next move may come on the north. Arras is the necessary link which binds the entire grandiose German plan together. If they fail at Arras their plan collapses.

A new front has developed in the course of the last two days, the line south and southeast of Chauny. This may mean a diversion of the entire German scheme, but much more probable is it that it has no particular meaning in itself, only an effort to alleviate the general disappointment in Germany at the failure of the army to go ahead as per schedule. It was a logical place to strike if effect was all that was desired, since obviously some of the French reserves must have been drawn from this sector, heretofore entirely inactive. The results which have been attained are not such as to cause the slightest uneasiness. Their effect on the battle of Picardy is nil. The lower forest of Coucy has been occupied by the Germans. Eventually the French may have to fall back behind the Oise Canal. But even so no immediate damage will result.

stincts that guide action before intellectual processes can get into motion.

Foch, it is plain, is using his men with a miser's care. Not that he lacks audacity and willingness to spend where it is profitable, but he does not throw masses needlessly into action, and he always fights today with tomorrow uppermost in his mind."

The fortunes of battle have put this great General with his matchless men and material at the precise point he would probably have chosen. The line held by the French menaces the German left flank. Give the enemy all that is due him, and still he cannot be happy. Every time he reaches his hand toward Amiens he endangers his balance, already difficult to maintain, and yet he must keep extending himself or quit and fall.

How much more strain will the tensile strength of his line stand without breaking? When will Foch pierce his flank with his sharp sword, as he did from Chalons in the Marne battle?

In the early stage of the battle victory and defeat were disguised in terms of square miles. Amiens was the stake. It is so no longer. The uppermost question now is exhaustion—which side can kill or save the most.

ward to something like a gallop, and the infantry soldiers cheered at the sight of this living tide of fine men and fine beasts streaming over the alopes. The enemy was already on the ridge, but the cavalry held the southern side of it, stopping the enemy from gaining the height.

When the allied line withdrew to the Drielte River it was necessary for the cavalry to conform to this movement, which they did, with the enemy again on their left flank, so that the Lancers, Hussars, and Canadian cavalry were under furious machine gun fire.

A Charge That Ranks With Balaklava

After supporting the British infantry near Marcelcave dismounted cavalry, with one mounted squadron, made a gallant attack through Moreuil Wood and cleaned out the enemy. Afterward, however, it was again filled with Germans who had many machine guns, and the cavalry men were again asked to clear it. It was a perilous task, for two battalions of the enemy held the wood, and their machine gun fire swept through the glades; but in this wood of Moreuil on the morning of April 1 British cavalry performed a feat as fine as the Balaklava charge, and this also should be made into a ballad and learned by heart.

Twelve hundred men who had been riding through the night went forward in three waves and charged that dark wood next morning at a hard gallop. The first wave rode to the edge of the wood, and the second to the centre, and the third wave went right through to the other side, riding through the enemy and over his machine guns and in the face of a hail of bullets from hidden machines. They cleared the wood of Moreuil and brought back prisoners and thirteen machine guns, but there were many empty saddles, and many men and horses fell.

That was the finest exploit of the British cavalry, but elsewhere it did splendid work, and everywhere the men were gallant and cool, as when some of the dragoons came under a heavy shrapnel fire near Gentille, and many men had to shoot their wounded horses to put them out of their agony.

GERMAN COMMANDERS SHOW FEAR OF FAILURE

General Staff's Labored Explanations Betray the Growing Dismay of the Public.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—According to a digest of German opinion on the situation in Picardy, given in an official dispatch received today from France, the German General Staff is instructing military correspondents to reassure the public, and with overemphasized explanations is betraying the dismay of the masses at the prospect of a check of the great offensive. The dispatch follows:

"Among the descriptions of the war and the notices in the newspapers the different currents of opinion produced in Germany by the offensive can be defined. There is first the anxiety caused by the extent of the losses. The General Staff charges the Wolff Bureau and the military correspondents to reassure the public and to put them on guard against the enemy communiqués.

"The Staff no longer maintains, as on the first day, that the losses of the assailants have been kept at a minimum, but it now affirms that they are normal and proportionate to the results obtained.

"Then there is the anxiety which the halt of the offensive excites. The General Staff explains to the impatient public what difficulties the transports are encountering in supplying the army—difficulties which have been augmented by the bad weather. It recalls the success of the preceding days, and describes the demoralization of the enemy armies and the exhaustion of their reserves.

Statements of German prisoners have convinced French military critics that the real objective of the great German offensive was Paris, and that, so far from expecting checks which would make Amiens the goal of bloody and indecisive battles, the Teutonic high command sent its forces forward prepared for rapid advances in open warfare.

KAISER INSPECTS GERMAN SUPERGUN

AMSTERDAM, April 8. — Emperor William on March 23 inspected the gun with which the Germans are bombarding Paris, says Karl Rosner, war correspondent of the Lokal-Anzeiger of Berlin.

It looks more like an enormous gray crane than a real gun, according to the correspondent, and can throw a shell for a distance of 130 kilometers (80.6 miles.)

Firing a shorter distance than that on March 23, he adds, exactly 183 seconds were required for a shell to reach Paris.

PARIS, April 8.—The official announcement yesterday that no casualties resulted from that day's bombardment of Paris by the Germans, says the Petit Parisien, was not in strict accordance with the facts. It affirms that there were victims—eight chickens.

WE make some strong claims for the Noiseless Typewriter. We claim it represents an invention as revolutionary as the typewriter itself—the greatest single business improvement of the last twenty years.

You owners of business—you executives—you stenographers—you know what it is to try to think in competition with the typewriter's incessant click, click, bang and clatter.

There is no noise to muffle in the Noiseless because the noise is never created. The Noiseless alone prints by pressure and not by blow—an entirely new typewriter principle. Write, call or 'phone for a demonstration.

SAYS CLEMENCEAU REOPENED PARLEYS

They Had Been "Broken Off" Before He Became Premier, Vienna Asserts.

INSISTS FRANCE MADE OFFER

Basis for a General Peace Was Sought, According to Austrian Statement.

FRENCH PREMIER REJOINS

VIENNA, April 8, (via London.)—Premier Clemenceau in January of this year took up discussions with Austria respecting the possibility of peace negotiations, says an official statement issued here today in reply to the official denials at Paris that France had taken the initiative in the exchanges.

The statement says the negotiations were begun when Alexander Ribot was Premier of France, that they were broken off, and again taken up by M. Clemenceau.

AMSTERDAM, April 8.—The statements of the French Government and ex-Premier Painlevé that it was Austria, not France, which took the initiative resulting in the conversations in Switzerland concerning the possibility of opening peace negotiations are denied by the Austrian Government, which insists that France took the first step. An official statement issued in Vienna says that the accounts given by Premier Clemenceau and M. Painlevé of the meetings in Switzerland between Count Revertata, the Austrian representative, and Major Armand, representing France, deviate from the facts in many important particulars. It asserts that the initiative was taken by the intermediary acting in the name of the French Government.

Text of Vienna Statement.

The official Austrian statement says:

"In contrast to the first brief declaration of Premier Clemenceau, in which he gave the lie to Foreign Minister Czernin, it is observed with satisfaction that M. Clemenceau's statement of April 6 admits that discussions in regard to the question of peace took place between two confidential agents of Austria-Hungary and France. The account given by M. Clemenceau of the initiation and course of these negotiations, and likewise the statement by M. Painlevé on the same subject, however, deviate in many important particulars and to such a degree from the facts that a detailed correction of the French communication appears to be necessary.

"In July, 1917, Count Revertata was requested by an intermediary in the name of the French Government to state whether he was in a position to receive a communication from that Government to the Government of Austria-Hungary. When Count Revertata, after having obtained the sanction of the Austro-Hungarian Government, replied in the affirmative to this inquiry, in the same month—July, 1917—Major Armand was charged with such communication by the then French Premier, Ribot. He arrived on Aug. 7, 1917, at Count Ravertata's private residence in Freiburg, the Count being distantly related to him.

"Major Armand then addressed to Count Revertata a question as to whether discussions between France and Austria-Hungary were possible. Thus the initiative for these discussions was taken from the French side.

"Count Revertata reported to the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister that this question had been put on instructions of the French Government, and the Minister thereupon requested Count Revertata to enter into discussions with the French confidential agent, and in the course of these discussions to establish whether by this means a basis for bringing about a general peace could be secured.

"On Aug. 22 and 23 Count Revertata entered into discussions with Major Armand, which, however, as Premier Clemenceau quite correctly declares, yielded no result. The negotiations thereupon were broken off.

Parleys Resumed Last January.

"The Clemenceau version that the discussions between Revertata and Armand were proceeding on his entry into office is incorrect. Not until January, 1918, did Armand, this time on instructions from Clemenceau, again get in touch with Revertata. The thread had been broken in August, 1917, and was therefore again taken up by Clemepceau himself in January, 1918.

"From this fresh contact there resulted the discussions referred to in the official communiqué of April 4, 1918. It is, however, correct that Count Revertata handed to Major Armand on Feb. 22, 1918, the memorandum regarding which Premier Clemenceau only cites the first sentence and which confirms that in the discussions with Armand, which had taken place in August, 1917, Revertata was charged with the task of finding out whether proposals were obtainable from the French Government, which had addressed to Austria-Hungary an offer of a basis for a general peace, and also whether they would be such as Austria-Hungary could bring to the knowledge of her allies.

"It, therefore, entirely corresponded with the facts when Count Czernin in his speech on April 2 last declared that Premier Clemenceau, some time before the beginning of the western offensive, had inquired of me whether I was prepared for negotiations and on what basis.

"The accusation of lying brought against Count Czernin by M. Clemenceau cannot therefore be maintained, even in the restricted sense made by the present communiqué of the French Government.

Admits Other Peace Manoeuvres.

"Nothing is known to the Austro-Hungarian Government of entreaties for an alleged separate peace with which the Austro-Hungarian Government worried the Governments of Rome, Washington, and London. When M. Clemenceau asks the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister whether he remembers that two months before the Revertata affair—that is, about a year ago—an attempt of a like nature was made by a personage of far higher rank, Count Czernin does not hesitate to reply in the affirmative. But for the sake of completeness and entire correctness it should be added that this attempt also led to no result.

"So much for the establishment of the facts. For the rest, it need only be remarked that Count Czernin, for his part would see no reason to deny it, if, in this or any similar case, he had taken the initiative, because, in contrast to M. Clemenceau, he believes that it cannot be a matter for reproach for a Government to make attempts to bring about an honorable peace, which would liberate all peoples from the terrors of the present war.

"The dispute raised by M. Clemenceau has, moreover, diverted attention from the real kernel of Count Czernin's statement. The essence of this statement was not so much who suggested the discussions undertaken before the beginning of the western offensive, but who caused their collapse. And M. Clemenceau up to the present has not denied that he refused to enter upon negotiations on the basis of the renunciation of the reacquisition of Alsace-Lorraine."

"DILUTED LIE," REPLIES PREMIER CLEMENCEAU

PARIS, April 8.—The office of Premier Clemenceau has issued the following statement:

"A diluted lie is still a lie. Count Czernin told a lie when he said that some time before the German offensive began Premier Clemenceau caused him to be asked 'if he was ready to open negotiations and upon what basis.'

"As to the passage in the manuscript note of Count Revertata, where he says he acted for Austria to obtain from France peace proposals, the solicitant's text is authentic, and Count Czernin has not dared to dispute it.

"To hide his confusion, he tries to maininin that the conversation was resumed at the request of M. Clemenceau. Unfortunately for him, there is a fact which reduces his allegation to nothing, namely, that Clemenceau was apprised of the matter on Nov. 18, 1917, (that is to say, the day after he took over the Ministry of War,) by communication from the intermediary dated Nov. 10, and intended for his predecessors. For Count Czernin's contention to be true, M. Clemenceau would have had to take the initiative in question before he was Premier. Thus Count Czernin is categorically contradicted by facts.

"He is reduced to maintaining that Major Armand was M. Clemenceau's confidential man. Well, until this incident M. Clemenceau had seen this officer of the Intelligence Department only once, for the minutes at a riding school fifteen or twenty years ago.

"Finally Count Czernin, as a last resource, says that what he attributes to M. Clemenceau is unimportant. 'What is really important,' he affirms, 'is not to know who took the initiative for the conversations before the offensive, but who caused them to fail.' Then why all this fuss? To demonstrate that every French Government, like France itself, is immovable on the question of Alsace-Lorraine?

"Who could have thought it would have been necessary for Count Revertata to elucidate for Count Czernin a question upon which the Emperor of Austria himself has said the last word? It was no other than Emperor Charles who in a letter dated March, 1917, put on record in his own writing his adhesion to 'France's just claim relative to Alsace-Lorraine.' A second Imperial letter stated that the Emperor was 'in agreement with his Minister.' It only remained for Czernin to contradict himself."

MEETINGS AT PRAGUE UPHOLD WILSON PLAN

Austrian Labor Unrest Again Critical—Czernin Forced to Postpone Rumanian Trip.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—According to an official dispatch from Switzerland today, excitement in Slav circles in Austria-Hungary has been increased by the warlike attitude of the organs of the German parties, which defend Czernin and are making violent attacks against the Slavs, as well as the Socialists.

Great meetings, the dispatch says, were held at Prague Thursday and Friday. Czech leaders replied to the Austrian Minister of Foreign Affairs, declaring that the Czech nations realized that liberty and independence would never come to them from Austria-Hungary or her allies, and that, in spite of threats, the Czechs would in no way modify their national program, which is the application of the principles announced by President Wilson in all his speeches.

In the same dispatch it is stated that the labor situation in Austria is so critical that the authorities of Vienna have scattered in the factories and on the public highways anonymous leaflets asking the people to preserve their calm and continue to fulfill all their patriotic duties.

The Arbeiter Zeitung is quoted as saying that the people know well that those who are really responsible for the prolonging of the war are the Generals and Imperialists who, at Berlin and Vienna, have for some time assumed the direction of affairs.

It is announced that Count Czernin has been obliged to postpone his trip to Bucharest in consequence of events bearing upon the interior policy of the monarchy.

GERMANS CONTINUE TO REPROACH CZERNIN

Hertling Is Soon to State Berlin's Attitude, Says the Weser Zeitung.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 8.—The organs of the Right continue their attacks on Czernin.

The annexationist Weser Zeitung reproaches him with having taken over the "diplomatic leadership from Kühlmann, who is slightly indisposed." This paper says that the Chancellor is soon to speak on the same points for Germany, but suggests that enough harm has already been done at home and abroad and that it is perhaps better to rest on Hindenburg's latest words about the necessity of a strong German peace. It remarks that peace feelers are alright at the proper time, but may form an obstacle to military victories.

"He not only believes what Wilson says," the paper continues, "but strews roses on the way. Almost at the same hour that Wilson talks of thoroughly smashing Germany, Czernin speaks of American honesty and of the attitude of the President, who does not wish to separate the Dual monarchy from Germany."

The paper asserts, nevertheless, that such is America's policy and that America's interests do not collide with those of Austria-Hungary, so that this may account for the "rapprochement" of the two statesmen. It advocates a similar feeler after what it calls the "Sonmo events," when, it asserts, President Wilson will be less proud.

The minority Socialist Vienna Arbeiter Zeitung, in an editorial so heavily censored that large blank spaces appear in it, says that Czernin in theory and practice are two different personalities and that he agrees only theoretically with President Wilson's four points, as is apparent from the Rumanian peace. It says that, if Austria-Hungary has gained frontier security, then Rumania has lost the same security. The paper alludes to Hindenburg's words about a strong peace, and remarks that Paris, London, and Washington are well aware of the significance of this.

The Berlin Gazette, meantimo, publishes an article absolutely renouncing the July 19 resolution, saying that the resolution has achieved its end by influence abroad and at home, and has had such influence in Russia that every one there was ready for peace.

"The resolution," it adds, "forced Russia to negotiate, but is not an unchangeable program or offer by which the Reichstag has bound itself in regard to the enemy."

APPLAUD WILSON AS MORAL LEADER

British Cheered by the Vigor and Firmness of His Baltimore Speech.

'CRUSADE' AGAINST GERMANY

LONDON, April 8.—The doom of the military power in Germany was pronounced by President Wilson in his speech at Baltimore, says The Morning Post.

"Whether or not the Allies are strong enough to break in pieces the German military power remains to be seen," it adds. "But that given time America is able to defeat the enemy is as little doubtful as that she is resolved to do it, however long the work may take. It is a gigantic enterprise, for the defeat of the German armies in the field is not all that America has promised, but she purposes to go further.

"Amid the stress and suspense of the great conflict now raging on the western front, we can assure our American friends that their brave and simple declarations are inexpressibly encouraging.

"It has fallen to President Wilson to put into stern practice the conviction, which the greatest among American poets affirmed in every line of his rough hewn verse, that the spirit of liberty is invincible."

Called Rising Like the Crusades.

The Daily Telegraph says:

"America's day was celebrated on Saturday by the Lord Mayor's luncheon at the Mansion House and by notable messages and speeches from the King, the Prime Minister, Mr. Balfour, and the American Ambassador. It has historical importance of a singular and unexampled kind. There has been nothing quite like it before.

"Perhaps not altogether 'inapt parallel might be found in the crusades. In the eleventh and twelfth centuries the forces of Christendom were ranged to put an end to the barbaric domination of the power which was desirous to enslave, instead of redeeming the territories which its eager, murderous hand had usurped. In the object of the great crusading enterprise touched the imagination of ardent believers many centuries ago, so, too, the ordeals of the Entente Powers appeal to all that instinctive heroism and practical energy which characterize the republic in the west.

"Moreover, nothing has more touched the feeling and stirred the gratitude of the Entente Powers than the voluntary offer to allow American troops to be brigaded with British and French troops in order to give immediate assistance in the conduct of the campaign.

"The immediate and perhaps most enduring effect of America's intervention in the war is to raise still higher that sacred passion of patriotism to which it is given to surmount all difficulties and win the final triumph. America helps Great Britain and her allies, Great Britain and her allies help America, in common sacrifice and in united faith."

Britain Trusts America's Pledge.

The Daily Mail says:

"In these hours of trial Great Britain feels the real meaning of American sympathy and aid. She is heavily engaged on many fronts and, in many different ways, and on each front and in each sphere she is lavishly giving her blood.

"Great Britain has no cause to be ashamed of what she has done, and they greatly mistake the spirit of her people who suppose that they would escape privations, suffering, and death by going back from the way in which they began. We know that the American mines the same spirit as ours. America and the Allies stand for justice and right and Germany for dominion and violence.

"When President Wilson solemnly declares that in utter self-sacrifice and self-forgetfulness America will give all that we love and all that we have to redeem the world and make it fit for free men like ourselves to live in,' we know that this pledge will be kept."

The Daily News says:

"The nation today begins to understand the spacious and enlightened statesmanship which has governed the actions of President Wilson throughout, and is able to form some measure of the service his country has rendered to the cause—service in money, in material, in men, and, most of all, in moral force. But great as is the service already performed, it is only a promise of the inexhaustible reserve that is at our command."

"It has been the cardinal mistake of Germany that she never understood President Wilson and never believed in the military value of American support. In disregarding the President's peace terms and insisting on the prolongation of the war and a decision by force she has done an incalculable service to the cause of freedom. She has consolidated the alliance between the democracy of America and the democracies of Europe."

The Times says:

"President Wilson is, he acknowledges, utterly disillusioned. He recognizes that Germany has once more shown her faith that force alone must decide the high moral issues at stake. He declares sadly and reluctantly, but with unflinching firmness, that force must answer her, and he pledges America to use force to the utmost without stint or limit.

"'We have found and taken our place,' said Ambassador Page, 'in the array of free nations.' That is what constitutes the moral greatness of America's action in siding with the Allies. The perfect co-ordination between the American Navy and our own and the spectacle of the troops of the three nations fighting as a single solid army in France are the result and the symbols of this conviction.

"So is the astonishing union of desire and purpose which exists in each of the nations themselves. President Wilson has the whole people behind him as Mr. Lloyd George has in England and Premier Clemenceau in France. That is more than either Washington or Lincoln had—more than the most illustrious of our own statesmen had in the sternest of our past wars.

"It is a new fact in the history of great peoples, wrought by the universal perception of what a 'German peace' would bring. Because of that perception, those who share our language and our freedom across the seas determined also to share our conflict with the war lord's hosts. They are hurrying, as their Ambassador proudly proclaims, to join with us in teaching tyrants and the supporters of tyrants the price free men pay for freedom."

READING EXHORTS LECTURERS.

Tells Patriotic Speakers to Spread Wilson Doctrine.

WASHINGTON, April 8. — President Wilson's pronouncement at Baltimore on Saturday, that Germany's challenge can be met only with force, was emphasized here today by the Earl of Reading, British Ambassador and High Commissioner, in an address before the National Conference of American Lecturers.

"Only by force can Germany be met, and with that force she will be met," Lord Reading asserted. At another point he said:

"America stepped into this war, and with it a whole new plane of thought was raised. America has fought, and will fight only for ideals of world democracy."

While admitting the seriousness of the submarine menace, the Ambassador pointed out that Great Britain had transported millions of fighting men across the seas with a loss of only 13,500 of them, including the 350 wounded men who had gone down with torpedoed hospitals ships. The cargo ships had suffered heavily, he said, but England had been able to move more than 130,000,000 tons of commodities overseas despite the U-boats.

Both Great Britain and America were working feverishly on their shipping programs, said the Ambassador, not with any idea of taking preliminary steps towards a post-bellum commercial rivalry, but to provide great fleets to carry men, munitions and supplies to France.

Lord Reading spoke of the Third Liberty Loan, and expressed Great Britain's gratitude to this country for the readiness with which the Treasury had aided by frequent loans the purchase of British war materials in the United States. "Asserting that America's economic assistance was of the greatest value, the Ambassador urged the lecturers to disseminate the doctrine that "every stroke of the laboring man is equivalent to a shot at the enemy."

NO SPEECH BY HERTLING.

Time for Deeds, Not Words, According to His View.

AMSTERDAM, April 8.—A semi-official telegram from Berlin says:

"We learn from a competent source that Imperial Chancellor von Hertling has no intention, as reported, of speaking shortly in the Reichstag.

"He is rather of the opinion that the present is not the time for words, but deeds."

DIAZ HAILS OUR ENTRY AT THE FIGHTING FRONT

Rome Enthusiastically Celebrates the Anniversary of America's Declaration of War.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, April 7, (Associated Press.)—General Diaz, the Italian Commander in Chief, has issued an order of the day to the Italian Army greeting the entry of the American troops to the western fighting front and referring to the recent visit of Secretary Baker as another evidence of the solidarity of the allied nations. The order says in part:

"Italy greets with particular sympathy the noble act of so powerful a republic which, knowing the hardships of war, has decided spontaneously to participate with all its forces and its inexhaustible riches. I interpret the unanimous sentiment of our army in addressing fervent salutations to the representative American army which has so nobly intervened in the great battle in France and will hereafter be fighting everywhere where there is a struggle for freedom and justice."

ROME, April 7.—The anniversary of America's entrance into the war was celebrated with an imposing manifestation in the Colosseum today. Honor was paid not only to the United States and its efforts, but to the American Red Cross.

Government and city officials, diplomats, representatives of all regiments at the front and an immense throng of Roman citizens attended the meeting. The Duke of Connaught, who was passing through Rome, was also present.

Signor Bnrenini, in the name of Premier Orlando, presented to Ambassador Page a statute of Victory. His speech was punctuated with deafening applause and cheers for America. H. P. Davison, Chairman of the American Red Cross War Council, and Captain F. H. La Guardia were among the other speakers.

The climax in the enthusiasm was reached when Ambassador Page announced that he had just received a telegram from Washington saying that the War Department had given orders for the transfer for service in Italy of thirty ambulance sections, with 30 officers and 1,350 men.

BLOCK PEACE IN REICHSTAG

Big Western Offensive Undermines Move to End the War.

STOCKHOLM, April 8.—The German Reichstag majority bloc's "Pence by Agreement" resolution of July 19 appears to have been badly undermined by the German offensive on the west front.

The Centrist leader, Kart Trimborn, addressing the Rhenish Clerical Delegates at a recent meeting, said that the Clericals, now that the efforts to attain peace in a friendly manner had failed, had absolutely a free hand in respect to future peace negotiations.

Herr Ablas, Progressive, addressing a party meeting in the Hirschburg election district, asserted that the Reichstag peace resolution had led to good results in the east, but that it nevertheless could not be considered as an unchangeable program which could bind the Reichstag's hands for all time. Germany, he said, must require from the enemy a reckoning for all sacrifices and was no longer bound by previously announced conditions.

CHINA TO INTERN TEUTONS.

Tuan Chi-jui Back in Premiership—May Make Peace with South.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, April 8.—The return of Tuan Chi-jui to the Premiership is stiffening the movement for the internment of Austro-Germans. Several schemes have lately been submitted to the Government. Owing to the lack of shipping facilities it is unlikely they will be deported. Most probably internment camps will be established. In order to give the Germans no opportunity of communicating with the outside world the Chousan Islands or Che-Kiang are mentioned as suitable localities.

Although the Government forces have retaken Chang-Sha, the commanders have been instructed to drive the Southerners further from the city to guard against attack. In the meantime preparations are being made for peace negotiations. It is understood that Liang Shih-Yi, knowing the views of both sides, will be able to arrange a settlement. Tsao Julin, Acting Minister of Finance, is negotiating a loan of ten millions, Mexican. The Japanese are financing the army that is to operate in North Manchuria. They have also made a loan of twenty millions for Administrative purposes.

MASS FOR PARIS DEAD.

Representatives of all the allied nations attended a solemn high mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral yesterday in memory of the seventy-five persons killed in a church in Paris by a shell from the German supergun on Good Friday. The cathedral was filled with soldiers and sailors, diplomatic representatives and members of war missions, nurses, and women in khaki. British and French army chaplains sat within the chancel rail.

In delivering the eulogy as the representative of Cardinal Farley, Mgr. Lavelle praised the valor of the soldiers and sailors of the Allies.

"We have done much," he said, "but we must do a great deal more to win this great conflict. I am not an alarmist—and I pray that it may never come true—but unless we stand shoulder to shoulder and prove ourselves 100 per cent. American the day may come when enemy bombs may strike this cathedral while we pray, as they did in Paris ten days ago. We must work as one man until the hill of victory is crowned with the glorious Stars and Stripes and the triumphant banners of our allies."

The mass was celebrated by the Rev. William B. Martin, assisted by the Rev. Bernard F. McQuade, as deacon, and the Rev. John M. J. Quinn, as subdeacon.

WANTS GERMANY PENALIZED FOR WAR

Year of Exclusion from American Trade for Every Week Conflict Is Lengthened.

URGED BY LORD SYDENHAM

He Believes Allies Would Follow Lead—Proposes Wilson Terms as Ultimatum.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 8.—In his speech at Baltimore President Wilson drew a more explicit distinction than he had done before between the German militarists and the other sections of the population, among which latter he included German statesmen. The President's statement that in Germany the real rulers are not her statesmen but her military leaders, it is fully recognized, has its logical sequel in his declaration that there is but one answer possible: "Force without stint or limit, righteous and triumphant force, which will make right the law of the world, and cast every selfish dominion down in the dust."

So long as Germany lies under the heel of her military despots no other reply to her challenge can come from the powers of freedom and civilization; but, it is asked, why neglect another force which can be utilized concomitantly with military force and which must inevitably tend to weaken the foundations upon which Germany's military despotism rests, particularly that of the consent of the people to and concurrence in the prosecution of the war for militaristic and dynastic purposes?

I cannot better define the idea of the utilization of this other force than by quoting words which Lord Sydenham used in speaking today. Lord Sydenham, as readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES are well aware, is an determined upon victory as any man in England. He knows Germany well, and is convinced that processes are now at work there which are widening the breach between the military leaders and, to use a general phrase, the rest of the community.

He "strongly urges the announcement that if, within a fixed period, the German Government does not agree to suspend hostilities and to negotiate for peace on the terms laid down by President Wilson, then for every week that the war is prolonged no German vessel shall enter or leave any American port, including the Panama Canal, for one year. This decree," adds Lord Sydenham, "should be fixed and irrevocable, whatever course the war in Europe may take."

Lord Sydenham deprecates any idea that his words should be interpreted as suggesting to the American President what line his policy should take. He has already on several occasions expressed his fullest confidence in Mr. Wilson's power to mark out his own course. He envisages the possibility of such an announcement from America because of the President's declaration at Baltimore that he was still ready to discuss a fair and just and honest peace at any time it is seriously proposed. The suggested announcement, in his view, would strengthen the elements in Germany in which the President still has reliance.

"Steps of this character have long been urged upon the British Government and the Allies generally. Great Britain hitherto has refused to take the initiative in the matter for reasons which have been variously stated. There exists a belief in several quarters here, exclusive of those which Lord Sydenham may be taken to represent, that if America were to make such a move Great Britain and the other Allies would unhesitatingly follow.

In any case, action by America independently, it is held, would meet the object in view, and if the South American republics—some, if not all—would join in the plan Germany would be faced with the alternative of peace on President Wilson's terms or commercial, industrial, and financial ruin, which would reduce her militarism to impotence.

"WAR CABINET" A SUCCESS.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The nation's war-making agencies have achieved close harmony in the last two weeks through the Wednesday conferences at the White House, which high officials say have speeded the prosecution of the fight for democracy to the point of greatest efficiency yet reached. Decisions of far-reaching importance have been made by close contact of heads of the branches involved.

The President now virtually has two Cabinets, the first of which advises him on diplomatic and political questions, while the second discusses with the Chief Executive the problems of mobilizing the industrial powers of the nation, without which there could be no war. The Cabiaet proper meets every Friday, the "War Cabinet," or "Industrial Cabinet," as it is coming to be known, every Wednesday, including the Director General of Railroads, the Chairmen of the Shipping, War Industries, and War Trade Boards, the Food Administrator, and the Fuel Administrator. At times when the navy or army has a special problem involving industrial questions Secretary Daniels or Acting Secretary of War Crowell attends.

The War Cabinet at no time has touched on political questions. All of its work has been to further the preparation of America to throw her entire resources into the scale against the enemy. So important has this work become that the prosecution of the war, except for direction of actual military and naval movements, now is entrusted to the little group of six men, representing the factors necessary to provide the fighting men with all they need to bring victory as quickly as possible.

ROADS FEAR BIG COAL BILLS

Government's Plan Would Increase Operating Expenses $40,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—If the railroads of the nation meet the request of the United States Fuel Administration and pay the same rate for coal as that fixed by the Government for other consumers, their operating expenses will be increased approximately $40,000,000 annually.

This was brought out today in connection with conferences which are being held here in the hope of reaching an agreement without the necessity of making President Wilson the arbiter. It was said that a decision would probably be reached within a few days.

An equitable distribution of cars to all mines, it is held by some of the experts, would prove a long step in the right direction, and this apparently is impossible under the old system.

BAKER FEELS TRIP HAS BEEN SUCCESS

Well Repaid in Various Objects of Visit to Allied Leaders, Fronts and Capitals.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 8.—Secretary Baker feels he has been spending a most useful period in Europe, crowding much into a short time. While benefited by and deeply interested in other features, military objects and activities form the main purpose of his visit.

The military part of the Secretary's trip in France so far as it related to the American Expeditionary Force was divided into three parts. The first consisted of inspection of facilities and projects at ports of debarkation. March 13 and 14 were devoted entirely to this work. The second part consisted of inspection of storage and supply facilities in the intermediate area along lines of communication. March 15, 16, and 17 were spent in this way. The third part was inspection of the American forces and their sector. March 18, 19, and 20 were spent at the American Expeditionary Force headquarters and on lines occupied by the American troops.

The military part of Secretary Baker's journey not relating to the American Expeditionary Force comprised visits to Commanders in Chief and to headquarters of the French, English, Belgian, and Italian forces. The non-military or semi-official parts included visits to the capitals of France, England and Italy, calls on the President of France and Premier Clemenceau, the King of England and Premier Lloyd George, the King of Italy and Orlando.

Practically all of Mr. Baker's long distance traveling was done by special car, allowing his party to be moved at night and to spend all daylight hours on inspection work. During most of the time two seven-passenger automobiles were carried on the journey, allowing quick trips to be made overland when necessary. In trips from the American to the French General Headquarters and from there to the English and Belgian General Headquarters the journey was made by automobile paralleling the front. These visits were made simultaneously with the beginning of the present German offensive.

The Secretary of War has issued a congratulatory statement regarding the work of the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., and the Telephone Operators' Unit of the Signal Corps. Official inspection tours were supplemented when possible by incognito expeditions.

CONCEDE AMERICA'S AID.

Change in German Opinion Typified by Capt. Persius's Views.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Word that American reinforcements are moving to the support of the Allies in Picardy has revived argument in Germany over the efficacy of the submarine, and drawn from Captain Persius, military critic of the Berliner Tageblatt, the comment that, after being persuaded to underestimate America, German opinion is undergoing a change. An official dispatch from Switzerland today, reviewing the latest discussion, quotes Captain Persius as follows:

"We were at first a good deal persuaded to underestimate the participation of America in the war. We begin now to note a change of opinion. It is beyond doubt that it would be well to curb at the present time the more or less fantastic vagaries of persons discussing the submarine war. We cannot for the moment estimate when the United States will have ready the millions of men which her population will permit her to raise, but it is certain that America will in the very near future succeed in amassing armies which in any case will constitute a very valuable aid for our enemies."

GERMAN STIRS UP NEGROES.

Enemy Propagandists at Work in Harlem Colony.

Agents of the German propaganda, in the guise of insurance agents, salesmen for talking machines, and book agents, have been busy in that part of Harlem inhabited by negroes in an effort to discourage enlistment in the army. This fact was announced last night by the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation for the New York District, following the arrest in Harlem of Max Freudenheim, an insurance collector, who is said to have been active in the propaganda.

Freudenheim, who says he is a subject of Austria-Hungary, but is believed to be a German, is said to have been active in spreading a story to the effect that when Germany wins the war and the Allies are beaten, that Germany will immediately undertake to organize "somewhere in the world" a great negro State, where the negro will be supreme.

Yesterday morning Freudenheim was found in the Bronx and brought to the office of Chief De Woody. He was later questioned by Assistant Attorney General William Wallace, Jr., head of the Enemy Alien Bureau for New York, and Captain Roger Hull of the army, and was ordered locked up in the Essex County, N. J., jail pending the completion of an investigation.

OFFICIAL RETURNS LATER

Fully 200 Cities and Towns Have Won Honor Flag—Puzzle as to the First.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The danger of overconfidence in conducting the Liberty Loan campaign has prompted Secretary McAdoo to adopt the rule of not giving to the public statements of amounts of subscriptions during the progress of the appeal to buy bonds. While the previous loans have been successful, there were periods in the two campaigns when local jealousies were aroused, and in such communities it is believed serious disadvantages were encountered by reason of the practice of giving publicity to competitive amounts of subscription.

Unofficial reports to the Treasury Department today put the first day's subscriptions in the loan campaign at $250,000,000. Officials said this probably was somewhat too high, as first reports usually were too optimistic.

Secretary McAdoo's plan to withhold statements of subscriptions is tentative. He expects that there will be a time at the peak of the campaign when publicity as to amounts subscribed will help the cause, and that then the figures will be furnished as heretofore.

The mere physical labor of compiling subscriptions and forwarding daily reports is tremendous. Taking everything into consideration, Secretary McAdoo and his coadjutors feel confident that the American people will be willing to extend a measure of trust to their judgment and acquiesce in their decision not to give figures for the present.

To make clear just what is involved in the announcement, Secretary McAdoo telegraphed this following from Richmond, where he spoke today in behalf of the loan:

"In order to remove the risk of inaccurate information and of oversanguine and misleading estimates concerning the amount of subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan, no figures will be given out for some days, and then only figures as to the actual amount of subscriptions officially filed with the Federal Reserve Banks. The danger of relying upon optimistic estimates and unofficial subscriptions will thus be avoided.

Reports by Reserve Banks.

"This information will be made public beginning at an early date when the department will be prepared to give accurate figures. After the plan has been developed, the Federal Reserve Banks will report to the Treasury Department the amount of subscriptions actually filed, and these reports will be given out daily. The Federal Reserve Banks will simultaneously announce the amount of such subscriptions officially filed in their own districts and will permit local committees to announce the amounts of subscriptions officially filed.

"I ask the co-operation of newspapers and Liberty Loan Committees throughout the country in this policy above indicated, which is of vital importance to the object we all have in mind in making this Liberty Loan an unqualified success."

Treasury officials estimated tonight that fully 200 cities and towns had won the honor flag for obtaining subscriptions to the loan. Just which is first of the number cannot be decided for some days. Secretary McAdoo directed that a telegram be sent to all the Federal Reserve Banks today asking that they forward as promptly as practicable a statement as to the priority of towns in their respective districts which gave notice of having raised their quotas.

Among the reports today showing the greatest success in obtaining subscriptions were those from Georgia and California. In Georgia fifty-eight cities, towns, or counties gave notice that their quotas had been completed. In California reports from towns and one county reported the completion of quotas. In Texas eleven counties finished their quotas.

On learning today that the honor flag of the Liberty Loan was being used for advertising purposes and was being manufactured for sale Secretary McAdoo notified a number of manufacturers by telegraph that the flag had been registered in the United States Patent Office and that the design must not be sold commercially.

A letter was sent out today by Secretary McAdoo to 114,000 clergymen naming April 21 as Liberty Loan Sunday and urging that the theme that day for the pulpits be the prosecution of the war and the support of the loan.

Gompers Appeals to Labor.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement today urged workers to subscribe generously to the loan, even if it meant great economies, and to "do all that you can for the common cause of democracy and freedom the world over."

"Our country calls for service," said Mr. Gompers. "Each and every man, woman, and child has a personal duty to perform—an obligation accompanying the opportunities freely accorded all. Some have offered and are giving their lives—others their abilities—but all can and should contribute money in accord with their means. It may mean savings, economies practiced in the spirit of patriotic and temporary sacrifices, and yet it is the safest investment in the whole world.

"Workers of America—you have as much, if not more, at stake than other groups of citizens. You are urged to subscribe as generously to this loan as is within your power."

NEW ENGLAND TAKES RISE.

Thirty-eight Cities and Towns Subscribe More Than Quota.

BOSTON, April 8.—Thirty-eight New England cities and towns had officially reported subscriptions to the Liberty Loan in excess of their allotments today. Among these leaders were Bennington, Littleton, Gilsum, Hancock, Lisbon, East Kingston and Peterboro, N. H.; Sangerville, Orono, Monhegan and Sanford, Me.; Canaan, Winooski and Burlington, Vt.; East Greenwich, R. I., and Ashby, Mass.

The largest single subscription reported by the District Committee today was $1,000,000 by the Boston Five Cent Savings Bank. The Pacific Mills of Lawrence announced a special 6 per cent. dividend, amounting to $500,000, and will recommend that stockholders invest the money in Liberty bonds.

Newark Buys $3,320,500 Worth.

Newark's subscriptions to the Liberty Loan yesterday totaled $3,320,500, including a $3,000,000 subscription by the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, and $250,000 by the American Fire Insurance Company. The Women's Division, in charge of Mrs. George Barker, Mrs. Gustav W. Gehin and Miss Alice C. Kirkpatrick, opened a booth in the centre of the city and sold $14,000 worth of bonds in two hours. A squad of sailors from the New York Navy Yard, under from local stores and the home guards, paraded yesterday when the drive was formally opened.

Favorable Weather an Aid.

Reports received yesterday from the Chairmen of the sub-districts making up the New York Federal Reserve District showed that the campaign was making great headway in every part of the State and in New Jersey and Connecticut. From several of the larger agricultural counties up State came messages to the effect that the farmers were responding in a substantial manner to the appeals made to them. Favorable weather has helped a great deal, for it has made it so much easier for canvassers to get about, and has resulted in large attendances at patriotic meetings.

E. N. Potter, Chairman for sub-district No. 4, which includes Schuyler, Chemung, Tompkins, Tioga, Broome, Chenango, Otsego, Delaware, and Sullivan Counties, returned yesterday morning after making a tour of each county in his district, fully confident that the people of New York State would not relax their efforts until the subscription books for the Third Liberty Loan were closed. "In every town I visited," Mr. Potter said, "there was a splendid show of enthusiasm, and, what is more important still, a spirit of earnestness giving assurance that the people appreciate the message this Liberty Loan is intended to carry to the Kaiser, and are determined that the result will be indelibly impressed on his mind."

Jacob H. Schiff's Indorsement.

Jacob H. Schiff gave hearty indorsement to the loan yesterday.

"Buy Liberty bonds because by so doing you show common sense and patriotism combined," the banker said. "That combination spells victory—and you will have helped."

Gates W. McGarrah, President of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, in a letter sent out yesterday to depositors, says that while the banks of the country will do their utmost in facilitating the flotation of the Liberty Loan, the people should not forget that it is their duty to subscribe for as large amounts as they possibly can.

"The success of the loan," he says, "will depend upon the concentration of every American citizen on the object of flooring it. The utmost will of course be expected of our banking machinery, and the banks stand ready to extend their support to the limit of their ability. But that readiness should not be permitted to become an excuse for exempting any part of the public from subscribing. In war time, more than ever, the banks are a bulwark of the nation's economic strength; to preserve the industry and commerce of the nation, they should not be called upon to tie up so large a percentage of their resources in Government loans that they will be curtailed in their function of acting as a liquid reservoir of credit.

"People generally have come to appreciate the responsibility that Government financing has imposed on the banks. This responsibility has been cheerfully borne, and so long as the public demonstrates the same spirit and support of the first and second loans, we may rest assured of the complete success of this latest financial operation. There is no question of the capacity of the American people to absorb the Third Liberty Loan. The question lies in the exertion necessary to develop that capacity. There are 30,000,000 American people engaged in productive occupations; based on such vast resources of wealth as no other country possesses, our credit is the best in the world and our people are the best able to support whatever burdens may be ahead.

"We must bear in mind that, after all, this new financing is not for any larger amount than was the Second Liberty Loan, nor will it place upon the American people anything like the burden that has been imposed up to this time on the people of Europe. A three billion addition will bring the total indebtedness of the United States to $10,000,000,000. That amount will equal 4 per cent. of our developed wealth, whereas the present debt of England, France, and Germany equals in each case more than 30 per cent. of the wealth supporting that debt.

The Liberty Loan Committee has adopted a resolution recommending to the banks and trust companies in this district that they carry Third Liberty Loan bonds for a period of ninety days at a rate not exceeding 4½ per cent., the coupon rate. All of the banks have already been advised of this resolution, and a great many of them have lost no time in informing the committee that they would adopt the policy suggested. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York has just raised its special discount rate on ninety-day paper, secured by Liberty bonds, from 4 to 4½ per cent., and consequently banks which accommodate their customers by carrying bonds at 4½ per cent., and which have occasion to rediscount the notes at the Reserve Bank, will be facilitating the purchase of the new loan without a cent of profit. In the Second Liberty Loan campaign banks were requested to charge their customers only 4 per cent., the coupon rate; but the Reserve Bank discount rate was 3½ per cent., thus giving the bank a margin of one-half of 1 per cent. War stamps need not be affixed on promissory notes secured by a pledge of Liberty bonds.

Sale on Installments Begins.

The sale of Third Liberty Loan bonds on the weekly and monthly partial payment system was begun yesterday. In place of the coupon books, which are not yet available for distribution, there are temporary certificates on hand for subscribers who wish to buy a $50 or a $100 bond on the installment plan. The regular coupon books will be issued later in exchange for these certificates. All banking institutions and many of the sales stations, including booths, where there are direct representatives of the Liberty Loan Committee, will have a supply of these certificates.

The Liberty Loan Committee announced last night that the following communities were tied for the honor of being the first town in New York State to win an Honor Flag:

STIRRING CELEBRATIONS HELP SPEED LOAN DRIVE

New State Guard Parades at Night and Prominent Men and Women Speak.

The New York National Guard carried the loan campaign last night to hundreds of thousands all over the city in a series of night parades in which the guardsmen were accompanied by speakers and bond salesmen in automobiles. The parades were not very formal affairs, a general patriotic demonstration being the object in view and there were all sorts of bells and other noise-makers mingled with the strains of martial airs from the bands which accompanied each flying column on its drive.

In every case the parade, after halting here and there while well-known men and women besought the crowds on the sidewalks to support the loan, terminated in a big rally at some central point where the sight of the men in khaki helped stimulate the subscriptions. The guardsmen, many of them men of draft age who are getting preliminary military service pending their country's summons, were received cordially everywhere.

The men came from various units of the Guard and marched from their respective armories promptly at 8 o'clock in response to orders from Adjt.-Gen. Charles Sherrill. They were under the general command of Brig. Gen. George R. Dyer, commanding the First Brigade. Their parades were but the beginning of their participation in the loan campaign; $3,213,800 worth of bonds of the second loan were bought by guardsmen, and it is the purpose of the organization to excel that record before the books of the third loan are closed.

Four companies of the Seventh Infantry, under Colonel De Witt Clinton Falls, paraded from its armory at Park Avenue and Sixty-seventh Street north to Seventy-second Street, east to First Avenue, and down First Avenue to the plaza of the Queensboro Bridge, where a big rally was held.

Two companies of the 15th (colored) Infantry marched from 125th Street north on Lenox Avenue to 145th Street and down Seventh Avenue to 135th Street, where a street meeting was held. Chief Manahozbo of the Mohawk Indians and others spoke, and many investors responded.

The 69th Infantry, with 350 men in line, marched down Fifth Avenue from Twenty-fifth Street to Washington Square, the scene of one of the biggest gatherings of the night. A detachment of the 71st Infantry paraded on the lower east side and participated in a rally at Eighth Street and Second Avenue.

Under the auspices of the Washington Heights Division of the Liberty Loan Committee, the 1st Battalion, 22d Engineers, parade about that district of the city and held a meeting at 181st Street and St. Nicholas Avenue.

Other units which paraded, each in the general neighborhood of its armory, were a battalion of the 1st Field Artillery, the 12th Infantry, and the 9th Coast Artillery. The armored motor car detachment of the 1st Field had a roving commission.

Enthusiasm at Sub-Treasury.

Besides the parade of the New York State Guard last night, Liberty Loan meetings and demonstrations were held throughout the city yesterday. Great enthusiasm marked the Liberty Loan meeting in front of the Sub-Treasury yesterday, at which Douglas Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin took part. As far as the eye could reach from the top of the steps of the Sub-Treasury the streets were a mass of upturned faces, and apparently all who could get the necessary room to free an arm raised it aloft when they were asked to pledge themselves to buy Liberty bonds.

The promise of Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks—not to mention a hint that Mary Pickford might grace the occasion—tied up traffic in the financial district in a knot that the police reserves could not begin to undo. Wall Street was jammed full of humanity from Trinity Church to William Street, while Nassau and Broad were packed from Pine down beyond the Curb market. Old George Myles, who has guarded the front hallway of J. P. Morgan & Co.'s offices for years, said he had never seen a crowd which approached yesterday's for density.

The Liberty Bell in City Hall was rung ten times between the hours of 12 and 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, one ring for each thousand dollars put into the Liberty Loan.

Speakers at the Liberty Bank in Madison Square were responsible for the sale of a Liberty bond every minute during the three hours of the afternoon. The National League for Woman's Service, under whose auspices the bank is run, took in 138 subscriptions.

The Liberty Theatre, built by the State Women's War Relief on the terrace of the Public Library, was opened yesterday shortly after noon, but long before the exercises began a large crowd gathered and the police had difficulty in regulating traffic. A squad of marines fired a salute, and then Marcella Craft sang the "Star Spangled Banner." The principal speakers were Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company, and Guy Emerson, who were introduced by Julia Arthur.

Today's program of exercises and speeches includes a meeting of the Produce Exchange at 3 P. M., with an address by Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co.; a meeting of clergymen at Aeolian Hall at 10:30 A. M., and the usual meetings at the Sub-Treasury, the Liberty Theatre, the Liberty Bank, and the Liberty Bell. The Stock Exchange meeting, which was announced for yesterday afternoon, will be held next Monday.

The Archbishop of York will be the chief speaker at a great Liberty Loan mass meeting to be held at Carnegie Hall on Thursday evening. Governor Benjamin Strong of the Federal Reserve Bank will preside, and addresses will also be delivered by Mrs. August Belmont and George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia. The choir of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and the Four-Minute Men will sing.

RAINBOW DIVISION AIMS TO RAISE $450,000,000

The so-called Rainbow Division of the Liberty Loan Committee, consisting of eighty-ons business organizations, representatives of various trades and industries, has set its mind on turning in $450,000,000 in subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan—or one-half of the quota for the New York Federal Reserve District. Keen rivalry marks the work of each organization for the leadership.

A number of the trade organizations have already pledged large amounts. Mass meetings, novel features, patriotic rallies, whirlwind speaking tours, house to house canvassing and personal appeals, are only a few of the methods employed by the various committees of the Rainbow Division. Many of the features are being kept secret, as the Chairmen and members of the committee said they were fully in the Manhattan Temple, yesterday, nearly $2,000,000 was pledged. Charles S. Porter of G. Gaudig & Co., President of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, and Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company, delivered addresses. Among the names of those who made pledges, recorded by Samuel Ullman, Chairman of the Fur Committee, were:

Big Department Stores Aid.

Among the big department stores that have placed their best show window space at the disposal of the Department Stors Committee of the Rainbow Division, are Best & Co., Lord & Taylor, James A. Hearn & Son, Saks & Co., R. H. Macy & Co., Frederick Loeser & Co., E. V. D. H. Koch, and James McCreery & Co. That these displays may be among the very best, the department stores in New York have assigned their most expert window dressers to the task. Most of the displays will be of a nature to remind the passersby of the seriousness of the war situation, and to carry home a message that will inspire them to buy bonds.

One of the large pledges received by the Central Committee yesterday was that of the Bakers' Committee of the Rainbow Division. It was for $5,000,000. John F. Hilderbrand, President of the Schults Bread Company, who is Chairman of the Bakers' Committee, stated that this pledge had been made at a meeting held Saturday in the Hotel Brozteli. Among the subscribers were:

Ward Baking Co.	150,000
General Baking Co.	100,000
Individual Retail Bakers' Organization of Greater New York	100,000
George B. Lester	25,000

This committee plans to canvass every one of the 4,000 individual bakeshops and their more than 20,000 employes during the four weeks of the campaign.

A plan which was tried and found to be successful by the Blair Tool and Machine Works is being developed by the Machinery and Machine Tools Trade Committee of the Rainbow Division, whereby the thousands of employes in these trades may buy $100 worth of third Liberty bonds for $75. Employers of the men will bear 25 per cent. of the cost of each $100 bond.

An honor roll is to be established by the General Insurance Committee, and it is believed that prizes will be awarded. The American Surety Company plans to organize an auxiliary Liberty Loan Committee with every one of its employes as a member. R. R. Brown, First Vice President, is working out the details of the plan which will make it possible for every member of the auxiliary to be a bond salesman. William M. Tomlins, Jr., has been appointed Captain of the team.

Every theatrical manager of note has already bought some of the third Liberty bonds. An announcement made Sunday from the stages of all the moving-picture theatres was that the total for the first day of the drive was $1,055,000, divided among twenty-two managers. Plans for making direct appeal to the audiences in all theatres have been perfected, and in the first trial Saturday many of the people in the audiences pledged themselves to buy bonds.

Increasing their initial pledge from $250,000 to more than three times that amount, the Merchants Ladies Garment Association furnished the Liberty Loan Committee with a pleasant surprise. Jacob Sperber, the Chairman, following a luncheon at the Hotel McAlpin, announced that his committee had secured pledges for $825,000, including, among others, the following:

Jacob Sperber	$200,000
Joseph Durst	100,000
H. B. Rubin	100,000
Moyses & Dreyfus	100,000
H. B. Rosan	50,000
Rothstein & Nelson	50,000
Ritter Brothers	50,000

Butchers to Take $10,000,000.

Another large pledge received by the Advisory Trades Committee was from the Wholesale and Retail Meat Committee of the Rainbow Division, of which Leo S. Joseph, Vice President of the New York Butchers Dressed Beef Company, is Chairman. The pledge was for $10,000,000.

Although the campaign is only two days old, the Men's Clothing and Allied Trades Committee of the Rainbow Division, of which William Goldman is Chairman, has made a fine showing. In the reports sent in yesterday Mr. Goldman stated that these trades had purchased $2,000,000 of bonds.

The Rainbow Division has been provided with a special poster for its part in the national honor flag system of the Third Liberty Loan.

Every firm in the division will be presented with a large placard bearing a reproduction of the national honor emblem on which is inscribed:

"Help New York win the right to fly this flag by helping the Rainbow Division. Third Liberty Loan Honor Roll. These are the people of the Rainbow Division who are helping win the war by investing in Government bonds of the Third Liberty Loan."

A list of the firms subscribing will follow underneath. This poster will appear outside the office of the firm. Each subscriber to the loan is also supplied with a window poster in addition to the subscriber's button, which will register the patriotism of the neighborhood.

SOVIETS INCENSED BY JAPAN'S COURSE

BUT ADMIRAL EXPLAINS

Tells Bolshevist Foreign Minister That Landing Was a Local Incident.

By ARTHUR RANSOME.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, April 7.—The Soviet authorities at Vladivostok sent representatives to protest against the Japanese landing there. The Japanese Consul, declining to recognize the Soviet authority, refused to receive them, except as private persons. The British Consul received them, but the French Consul refused. The privileged classes at Vladivostok are openly rejoicing in the landing of foreign troops as the beginning of the end of Soviet power.

The Japanese action makes friendly allied co-operation with the Soviet quite impossible, which is the more unfortunate because events at Murmansk—where the Allies in close conjunction with the Soviets are helping the latter to guard the Murman railway—had distinctly showed that such co-operation was possible.

The result of Japanese interference at Vladivostok may be to raise difficulties for the Allies at Murmansk, where hitherto the Soviet government, recognizing the need of preventing the White Finns from seizing the coast, and thus allowing the Germans, by establishing a submarine base, to prevent all Archangel traffic, has worked in perfect friendliness with the French and British.

The first act of the Japanese at Vladivostok is to proclaim that they do not recognize the oSviet power. If the Allies support Japan in this they will undoubtedly become the enemies of the Soviet Government.

Explanation by Japanese Admiral.

MOSCOW, April 7, (Associated Press.)—The Japanese representative at Vologda, where allied and neutral diplomatic missions are stationed, has sent a communication to M. Tchitcherin, the Russian Foreign Minister, minimizing the significance of the landing at Vladivostok, according to the Izvestia. The communication said that the incident was local, and that Admiral Kato acted on his own initiative and without specific orders from his Government. M. Tchitcherin, however, is reported to be skeptical.

Reports received here from Vladivostok indicate that the Japanese have not interfered with the life of the city, and that they only patrol the streets. Admiral Kato visited the Mayor and the President of the Zemstvo, who protested against the landing. The Municipal Council also passed a resolution of protest.

News of the Japanese landing created great excitement here, and the People's Commissaries held a session, which lasted throughout Friday night, considering the situation.

M. Tchitcherin summoned the French, British, and American diplomatic representatives to the Foreign Office for a conference. Colonel Raymond Robins, head of the permanent American Red Cross Mission to Russia, attended unofficially. Consul Grenard acted for France, and R. Lockhart of the British Embassy for Great Britain.

M. Tchitcherin made an emphatic protest against the entry of foreign troops into Russia, and expressed regret that the Entente permitted such action. He said the only solution was the immediate withdrawal of the troops.

Although without official advices from tehir Government concerning the situation at Vladivostok, the representatives of the three countries expressed the opinion that the situation was purely a local one, requiring temporary policing, and not a general movement of allied troops into Siberia, as the Commissaries seemet to believe. All three gave it as their opinion that the incident might be settled satisfactorily at an early date.

The Russian papers of all parties generally express fear that the Vladivostok movement is the first step in the Japanese occupation of Siberia, an idea that has been prevalent in the Russian press constantly for many months.

The Izvestia says editorially:

"So, the Japanese invasion is an accomplished fact. The crusade against revolutionary Russia, began by German Imperialism in the west, has now called to life a new mortal enemy of socialistic Russia in the Far East in the person of Japanese Imperialism. If we even have not here a plot of all the capitalistic Governments against the only source of social revolution; if conditions are not yet ripe for a holy alliance of all the Bourgeoises against the Russian Workmen's and Peasants' revolution similar to the holy alliance of the monarchs against the French Bourgeois revolution at the end of the eighteenth century, it is at any rate undoubted that the Japanese advance has been undertaken wit hthe knowledge of some of the powers, the connivance of others, and the institution of still others, as well as the moral sympathy of all the Bourgeois Governments without exception."

The paper further says that the United States first, then the Entente, should state its attitude toward "the unheard of impudence of the Japanese Government," but platonic declarations are insufficient.

"America and the Allies," it adds, "must express their attitude toward the robbers' attack upon revolutionary Russia by definite, unequivocal and immediate action. If they do not—leaving the hands of Clemenceau, Pichon, and Loyd George free for the institution of the Japanese to enter Russian territory—they thereby assume all 'responsibility for the consequences which may follow such diplomatic acts."

The Siberian Central Executive of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates immediately organized a Red Army to resist the Japanese, and has protested against the landing of forces as unwarranted interference, not justified by the insignificant incident at Vladivostok.

LONDON, April 8.—Official telegrams from Tokio say that the landing of Japanese and British forces at Vladivostok was a purely local affair and has no relation to any Japnnese intervention in Siberia. The landing followed the pillaging on Thursday of Japanese business houses, during which three Japanese were killed. The police do not maintain order in the city, but, on the contrary, the local militia invites trouble.

A Reuter dispatch from Moscow says the Japanese diplomatic mission has issued a statement guaranteeing that the landing of Japanese forces at Vladivostok is purely a local incident, and declaring that its object will soon be fulfilled.

Situation at Vladivostok Tense.

VLADIVOSTOK, Monday, April 1, (Associated Press.)—Radical Bolsheviki are steadily arriving from Irkutsk and Blagovieshtchensk, sometimes accompanied by armed Austrian prisoners, with the avowed purpose of forcing the local Bolsheviki to adopt harsher measures. This has resulted in the seizure of the Russian volunteer fleet and the occupation of Post Offices and telegraph offices.

In spite of the general feeling of insecurity, John K. Caldwell, American Consul in this city; Mrs. Caldwell, and Mrs. Stryker of New Jersey, with a number of other Americans, have remained here.

The population is friendly to foreigners, but the Bolshevist press is printing critical articles relative to consuls. The Bolsheviki are levying large sums of money from Russian firms, and threaten confiscation. A large number of Russians and some British are arriving, and 2,000 are clamoring for passage on the Hozan-Maru, the only steamer sailing for Japan.

Advices from Irkutsk state that a train of armed German prisoners, with machine guns, has arrived there.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The State Department today received official confirmation of the report that British forces had been landed at Vladivostok, Siberia, for the protection of British life and property. The report stated that fifty armed sailors had landed from a British cruiser on the afternoon of April 5 to protect the British Consulate at the port. Two companies of Japanese sailors landed on the morning of April 5 on account of the murder of a Japanese subject, and the following day 250 more were landed, according to the report to the State Department. The dispatch said there was neither armed resistance to the landing nor any real opposition to it on the part of the Russians.

No political significance is attached by State Department officials to these landings. Whether or not they are to be followed by Japanese intervention in Eastern Siberia, it is not believed in official circles here that the measures taken by England and Japan at Vladivostok are for any other purpose than the protection of foreign lives and property. The statement is made in Japanese circles that there has been no new development with regard to the dispatch of an armed force to Siberia.

NEW GERMAN ULTIMATUM.

Russia Ordered to Remove or Disarm Ships in Finnish Waters.

PETROGRAD, April 8—(Associated Press.)—In reply to a protest of the Smolny Institute against the landing of German troops in Finland, Germany has sent a wireless ultimatum demanding, in accordance with Article 5 of the Brest-Litovsk treaty, the removal or disarmament of all Russian warships in Finnish waters by noon April 12.

The Smolny Institute has ordered the commander of the fleet to accede to this demand.

The German and Ukrainian troops being within thirty versts of Kharkov, the Soviet has quitted that town.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—A cablegram to the State Department from Ira Nelson Morris, the American Minister to Sweden, gives additional details of the blowing up of Russian warships in South Finnish waters by their commanders to prevent their capture, announcement of which was made several days ago. It appears from Swedish press reports that there were three of them, of large size, and that they were fired on by German warships, including two dreadnoughts.

The treaty which the Germans forced upon the Russians provided for the guarantee of the Russian war vessels from seizure.

ARMY DRAIN CRIPPLES GERMAN FACTORIES

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 8.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from The Hague states that Germany is combing out every available man, even from the munition factories, and drafting them into the fighting ranks. Some works either have been closed or are employing only a few girls, while raw materials have ceased to arrive in usual quantities at certain works.

It is stated, for instance, that well-known car works at Cologne and Mulheim were practically closed during the week, the Germans employed there being taken out for various services, some of them for the front. At certain dye works in another Rhenish district only a few girls are left, all the German employes, even wounded men, having been transferred to other services. At Cologne brick works and cable works, which have also been employed on munitions, are equally reduced to a few girls or have been closed altogether.

A neutral who reached Holland Friday night had a conversation with a German who had just returned from the western front. He put the German losses at roughly a quarter of a million, and added:

"Nobody any longer believes we shall now reach Paris. We were simply mown down by machine guns. At one place the French made a rampart of German bodies as high as a man."

It is also very noticeable, the neutral said, that in Germany the women are getting out of hand as the tale of losses increase and as trainloads of wounded return. The result of all this transportation of wounded is the circulation of wild rumors to account for them, such as the breaking of dikes and the flooding out of a large body of German troops, or again, the breaking of the flank of the German position opposite Amiens and the collapse of Crown Prince Rupprecht's army. Wild rumors fly about Cologne of the loss of 40,000 men as prisoners in one day.

These rumors, or some of them, have now been denied by the German press on the demand of military authorities, but they show the state of mind produced by the discrepancy between the official and other inspired reports of the situation and the facts as they appear from the transport of wounded.

DUBLIN GIVES WARNING.

City Corporation Adopts Resolution That Conscription Will Be Resisted.

DUBLIN, April 8.—The corporation of the city of Dublin today adopted a resolution warning the British Government against "disastrous results of any attempt to force conscription upon Ireland." The resolution adds that such an "insane proposal" would be resisted violently by every town and village in Ireland.

An addendum to the resolution requests the Lord Mayor to invite John Dillon and Joseph Devlin, Nationalist leaders; Professor de Valera and Arthur Griffiths, Sinn Fein leaders, and representatives of the Irish Trades Union Congress to meet him in conference to plan united Irish opposition to conscription.

GERMANS SOUGHT TO GET MOROCCO

OFFERED TERMS TO RAISULI

Bandit Was to be Made Sultan and Spain to be Compelled to Cede Her Interests.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 8.—The London Times Tangier correspondent says the following proposals were made to Raisuli and others by Germans actually in Morocco:

1. On declaration of German victory in France a revolution of tribes in the French protectorate was to break out, these dissident tribes to be financed by German money and assisted by large contingents from the Spanish zone, whose pay was to be guaranteed by Germany. This revolution was to include the massacre and extermination of subjects of all the allied powers and to be followed by a declaration of independence of Morocco and nomination of a pro-German Sultan.

2. The power of victorious Germany will be such that Spain, already troubled by her want of success in the pacification of her zone, shall be forced to cede at first her administration and later her actual sovereignty to Germany against a cash payment.

3. Raisuli to be nominated either Sultan or independent Viceroy, with almost unlimited powers over the northern provinces of Morocco from the Algerian frontier to Tangier and Larache, and extending inland as far as the mountains north of Fez to Taza and Oujda.

4. The remainder of Morocco, from Fez to the southern limits, to be under a Sultan chosen by Germany.

5. The Sus district, which is supposed to be rich in mines, to be ceded in its entirety to the Mannesmann syndicate in combination with other German mining companies.

6. Raisuli and the Sultan each to receive a grant of large participation in profits and considerable royalties on all mining enterprises undertaken by Germans in their respective districts.

7. The Morocco civil administration and army to be placed under Germans nominated by the Kaiser.

Raisuli's comment to certain of his intimate friends after these proposals were made to him is worthy of being recorded:

"The only way to be sure of a German victory is an acknowledgment of defeat by Germany's adversaries."

SECRET INQUIRY HELD IN PRAGER LYNCHING

COLLINSVILLE, Ill., April 8.—Mayor J. H. Siegel of Collinsville was the principal witness today when the Coroner's inquest into the death of Robert P. Prager opened here. Prager, an enemy alien, was hanged last Friday by a mob after it had been asserted that he made disloyal remarks.

The inquest today was secret, but it was learned that the Mayor told the inquisitors he had been informed that Prager had been removed from the City Hall by the police because it was feared he might suffer violence at the hands of the mob. He said that he told the mob Prager had been removed and that when he opened the door to admit one of the mob to search for the prisoner the whole crowd rushed in, found Prager, and the lynching followed. Hearings are to be resumed Wednesday.

TO OUST GERMAN ALLIANCE.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 8.—Despite persistent pleading by Henry Weismann, President of the German-American Alliance, the bill introduced by Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson, nephew of Colonel Roosevelt, to take away the charter of that organization, will be reported from the committee tomorrow. According to all reports, it will pass both branches of the Legislature in short order and become a law.

Weismann, who has been haunting the Capitol corridors and making impassioned pleas to legislative leaders, has urged the defeat of the Robinson bill on the ground that he was anxious to "Americanize" the alliance and make it an agency for unity and effective prosecution of the war. The leaders have lauched at these pleas as they have at the following message received Senator Robinson tonight from Weismann:

Hon. Theodore Douglas Robinson, Senate, Albany, N. Y.

To guide new American Alliance in bringing about strongest possible union of our citizens for effective war work to win the war, will you ascertain if your uncle will accept Honorary Presidency of alliance?

HAS $50,000,000 PLAN FOR CONCRETE SHIPS

Shipping Board Will Construct Five Yards if Congress Approves Its Program.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—If Congress assents and agrees to appropriate $50,000,000, after receiving a detailed report of investigations already made, the United States Shipping Board will construct five yards, two on the Pacific Coast and three on the Atlantic Coast, in which to build concrete ships.

This decision was reached today after Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board and Charles A. Piez, General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, had conferred with Senators McCumber and Simmons. The matter was gone over in detail, and the Shipping Board agreed to request an appropriation through Director General McAdoo.

ORDNANCE CHIEF AGAIN CHANGED

COL. JOHNSON ALSO SHIFTED

Reported He Will Become Director of Purchases—Aviation Shakeup Said to be Impending.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Reports in circulation of an impending shakeup in the War Department are beginning to take form, with no official denial forthcoming. They affect the General Staff, the Quartermaster's Corps, and the Signal Corps.

Announcement was made today by Benedict Crowell, Acting Secretary of War, that Brig. Gen. Charles B. Wheeler, who recently succeeded Major Gen. William Crozier as head of the Ordnance Department of the Army with the title of Acting Chief of Ordnance, was to be succeeded by Brig. Gen. C. C. Williams, Chief Ordnance Officer with the American Expeditionary Force in France. General Wheeler will take General Williams's place at the front. In making this announcement Secretary Crowell said the change was in line with the policy of bringing to Washington for important duty officers who had seen service in Europe. This policy was announced by Secretary Baker some time before his departure from this country.

General Wheeler was selected to succeed General Crozier as head of the ordnance establishment on account of his high standing as an ordnance expert. Nothing has appeared to give any impression that there was dissatisfaction with his administration. In fact, his efforts to overcome the defects in ordnance matters that caused criticism both before and after the revelations to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs have received highest praise.

The Official Announcement.

The announcement of the Acting Secretary of War follows:

"The War Department has ordered Brig. Gen. C. C. Williams, Ordnance Department, now Chief Ordnance Officer, American Expeditionary Force in France, to return to the United States to relieve Brig. Gen. Charles B. Wheeler, Ordnance Department, from his present duties as Acting Chief of Ordnance. General Wheeler will be sent for duty with the American Expeditionary Force in France. This change is in line with the War Department's policy of obtaining men in responsible positions who are familiar with conditions as they exist at the front."

Colonel Hugh L. Johnson, Deputy Provost Marshal General, who was the right-hand man of Provost Marshal General Crowder in the administration of the selective draft law, has been assigned to duty with the General Staff, and it is being asserted in military circles that this is preliminary to his appointment as Director of the Purchases section of the General Staff in place of Brig. Gen. Palmer E. Pierce. The Directorship of Purchases is a new office, created at the time the War Department was under heavy fire for alleged deficiences in the purchase of supplies. The criticism followed the testimony developed at the hearings of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs.

Shortly after the creation of the Directorship of Purchases and the assignment of General Pierce, it was announced that Edward R. Stettinius of J. P. Morgan & Co., who had been in charge of purchases by the Morgan firm for the allied Governments in the United States prior to the entry of this nation into the war, had been appointed Surveyor General of Purchases, a civilian office under General Pierce. The explanation was made that the Purchases section would co-ordinate all War Department purchasing, thus doing away with the practice of having each of the five supply bureaus make its purchases independently. President Wilson last Saturday nominated Mr. Stettinius for one of the Assistant Secretaryships of War. In this office he will have supervision over all purchases of supplies for the army, and the Directorship of Purchases will be under his jurisdiction.

Nothing was obtainable at the War Department today in the way of confirmation or denial of the report that Colonel Johnson would succeed General Pierce. Officials declined to comment on the report. According to the rumor, Colonel Johnson, who is a Judge Advocate in the regular army, will be promoted to the rank of Brigadier General in the national army.

Rumors Not Credited.

One rumor has it that Major Gen. Peyton C. March, who was General Pershing's Chief of Artillery, and was brought home recently to become Acting Chief of the Army General Staff, is dissatisfied with his new duties and is seeking a command in the field. There is reason to believe that this report is untrue.

Another rumor is that Major Gen. George W. Goethals will ask to be detached from duty as Acting Quartermaster General and that an important assignment, perhaps in France, will be given to him. This also appears to be groundless.

There are reports also that a shakeup is imminent in the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps and that the changes may affect some of the highest officers in the corps. At President Wilson's instance, investigations have been in progress in regard to the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps and the Aircraft Production Board. No disclosure of the President's attitude toward the allegations that the aircraft program has been a failure has been made, but it is generally believed that sweeping changes in the organizations in charge of aircraft work will soon be announced.

SENT OUT OFFICIAL COPY

But Senate Committee Meanwhile Had Modified Text of Sedition Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The text of the important provisions of the Sedition bill, now before the Senate, which has aroused a controversy between Colonel Roosevelt and Chairman Overman of the Judiciary Committee, was sent out by The Associated Press from the printed copy of the bill given out by a clerk at the Judiciary Committee Room. It developed, however, that in considering the measure the committee had stricken out the words "or the President of the United States," and the bill, as reported to the Senate, did not contain that phrase, which it has been contended would have practically prohibited criticism of the President.

The later print of the bill, as reported by the committee, does not contain the phrase, and it is now in the measure before the Senate. It was put before the committee by Senator Myers, who introduced the Montana statute. The law of that State now does contain the words which the Senate committee struck from its bill in finally reporting it.

AMERICA RUSHING TROOPS TO FRANCE

Movement Already Speeded Up Since Battle Began, War Department Announces.

QUICKER TRAINING ABROAD

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Transportation of American troops to France already is proceeding at the accelernted rate contemplated by the speeding up measures taken after the Battle of Picardy began. Acting Secretary Crowell made this statement today, but would give no details.

For military reasons the extent of the increased troop movement has not been made public.

Following the conferences between Secretary Baker and allied officials, orders were given under which a British official statement was issued saying that American forces were to be brigaded with British troops in order to hasten American participation in the war. Officials explained today that the process to be followed was similar to that adopted in placing American troops in the front lines with the French for training.

It has been estimated that thirty days' training of this character with American battalion units assigned with the British organizations will fit the newcomers for active duty at the front. All divisions now moved from this side are composed of men who have had several months of preliminary training, and who need only final instruction to take their full share in the fighting.

The training process will be quicker with the British than with the French, it is believed, because the language difficulty does not exist. American units will find every British veteran an instructor, and there will be no need for interpreters.

It was indicated that the new plans called for a more extensive training scheme with the British Army than had been the case with General Pershing's original force. There probably will be no attempt to set up a purely American force within the British ranks, as has been done with the French.

The Americans are to be withdrawn when trained and turned over to General Pershing as a part of his army. They will share fully with their British comrades the battles on the British front, and the belief here is that they will not be withdrawn as long as there is pressing need for their service with the British lines.

DENIES TALE OF DEATHS FROM INOCULATION

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Representative Charles F. Reavis of Nebraska in the House today denounced a circular issued by the National Anti-Vivisection Federation, which asserted that inoculation of American soldiers was causing thousands of deaths in army cantonments. After reading the circular to the House he said that he had sent it to the Department of Justice with the recommendation that action be taken against the federation.

The circular, which is being sent to Congressmen and others, contained this statement objected to by Mr. Reavis:

"Thousands of deaths deliberately inflicted upon our soldiers and sailors have passed the scandal line. It has become a tragedy."

This sentence was preceded by the statement that the soldiers in cantonments were being inoculated and dying from inoculations rather than disease. The sentence was the conclusion of the federation's argument against inoculation.

"This statement is going into the homes of the nation and creating anxiety almost indescribable," said Mr. Reavis. "What is meant by it is that the Government, by inoculating soldiers against typhoid and other diseases, is deliberately killing thousands of soldiers in cantonments.

"I do not know of a single cantonment in the United States today where the boys are not given the most careful and solicitous care, and statements of this kind, untrue as they are, at this particular time, when we are calling for an additional draft, are absolutely unpatriotic and almost treasonable in their effect.

"I intend to see that the document gets into the hands of the Department of Justice to give it an opportunity to investigate this so-called federation and stop it, as it ought to be stopped, at once."

Senate Confirms Stettinius.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The nomination of E. R. Stettinius of New York as Assistant Secretary of War was confirmed late today by the Senate. The nomination of F. P. Keppel for a similar position went over temporarily, although it is said there was no objection to confirmation.

Judge Howe Recommends That German Plotter Be Sent to Atlanta.

DEFENDANT WILLING TO GO

The inquiry to determine the present state of health of Dr. Karl Buenz, German Minister to Mexico, at one time German Consul General at New York, and at the time of this country's entrance into the war the head official of the Hamburg-American Line in the United States, ended yesterday morning. As a result of this inquiry Dr. Buenz, who stands convicted of having entered into a plot to make New York a supply base for German ocean raiders, probably will start for the Atlanta Penitentiary in the next few days. Judge Harland B. Howe of the Federal District Court of Vermont last night transmitted a report of the inquiry to Attorney General Gregory in Washington, and recommended that Dr. Buenz be taken to Atlanta to serve his eighteen months' sentence.

The second session of the inquiry to determine the condition of Dr. Buenz's health began at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Dr. Samuel W. Lambert was the first witness called on behalf of Dr. Buenz. Like Dr. Emanuel Baruch, who testified on Saturday, Dr. Lambert said there was no doubt that Buenz's life would be imperiled if he was sent to the penitentiary to serve the sentence imposed on him more than two years ago.

At the conclusion of Dr. Lambert's testimony a surprise was sprung when a communication from Dr. Buenz himself was read in court, in which the defendant announced that he was willing to go to Atlanta and serve his time. The defendant wrote that he was now perfectly willing to go South, and that he did not think the trip would necessarily imperil his life. He asked for a few days of grace in which to straighten out certain business affairs, and thanked the Government for the consideration which had been shown him since his conviction.

When the letter was read Judge Howe turned to Dr. Lambert and asked him if he did not think that Dr. Buenz's own opinion as to his health had some value.

"No medical value," replied Dr. Lambert.

Dr. Thomas W. Satterthwait, the next witness, when asked by Mr. Sandford what in his opinion would be the result if Dr. Buenz was taken to Atlanta, replied:

"I do not think that it would benefit his health. A person in Dr. Buenz's condition requires very special treatment, which I do not think he would get in Atlanta."

When Dr. Satterthwait had completed his testimony Judge Howe said:

"So far as the court is concerned, there is no need for the Government's witnesses. I am very well satisfied that it will not be imprudent to send the defendant to the penitentiary on the showing that the defense has made. I think the court was misinformed as to some of the facts in this case at the time of the trial. I think the counsel for the defendant was misinformed as to some of the facts."

Judge Howe then announced that he would immediately make his recommendations in the matter to Attorney General Gregory. In the memorandum sent last night to the Attorney General, Judge Howe summarized the result of the inquiry in the following manner:

Having fully heard and considered the question in accordance with the provision of the record, and in obedience to a request of the Honorable Attorney General, I report as follows:

1. That the defendant believes that he is strong enough to go to Atlanta to serve his sentence, and that it would not necessarily endanger his life. (See copy of his letter to his counsel, transcript Page 54.)

2. That a reasonably careful and prudent person would not consider it perilous to the defendant's health or life for him to go to Atlanta, Ga., from New York, in the custody of a person who would exercise reasonable care and prudence for the defendant's comfort and welfare during the journey.

3. That the defendant's physical condition is such that he can serve his sentence without necessarily endangering his health or imperiling his life.

4. For several weeks the defendant has been accustomed to go automobiling about the city and through the parks once or twice almost daily, to walk about the streets to some extent with his valet, and to attend luncheon and dinner parties frequently, and on April 6, 1918, he went in a taxicab to an auction room, where he spent about two and a half hours selecting furniture.

5. I am of the opinion that the execution of the sentence imposed would not be a peril to the defendant within the meaning of the question suggested at the time the sentence was imposed, and I decline to recommend that he be granted a respite, commutation of pardon, but recommend that the sentence be executed.

Mrs. George Monroe Asks Separation

Mrs. Anna R. Monroe, who got a divorce in 1912 from George W. Monroe, comedian, asked Supreme Court Justice Lehman yesterday for a decree of separation on the ground that she and the defendant were remarried later by the act of her husband in placing a wedding ring on her finger and declaring her his wife. She said that she and her husband were both Roman Catholics and that this was one ground for the resumption of the marital relation. She offered letters from the defendant in support of her contention. Monroe, who is now in a sanitarium for his health, denied the remarriage. He is now paying $42 a week alimony and the plaintiff, wants this increased to $75 a week on the ground that his income is $800 a week. The case will continue today.

SIGNS INSURANCE BILL.

Fraternal Societies Privileged to Extend Policies to Children.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 8.—Governor Whitman today approved the bill introduced by Assemblyman Malone of Albany which accords to fraternal benefit societies the privilege to issue policies on the life of children between 2 and 8 years of age. A similar bill was enacted by the 1915 Legislature, but was vetoed by the Governor because it did not sufficiently safeguard those for whose benefit the protection was sought.

To come in under the provisions of the new act a fraternal benefit society must be in the position to issue and maintain at least 500 infantile insurance policies, the funds derived from premiums on such policies must be segregated and an adequate reserve maintained. Upon attaining the age of eighteen persons insured under the act may have their policies transferred to the adult membership class.

Lend Him A Hand

going over the top, his gun in hand, his jaw set, his heart on fire. It is the most dramatic moment in the life of this soldier—and in the life of this nation.

His heart and mind are set on one thing —VICTORY—victory over an enemy who stands for acts and ideas which this soldier despises—which he is ready to give his life to destroy.

We here at home hate these things too. We are pledged to their destruction—to our last dollar and our last man. But this soldier can actually—get-his-hands-on-them—and root them out of the world forever—if we will lend him a hand.

This Boy Is the Symbol of Fighting America

He stands for the aspiration, the conviction of a hundred million people translated into action. He is doing what the rest of us are dreaming. Only through him can we win the Victory.

But He Can't Do It with His Bare Hands! He asks you to back him up with guns, shells, tanks, airplanes. Let's lend him a hand by lending our dollars. Then no power in the world can prevent him from winning the Victory.

The long fighting ages of the world have never seen a better soldier than this boy of yours—your son—your husband—your brother—your friend. He stands for the sons of America, hundreds of thousands strong, soon to be millions. He is doing his part—we must do ours!

INDIA SCULPTURE ADDED TO MUSEUM

OLD CHINESE PAINTINGS

Modern War Helmets in the Department of Arms and Armor—Mrs. J. E. Parsons's Loan Exhibit of Laces.

Most important in the accessions of the Metropolitan Museum of Art for this month is a delightful relief sculpture of Vishnu, "The Preserver, the Pillar of the Universe." The relief is 61¾ inches in height by 28 in width, and is beautifully carved from a greenish black stone in high relief. The figure, standing erect, is impressive and the serious face gives the idea of the thought power for which Vishnu stands, the balancing force between the contending powers of good and evil. There is a wonderful amount of finely carved detail in the ornamentation of the figure and the sort of canopy under which it stands. At the foot of two pillars on either side are two smaller figures, and in the upper part of the relief are tiny figures who represent the ten avatars of Vishnu. The figure comes from a temple in Kikkeri in the Mysore district of Southern India, which was erected in 1171, and the sculpture is supposed to date back to the last quarter of the twelfth century. It was removed to England in the early part of the nineteenth century.

Two fine old Chinese paintings by Li Lung-Mien are to be seen in the Department of Far Eastern Art in cases under glass, where their interesting qualities may be studied. They are black and white, on scrolls, come from a shop in Shanghai, and were obtained for the museum by the aid of Charles L. Freer, for whom they had been reserved. They are wonderful examples of fine, strong drawing. One of them shows the Lohans and holy men traveling on marvelous animals, dragons, phoenixes, and peacocks to the Buddhist heaven, where Buddha is waiting to receive them, and a second shows a group of Taoist saints traveling across the sea in as remarkable a fashion to an island where they are received by a couple of godlike figures.

Two temple guardians, warlike heroes, the Japanese Ni-ten, done in wood, standing on recumbent monsters, are other acquisitions in the Far Eastern Department. They come from a collection of Japanese sculpture formed in Osaka by a foreigner at the time when Japanese ruins were disregarded and contents of old temples sold to any purchaser, and at his death disposed of and traced to San Francisco, where the museum succeeded in obtaining this section. There are usually more soldiers repair, but representing the best age of Japanese sculpture.

A cannon and two cannon balls of the late fourteenth century, French, are acquisitions shown in the department of arms and armor, Wing H, Room 9, and in the same department are modern war helmets, which will interest the public. There is a German helmet given to the museum by Sumner Healey, a late model of the French helmet, and a model of the American helmet. This French type of helmet is used in the Italian and Belgian armies, and the American helmet used at the present time is modeled after the English helmet.

There are increasing numbers of soldiers accepting the invitation of the museum to visit it free on pay days and to accept the service of guides to view the museum collections. These museum guides are on hand daily at 2 o'clock to receive any of the soldiers who may wish to see the museum under their direction. There are usually more of them on Saturdays than other days of the week to accept the services of the guides and fewer on Sundays, when they come with sisters, sweethearts, and wives and do their own conducting.

American Hospital Needs Funds.

An appeal for funds to carry on the work of the American Hospital in Nice was issued yesterday by Mrs. William Whitlock of 40 West Forty-fifth Street. The hospital was opened in January, 1915, by the American colony in Nice. It then had thirty beds, which were afterward increased to fifty. It is now under the direction of Mrs. Dulany Hunter, wife of the American Consul. The hospital has been supported entirely by voluntary contributions, $30 per month endowing a bed. Checks for Mrs. Dulany Hunter may be sent to Mrs. William Whitlock, who will forward them.

Appeal for Aid for Frenchwomen.

Mrs. Whitney Warren, Treasurer of the New York Committee, Secours National Fund for the Relief of French Women and Children and Belgian Refugees, received by cable yesterday from Paris an urgent appeal for funds. The committee very recently sent $60,000 abroad and regarded the message, the first appeal it has received during the four years it has been engaged in the work, as evidence of the emergency demands caused by the German drive on the Western front. Contributions may be sent to Mrs. Warren at 16 East Forty-seventh Street.

20 HURT IN WRECK OF EMPIRE EXPRESS

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., April 8.—John R. Botts of Albany, engineer of the Empire State Express, was killed and some twenty other persons were injured today when the west-bound Empire State Express on the New York Central Railroad ran into a derailed freight train a mile and a half west of here. Fireman Ballinger and Fireman Davis were injured in the crash.

A. L. Price of Lavonia and William D. Hunter of Albany, passengers on the Empire, are said to have been permanently blinded in one eye by shattered glass.

Eastbound train No. 16, known as the New York and New England Express, also plunged into the wreckage and the engine was overturned, but none of its passengers was injured.

The freight, an eastbound special food train, was derailed by a broken truck, and several of the cars were thrown across the westbound tracks. The engine of the Empire State Express was overturned in the collision with the derailed cars, and Botts and his fireman were hurled across the rails to the bank of the Mohawk River. All traffic on the main line was blocked for many hours. Among the passengers on the Empire who were hurt, but not seriously, were Lieutenant John P. Bushnell, Washington, D. C.; Nat Ellis, Syracuse; Charles Toaster, Lake Pleasant, N. Y.; Mrs. Emma Gindry, Carthage, N. Y.; Elizabeth G. Holmes, Saratoga Springs; Norman Parker, Erie; Harry H. Berger, Yonkers; Marion Totcomb, Fredonia, N. Y.; Mrs. Michael McCarthy, Ossining; Mabel Sheffield, Sharon, N. Y.; Robert Walker, Brookville, Ontario; Richard Hodge, Albany; Mrs. Alfred Leclaire, Tupper Lake, N. Y.; H. J. Myers, Greenwich, N. Y.; John Keepler, Albany; C. A. Butler, New Hope, Penn.; Albert Campbell, Buffalo; M. Creedon, Little Falls, N. Y.; Charles M. Chistler, Waterloo, N. Y.; Miss Eunice Powiman, Syracuse; Robert Vogells, Troy; C. A. Roferidge, Albany; Mrs. Robert H. Coughlan, Albany; William Chute, Spencer, N. Y.; William Randolph Nugent, Buffalo; Frank Glynn, Palmer Falls; Jacob Fitzer, Syracuse; Oakley Esmay, Seward, N. Y.; Thomas Fagerin, Newark, and John Cosseau, Potsdam.

At the local offices of the New York Central Railroad it was said last night that owing to the fact that the telegraph wires were knocked down and communication interfered with, there was little news of the wreck of the Empire State Express. It was authoritatively stated, however, that there were no deaths among the passengers, and that the list of injured was not above twenty.

It was declared that this was the first wreck that the Empire State Express, one of the crack trains on the Central, had ever figured in. The passengers on the wrecked trains were taken to their destination in other trains.

Those bound for New York came into Grand Central at 8:30 last night on train 40, known as The New Yorker.

CORD TIRES

We took the cord tire and put Kelly-Springfield mileage in it—and made Kelly-Springfield Cords.

None of the good points of cord construction was lost. Kelly Cords are light on their feet. You can push a heavy car all over the garage floor with one hand when it has its Kelly Cords on. This easy riding goes with a construction strong enough to stand harder wear than you will ever give a tire.

We tested 500 Kelly Cords on cars weighted up to 5200 pounds, running day and night over mid-winter roads. The average mileage was 11,725 for rear wheels; 14,000 for front wheels; 12,000 miles all around.

SWANN SEES MENACE TO SOLDIERS HERE

TO ASK WASHINGTON'S AID

Prosecutor Denies That Raids on Resorts Were Prompted by Impending Government Action.

District Attorney Swann said yesterday that the moral conditions revealed by his raids on Sunday morning on certain resorts between Forty-fifth and Fiftieth Streets and Sixth and Seventh Avenues, were a menace to soldiers and sailors on leave in this city, and that he intended to communicate with the War Department and plan a campaign in co-operation with it for the protection of men in uniforms in this city.

The District Attorney said that he had not notified either Mayor Hylan or Police Commissioner Enright of the preparations for these raids, and that, so far as he knew, they had not been informed of them in advance. He said that he had made the arrangements for the raids with Police Inspector Henry, and that the forty detectives who had taken part in the round-up had acted with great skill and energy.

One thing which the raid revealed, according to the District Attorney, was that there was apparently no understanding between the War Department and the police of this city as to the action which should be taken when soldiers or sailors were found intoxicated or with liquor in their possession which had been supplied by resort keepers. The District Attorney said:

"It should be easy to obtain information from men in uniform regarding these resorts. The police have apparently not been taking intoxicated soldiers into custody, or at least those found under the influence of liquor on Sunday morning were allowed to go. As far as I have learned, the police have no instructions regarding their duty in such cases. Co-operation between this office and the police and the War Department should be established in order to deal effectively with this evil. I expect to take the matter up with the acting Secretary of War."

"We have been co-operating with officers of the army to reach certain specific evils, but I believe that a broad program should be laid out to eliminate such conditions as were discovered on Sunday morning."

District Attorney Swann said that he had not been in touch with the Committee on Training Camp Activities, of which ex-Commissioner of Accounts Poadick is the head. This committee, according to reports, is conducting a quiet inquiry into the alleged sale of liquor to uniformed men and other evils. Judge Swann denied yesterday that the activity of his office had been inspired by reports that drastic Governmental action was impending.

A number of the men and women arrested in the raids will be taken before the Grand Jury to tell of resorts which sell liquor without licenses or after the closing hour of 1 A. M., and the present Grand Jury inquiry into gambling, it was learned, may be diverted into a broad investigation of underworld conditions in this city for the purpose of closing places which have been violating the law against the sale of liquor to uniformed men.

RANGER WILL CASE ARRESTS

Wexler and Cunningham, Charged with Fraud Conspiracy.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., April 8.—The alleged attempt to fake a will of Henry W. Ranger, the landscape artist, and thereby defraud the National Academy of Design out of $250,000, resulted today in the arrest of Charles N. Wexler, a Stamford attorney, and Richard H. Cunningham of this city, out of friendship for whom Wexler says he entered the alleged conspiracy to defraud the Ranger estate and its chief beneficiary. Both are charged with conspiracy, and each has been released under $2,500 bail pending trial.

Miss Edith Ranger, sister of Henry W. Ranger, and Carl W. Myer, a New York lawyer, are also charged in the warrant with conspiracy.

The complaint charges that Myer, Edith F. Ranger, Wexler, and Cunningham, between Jan. 15 and Jan. 20, conspired to defraud the estate of Henry W. Ranger by secretly and wrongfully making false statements and affidavits and instruments.

Wexler was suspended from the practice of law by the Superior Court last Wednesday. Both he and Cunningham have made affidavits which will figure in the prosecution. Wexler, in his affidavit, swears to the truth of the charges made in the warrant on which he was arrested today.

DUTCH ENVOY GOING HOME.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Dr. August Phillips, the recently accredited Minister from the Netherlands to the United States, will return shortly to Holland. Both at the State Department and the Belgian Legation the statement was made that the return of Minister Phillips has no political significance and is in no manner related to the action of the United States Government in requisitioning a part of Holland's merchant fleet for war purposes. The legation authorized the statement that he has asked for leave on account of his health.

10,000 GARMENTS FOR POOR.

Needlework Guild Reports 4,171 New Members for Week's Drive.

More than 10,000 new garments for the poor from 4,171 new members were reported at the meeting of the New York Branch of the Needlework Guild of America at the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday afternoon. These were the returns for the first week of a drive for 10,000 new members, each giving two new garments as entrance dues.

The guild, which provides new clothes for convalescent patients coming from hospitals, and contributes to the nurses and other settlements, last year gave out 750,000 new garments to the needy. It works without capital and has, as its members say, its "headquarters under its hat." It pays no salaries or rent, and in November, when its year's dues of garments are sent in, some kind friend always contributes a temporary home in which it may receive them. Its regular work is done through section Presidents, who are pledged to bring in 100 garments each year, but who bring in many more, one section President last year having a record of 1,000 garments.

Mrs. H. G. Henderson is the Treasurer. The guild has a room for war relief work at 160 Fifth Avenue, in the Mohawk Building, a large, light room with accommodations for 100 workers, and it asks for volunteers for this service.

$200,000 FOR JEWISH FUND.

Drive of Brooklyn Federation Gets Many Members.

Magistrate Geismar announced last night at a meeting of the team workers and captains in the campaign of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities to raise $500,000 and enroll 25,000 members, that about $200,000 had been contributed already, with the enrollment of members only a few thousand short of the goal. He told the workers in the Unity Club, at Bedford Avenue and Dean Street, Brooklyn, that there was every sign that the aims of the campaign would be attained when the campaign closed on Monday, April 15.

Bird S. Coler said that the Department of Charities was ready to cooperate with the federation and all other charitable organizations in their plans.

The FRANKLIN Big Window Sedan
Wins Instant Recognition as the Ideal Year-Round Car

EXPERIENCED motorists have always looked forward to a perfected Enclosed Car, which would combine the superior comfort of the enclosed type with the superior economy and roadability of the open one. That car is here—

The Franklin Big Window Sedan has won the quick and ungrudging recognition which the American public always gives to the best.

Having pioneered the Sedan type in this country, it is not surprising that the Franklin Company has now perfected it—both in Performance and in Beauty of Appearance.

The Big Window Feature alone excites admiration wherever the car is shown. By placing the doors forward and eliminating two side pillars, Franklin design has removed the usual pent-up feeling. Now, no matter where one is sitting, the view is as broad as the eye will take in. In every sense, it deserves the description "a personal Observation Car."

Advance design, coupled with the basic Franklin principles of Scientific Light Weight and Flexible Construction, makes the Big Window Sedan an enclosed car that is practical for all-round, all-the-year use.

The usual enclosed car, heavy and rigid, wastes gasoline in moving its own weight—and mercilessly pounds out its tires before their time.

The Big Window Sedan consistently delivers—

18-20 Miles to the gallon of gasoline, instead of 8.
10,000 Miles to the set of tires, instead of 5,000.

The heavy and rigid enclosed car compels its owner to choose his roads; the Big Window Sedan is indifferent to them. It runs lightly, flexibly, resiliently on any road. It handles with strainless ease and instant responsiveness.

There is no other car like it. It is of its own kind. Cool and dustless for summer use; warm and reliable for winter running, the Big Window Sedan fits every feminine need and is the car of every use for the busy man.

It makes congested city traffic easy; it turns all-day touring into an exhilarating experience. It does exactly what the ideal Enclosed Car should do; it delivers Service and Comfort—economically—every day, for every use, in every weather, on every road.

That is the Franklin Big Window Sedan.

WE CAN list and describe the many features of the Big Window Sedan. But cold type cannot picture them to you. Only the car itself can do that. See the car today. Ride in it—and realize what is meant by Enclosed Car Perfection.

The Big Window Sedan
Only one post breaks the span between the wind-shield and the rear of the body, and this one is so placed by reason of the extra wide door that it offers no obstruction. Widest view obtainable.

Slanting V-Windshield
Another device for broadening the vision. Also obviates the confusion of reflection.

Easy Entrance
Single wide door, directly beside front seats, gives access to car without confusion or disturbance. Driver can enter without clambering over other passengers. A patented Feature of the Big Window Sedan.

Adjustable Front Seats
Adjustable front seats allow long-legged or short-legged man to ride comfortably. Front seats also equipped with friction device that holds them in position when tilted forward.

Double Pull Levers for Doors
Within easy reach, wherever you are sitting, is pull lever for opening door without necessity of reaching forward to release catch.

Decorations

BRITISH AND JAPANESE AT VLADIVOSTOK.

Foolish and unwarranted as we know them to be, the fears in respect to the Japanese "invasion" of Siberia expressed by the multitudinous Soviets who constitute the present Government in Russia must candidly be taken into account. These fears are largely due to ignorance, but they are in a measure an expression of that dull hostility to the "capitalistic Governments" of the Allies which is to be looked for in leaders of the class struggle in which the Bolsheviki imagine themselves to be engaged. So far as the influence of LENINE extends, moreover, we must expect to find an active, and now scarcely concealed, interest in the forwarding of Germany's plans. For these reasons, the temper of the Bolsheviki must be reckoned with, as any mistaken course which gives them a pretext for hostility to the allied Governments might have awkward consequences.

The fact that British troops have landed with the Japanese at Vladivostok ought to reassure even the most susceptible of the Soviets. Joint action should dispel any fears they may have entertained of aggressive designs. The move was a friendly one, apparently it was necessary, and we may infer it had to be taken at once. If time had permitted, it would have been wiser to arrange for a participation of others of the Allies in the movement. The principle of the unified plan, of that co-ordinated action which might with good results have been adopted much earlier on the western front, was clearly indicated in respect to the landing of armed men at Vladivostok. If soldiers of France, Italy, and the United States, as well as of Great Britain and Japan, had taken part in the expedition, possibly accompanied by and under the direction of a joint civil commission of the Allies, the Soviets could not have maintained even the pretense of alarm. Evidently there was not time for so elaborate a plan of action in what is not, after all, an undertaking of the first magnitude and importance.

It is to be assumed, of course, that the allied Governments will reassure the Soviets by a frank statement that the landing of the British and Japanese at Vladivostok is purely for protection of life and property and that no purposes inconsistent with Russian independence or territorial integrity are entertained. The Russians should understand that territorial questions are not now under decision—one and all await the determination of the peace conference. The Allies are not going to permit Germany to rearrange frontiers either by arms or by intrigue; nor are they going to do for themselves what they forbid to Germany.

We hope the members of the Soviets in Moscow and elsewhere will read and ponder the words spoken by President WILSON at Baltimore on Saturday night. They will find in them a full commitment to the principle of Russian independence, of real self-determination in good faith by the Russian people and the people of the provinces which made up the old empire. The President points out that it is the evident purpose of the Germans "to "make all the Slavic peoples, all the "free and ambitious nations of the "Baltic peninsula, all the lands that "Turkey has dominated and misruled, "subject to their will and ambition "and build upon that dominion an "empire of force upon which they "fancy that they can then erect an "empire of gain and commercial supremacy—an empire as hostile to the "Americas as to the Europe which "it will overawe." It is not so to be, it cannot be permitted. "That program once carried out," said the President, "America and all who "care and dare to stand with her "must arm and prepare themselves to "contest the mastery of the world," for if Germany is permitted to hold the Slavic peoples and the Slavic lands in bondage and to build up the empire of force that she has planned, then "everything America has lived for "and loved and grown great to vindicate and bring to a glorious realization will have fallen in utter ruin "and the gates of mercy once more "pitilessly shut upon mankind."

That is what Germany intends, that is what Germany proclaims. It is her insolent challenge to the world. "I accept the challenge," said the President, and then he gave that pledge that the free men of the world have heard with deep joy and satisfaction that "force, force to the utmost, force without stint or limit," shall be set in motion against Germany and unremittingly employed to beat her down until the work is done.

The President spoke there with the voice of all the Allies, for neither England, nor France, nor Italy, nor Serbia, nor Belgium, nor any free land can give over the conflict until force has made right the law of the world and "cast every selfish dominion down in the dust." Short of that there is no safety anywhere. That utterance of the President is the world's pledge that Russia shall be delivered, saved from the strangling grasp of the Hun, for it is easy to see that on that all depends. For the western world there is no freedom, no security against the German danger, unless this plan of building up a great empire in the East, of extending German political and economic control over the whole of the Balkans, the whole of Russia, it may be the whole of India, is defeated and destroyed altogether. It is incomprehensible that the Russians can be so short-sighted as not to see that from the western Powers alone can come their freedom, their future happiness and prosperity, that from Germany can come only slavery.

WATER POWER LEGISLATION.

Now, when waste is almost a crime, the United States is still wasting an enormous energy, an unused water power which has been estimated at 50,000,000 to 55,000,000 horse power. The release of coal which a proper development of only an appreciable part of this stored, wasted potential strength would make possible may be imagined. In transportation and industry the work of this neglected magician might have been fruitful beyond belief.

It is of no use to quarrel now with the estimable and virtuous gentlemen who have acted and got Congress to act on the theory that true conservation consists in letting the national treasures sleep unemployed; that everybody in business, and especially every soulless and godless corporation, is a burglar; and that to make money or allow anybody else to make money out of national resources is the unpardonable sin. For the most part, the water power has been locked up as if it were Alaska or a murderous lunatic.

War has brought sense, a spirit of conciliation, a certain moderation even among the most transcendental conservationists. So, at last, two bills dealing with water power on navigable streams and two more relating to the development of water power on public lands have been incorporated, as to their best provisions, in a bill prepared by the War, Agricultural, and Interior Departments, covering both the hitherto separately considered sides of Federal treatment of water power, and putting the whole water power jurisdiction in charge of those three departments, the heads thereof constituting a commission for that purpose.

This bill, favored even by Mr. GIFFORD PINCHOT, has been amended and improved. It should be passed, as Secretary LANE says, "speedily to supply power for the war industries of "the nation during the period of "fighting to come."

DUTY AND PRIVILEGE.

In his lay sermon at Philadelphia on Saturday Secretary MCADOO said it is the spiritual duty of Americans to take bonds for the purposes for which Liberty bonds are issued. This hint from the pews to the pulpit was echoed on Sunday in all published sermons. This is a new note among churchmen, as new as the President's "force" speech is new among the politicians and statesmen on this side of the ocean. They all speak of the duty to carry on the war and to win on the issues of the war. It is welcome help, whether given at each service, as some pastors intend, or whether with special emphasis on Liberty Loan Sunday, a week from next Sunday. The only objection to that plan is that all the bonds may have been taken before then. Hundreds of towns announce that their quota was filled on Saturday, half a business day. No doubt there will be thousands.

This is the second American generation since there has been a war on that elevation of sentiment. Americans are a unit behind their President and Mr. MCADOO for a war without compromise and without surrender until force has shackled cunning and wrong in world politics. That is an American ideal. Unconditional surrender to the world's ideal of peace is the meaning of our Liberty Loans, which shall know neither limit nor stop until peace has won its perfect victory.

But the duty to buy Liberty bonds need not obscure the value of the privilege of subscribing. On this head it is necessary to speak in the manner of the money changers rather than of the preachers. No such significance attaches to fluctuations in our Government bonds as in other bonds. There are only three issues of bonds, but there are or will be six descriptions. Each time there is a conversion there is an alteration of conditions upon which the market puts an appraisal, but no one of the prices quoted has anything to do with the payment of the principal or interest, or with the winning of the war. The worth of the tax exemption privileges, the length of the terms for which interest will be paid, the comparative worth of long-time or short-time money under the conditions of the specific day apart from anything about the bonds, are examples of details which the inexpert need not bother about.

When an investor makes up his mind what sort of bond he wants he has only to take that sort, in full assurance that for the time he buys the market price is right, even though for another day there should be another price. Sooner or later the attempt to peg the bonds will be abandoned. Equal prices cannot be given to unequal values, and even United States bonds cannot be of equal price or equal value with unequal conditions affecting both the market and the bonds. No bond was ever issued by any Government with such a margin of safety as our bonds now. The fact of a present discount is only a guarantee of a premium when the world money market justifies it.

It is not noble to speak of these bonds in this manner. General PERSHING, the President, Secretary MCADOO, countless preachers and lawyers tell why these bonds should be bought. The limit of the loan should be the authorized limit, and the quicker it is announced the better. A blind man can see that the sentiment about this loan differs from the earlier two loans. All countries have floated their loans more easily as the war temper rose. We are not yet at the heights of our holy rage, but we are becoming aroused. It is said that the war loans already floated exceed one hundred billions. It is almost an incomprehensible sum. It is less than half our wealth, and we will give it all before we shall abandon the issues of this war.

A BRIDGE THAT SHOULD BE BUILT

For some years the New York Central Railroad has wanted to build, and the general public advantage has required, a high bridge over the Hudson, south of Albany, between which and Rensselaer both rail and water transportation has been clogged by the drawbridges. Traffic has been and is further interfered with by the sharp grades each side of the river, especially on the western side. An improvement is necessary. It is made so by the growth of freight and on account of unchangeable physical obstructions on both sides of and inside of Albany, where land adequate to new necessary facilities can't be had.

Albany is become a gorge, where freight from and to New York and Boston can't be handled conveniently and is delayed, stuck, constricted. A 600-foot-span bridge has been approved by the Board of Army Engineers, by the War Department. By unimpeachable authorities, by Major General GOETHALS, who has studied the subject carefully, this bridge is regarded as one that will present no obstacle to Hudson traffic.

Albany, through a local and mistaken view of her interests, demands a cantilever bridge of nearly double span, a bridge difficult, dangerous, and requiring so much additional steel as now to be impossible. The Sage-Welsh bill, which yesterday Governor WHITMAN was asked to veto at a hearing where General GOETHALS was the effective advocate of the Federal and sufficient plan, means no bridge. It is a mere dilatory and obstructive device. There is, in fact, an important legal and constitutional question involved, already before the courts.

The fears and jealousies of Albany must not stand in the way of the free movement of national commerce. New York has had similar jealousies and fears. She has got over them. Albany will get over hers. Meanwhile, it is well to remember that the railroads are at present an annex of the Federal Government and an indispensable auxiliary of the war.

PURPOSE OF THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE.

In the first month of the war the German objective was Paris, and it was almost attained. This view has been challenged, but there is evidence that General VON KLUCK boasted on the eve of the battle of the Marne that he would be in Paris in forty-eight hours. The occupation of the capital would manifestly have been of great moral as well as military advantage to the invaders. At that time the only British troops in France were the remaining effectives of the first seven divisions which had sustained enormous losses in the retreat from Mons. It has been contended that the German plan was to destroy, capture, or disperse the armies of JOFFRE and FRENCH, and that the taking and holding of Paris was of minor importance.

The German plan undoubtedly included both those objects, but the moral value of the occupation of Paris was such from the German point of view that the withdrawal of the British from the campaign in France was considered as likely to follow; certainly the British Government had no well-trained reinforcements and very few troops of any kind to send across the Channel in September, 1914. If the Germans had taken Paris in their first rush they would have been wrong about British psychology. The Government would not have given up the campaign in France, but it would have had to rely upon the skill of the French Generals in the handling of their armies to provide the opportunity for further co-operation between the military forces of the two countries on French soil. It must be remembered that Amiens, almost midway between Paris and Calais, was in possession of the Germans before the battle of the Marne was fought. With Paris falling to them they would have had a great strategic advantage in the enterprise of preventing future co-operation between the French and British.

These considerations, speculative as they are, because the Germans never reached Paris, have a certain relevancy to the design of the Germans in their present offensive. They have to deal now with two great armies and the nucleus of a third army, also with the Belgians, instead of with one great French army and what remained of a small British force and a smaller Belgian force, which was the case in September, 1914. If the western Allies are not at this moment represented by as many effectives from the Channel to Switzerland as the Germans can reckon, the disparity in favor of the invaders cannot be considerable. If the Germans can bring up reserves on the battle line from above Arras to the junction of the Oise and the Ailette, so can the western Allies on their side of the line. The French have large reserves of trained men; England has many home divisions that could be ferried across the Channel; and American troops are landing in France almost every day. What a contrast to conditions early in September, 1914, when the Germans were knocking at the gates of Paris, which were shaken with every discharge of their big guns!

If this contrast is borne in mind, it will be realized that the German General Staff is now playing a desperate game and cannot afford to make mistakes. The greatest mistake of all would be to incur such heavy losses in pressing the offensive without gaining a decision that the striking power of the Germans would be crippled, inviting a vigorous counter-attack by fresh troops of the Allies who would not be denied. The rush of the first stage did not carry the Germans as far on the road as they expected to attain, and in the second stage the war machine lumbers along and creaks, while the losses mount up appallingly. It is to be a long-drawn-out battle, with the line of seventy miles (for fighting between Lens and La Bassée Canal north of Arras has now been reported) swaying to and fro, with local victories first on one side and then on the other.

Manifestly, the capture of either Paris or Amiens would not bring a decision for the Germans. The taking of any city in this offensive could not loom large. Immense numbers of French and British troops, organized armies, together with Americans and Belgians, would still have to be dealt with. The campaign would go on and on. England would pour reinforcements across the Channel to save Calais. Around Amiens (if it were taken) there would be another great battle, and the Germans would have to reckon with French armies in their rear. It must be always understood that the Allies, with their superior air service, cannot be taken by surprise. To talk of any city being an objective of the Germans in their offensive is to be misleading. The taking of any place would be incidental to their main purpose, which is to separate the British from the French Army, if that can be done, and outflank, roll up, rout, and destroy or capture either or both armies or parts of them if it cannot be done.

To destroy or capture, or disrupt and disorganize, great armies in the field is the strategic purpose of the German General Staff. It is the key to what HINDENBURG means when he says that "our plan is devised on a great scale."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Roads Are a Means, Not an End. There is a reminder of other days and another mistake in the fact that an effort is making by the State Commissioner of Highways to have passed a law which, so far as it proved effective, would hamper present day transportation facilities at just the time when there is almost desperate need that they should be as numerous as possible. This is to be accomplished by forbidding the use of large motor trucks on the ground that they are destructive to road surfaces.

That the five-ton trucks with their heavier loads do injure roads not made with a view to traffic of such weight is doubtless true. It is also true that when ordinary automobiles first came into an approach to general use the harm they did to the best roads of that time, those of the sort that immortalized the name of Macadam, immediately became apparent, and it had not a little to do with the bitter hostility with which self-moving vehicles long had to contend. They were variously fined, restricted, and persecuted in the vain hope of ending their vogue, and this was natural enough, perhaps, for communities that had expended large amounts of money for roads that resisted admirably the wear for which they were intended did not like to see the expensive surfacing of those roads distributed over the landscape as dust and the whole investment lost.

Hence much of the early antagonism to the new device. After a while, however, it was commonly realized that the thing to do was not to fight the automobile, but to make roads adapted to its peculiar method of traction. After a little experimenting, the accomplishing of this end was found to be practicable at less than prohibitive expense, and now the automobile does no harm at all to roads deserving to be called good examples of roadmaking art. It will be the same as regards the heavy trucks. If they are a necessity of the time, and such they seem to be, the effort to banish them from our highways will fail, and it ought to fail.

The object of road building is not to have roads that will keep in good condition if the use of them is restricted to traffic as conducted yesterday, but to accommodate the traffic of today and tomorrow. The motor truck has certainly come to stay, and to it the roads must conform, not it to the roads.

Germany and Her Workers. For years past we have been told that, whatever else might be said about and against the German form of government, it made better provision than any other for the protection of the working classes, and that by various devices of regulation and insurance it saved them from many or most of the hardships and anxieties that weigh upon those classes in other countries.

That all this was done through the exercise of a paternalism that would be resented and found more or less nearly intolerable by peoples unused to German rule—that has also usually been admitted or stated, but it has passed as undeniable that, though the German Government was despotic, the despotism was benevolent and its material effects admirable and enviable. Foreign observers as well as German authorities have been agreed on this question, and nobody seems to have noticed that when the German workingman emigrated, as he did in large numbers, rarely or never did he return to the land where, according to these tales, life would be for him so much more secure and so much happier than it is elsewhere.

Now, as was told in an article printed in THE TIMES on Sunday, we must either abandon all of these long-accepted tales about industrial Germany or else believe that official German statisticians have been engaged in a dark conspiracy to paint black the bright picture with which we have been familiar. For, according to the reports quoted in the article, the German workers are wretchedly paid, toil daily for hours dreadfully numerous, and live in crowded barracks where everything is vile except the elaborately decorated street fronts. As for the much-advertised insurances against death, illness, lack of employment, and the like, it seems that, while they do exist, the benefits enjoyed under them are so minute that the difference between them and nothing is hardly worth measuring—or at any rate would be so considered anywhere except in Germany.

This is startling news—so contrary to what had seemed well-established fact that it will require something of corroboration, for most people, before it is accepted. Yet the figures are there, their sources are given, and they fit in wonderfully well, if not with what we have previously heard about Germany, at least with all that we have really known about her.

Afrikander Diplomacy in Vienna. That General SMUTS is not a carpet knight—that he was trained on the veldt, not in courts—that he uses language to express thought, not to conceal it—all these and several other things like them have long been of almost common knowledge. It had never been supposed, however, outside the circle of his personal acquaintances, at least, that he would be so oblivious to established custom in high diplomatic circles as to enter on delicate negotiations with a stately representative of the Austro-Hungarian Government with such rude words as were credited—or discredited—to him in yesterday's dispatches.

According to the tale as told, instead of making graceful and cautious approaches to the subject to be considered—the making of a separate peace with the Allies—he began with the bare, stark inquiry, "Is it true that you want to make a separate peace?" Naturally the Austrian was aghast, and naturally he began a long and elaborately evasive answer. Still ruthless, the Afrikander cut him short with a demand for "Yes or no," and, not getting it, he said, "Good night!" Thereupon the might-have-been momentous conversation is said to have ended—and it certainly did if it so began.

General SMUTS has seen many cities and learned the minds of many men. He doubtless has as many "manners" as he needs in his business, and he doubtless uses them on what he deems fitting occasion. If he shocked the Austrian diplomat and Vienna, it was because he deemed it expedient to do so.

THE LAW AND THE NURSES.

Too Much Regulation Keeps Young Women Out.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The nurse problem reminds one very much of the railroad problem. There has been too much law put on the nurses as well as on the railroads. If the railroads had not been overtaxed facilities these days would be more satisfactory.

The tendency is to put the law on the young girl in her home and prohibit her trying to become a nurse, in a sense penalizing the entrance to the profession. In this democratic country, feeling the stress of the last straw, the law should be taken from the source and put on the hospitals. Hospitals should be lifted to a high standard, and the training schools associated with them should also be standardized. There should be a common sense curriculum, not of brain stuffing but ward training, of two years only. There should be a complete inspection made and publicity given to the reports of these inspections.

The law should make nurses to help the sick, not to accommodate institutions and factories. The New Jersey Legislature this year had an act presented, copied largely after the present Pennsylvania law, covering the above points. It was killed by the nurses, who are now in power.

Physicians do not ask for the "R. N.," but they do ask for competency, and the public ought to ask that every young woman desiring to become a nurse should be given the opportunity to try.

THE WAR AIMS OF AN ENGLISH ADMIRAL.

"To Kill Sufficient Germans to Beat the Evil Spirit Which Has Animated Them For So Long."

An English Admiral's "interview" for The New York Times, revised by himself, Dec. 28, 1917.

"When I said to you today: 'Tell me, will the President do the Lord's work; will he keep a stiff upper lip, and refuse to be influenced by the chaff that the Germans are now and again showering out?' you replied that you had just been to see a gentleman on this very subject, and had had a very interesting interview with him. His views were that, in the interests of the allied nations, we should definitely say that we were quite prepared to consider any proposals of peace put forward by Germany and her allies in a fair and impartial spirit. This was necessary because it would show the German people that we were not bent on 'war extermination,' but only wished, in a perfectly reasonable spirit, to make the world a better world for everybody.

"To this I at once gave the reply—'Have you read your Bible?' Read the third chapter of Daniel, eighteenth verse, and see there what Shadrech, Meshach, and Abednego said:

"If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and He will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. but if not, be it known unto thee that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up." &c.

"Having read that, how are you to accept terms and proposals from rulers imbued with the same spirit in Germany, who organized this war on the principles of Force, and treat no treaty as sacred unless it be in their own interests? What guarantee can you have that these same people will carry out a contract if it does not appear to them advantageous? Don't make any mistake, whatever their politicians and statesmen may say about 'War Aims,' the man in the street, of whom I am one, has only one 'war aim,' and a very simple one, and that is to kill sufficient Germans to beat the evil spirit which has animated them for so long.

"You said—'Supposing you get terms and guarantees from these people which appear satisfactory, why not then accept them and have peace in the world?'

"You cannot do that. You leave the rulers and the spirit the same; and on the other side of the picture, look what may happen to the Allies when, three months after this pseudo peace has been reached, they are settling their bills among themselves. Any one who knows human nature at all knows that when it comes to the settling of bills friction is bound to arise. There will probably be recriminations between the Allies—'If you had only done this or that, we should not have had to suffer so much,' and vice versa.

"Recognize that this is not a fancy picture, and then imagine that, when Germany sees that this spirit of contention is sufficiently developed between the Allies, she will come to one or the other and say: 'We require that you shall give no preferential tariffs against our ships, and that the status quo shall be recognized by you; accept this condition, or we loose 200 submarines on you.'

"What power is going to assist that isolated ally then? Are the Allies to try and reform the alliance which has held them together during the war, and are they all to come in against the common enemy again? It is hard to imagine. No. If peace is to come, and God knows no one wishes for peace more than I do, it has got to come because the principles for which the Allies are fighting have triumphed, not only in the military but in the spiritual sense, over German 'Kultur.'

"One last word. If we call ourselves 'Children of the Saviour,' or Christians, then we have to go through our Gethsemane for the sake of our principles even as He did."

THE GERMAN WEDGE.

Even if It Split French and British, There is America to Deal With.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the article by your military critic on the struggle for Amiens in today's TIMES occurs the statement that "Germany will win if she can reach the Channel ports."

I wonder whether the writer intended to make so sweeping a statement or whether he omitted to state a reservation made mentally that they would "win the campaign." Germany's object in the present campaign is obvious; but I do not believe that she will win ultimately, even if she does now succeed in separating the French and the British.

Up to a certain point there is a parallel between the present effort of Germany to capture the valley of the Somme to the coast—which she might do if she succeeded in driving the Allies back of Abbeville, twenty miles west of Amiens—and the successful campaigns of Grant and Farragut for the Mississippi Valley in the War of the Rebellion. The latter divided the Confederacy so that the forces west of the river could no longer combine with those east of it; so a German success in the present campaign would separate the French from the British. But there is this great difference from this point on: The Confederacy had no America and its unlimited resources to come to its assistance, nor did the Confederacy by her navy control the sea. She needed help, but had neither the ally nor the sea power that would make it possible for the ally to help.

On the other hand, should Germany succeed in separating French and British, by capturing the Somme Valley, she would still have America to contend with, a thoroughly aroused and awakened America, which can and will come, in fact has come, to the assistance of the Allies, and which can and will be able to continue to help because she and the Allies control the sea so completely that even the submarine will not be able to wrest it from them.

It was the failure of his sea power that overcame Napoleon despite his land victories; and Germany would still have to reckon with the sea power of the Allies and America should she continue victorious on land, to the extent of separating the Allies in France.

This is not the time, nor do conditions warrant a forecast that "Germany will win," even if she reach the Channel by way of Amiens; Germany must not win; to her present attack there is the response of the President: "Force, force to the utmost, force without stint or limit, the righteous and triumphant force" which shall lead to victory finally.

THE PACIFIST MOTHER'S DEVELOPMENT.

To bear, to rear, to love as mothers love;
To weave the very heartstrings into dreams
For, this her babe, when he has crossed youth's streams,
Seeing the sun of manhood bright above—
And then to tear off pleasure, like a glove,
Strip the fond heart of happiness, and rend
The soul's last fibre, in such wretched end—
The woe of warfare, misery of strife
That calls relentlessly for life, life, life!

To bear, to rear, to love, and then to hear
The bugle calling and the cannon's roar!
He must go forth from this his native shore—
Leave those who love him, those he holds most dear—
To kill, to die—or meet a fate more drear,
A wretched cripple, who was once so fair!
A mother's darling, tortured to despair!
The picture haunts her, plunges her in grief

To bear, to rear, to love, and then to feel
His country needs him and she has no right
To hold him back from this that might affright
The youth whose smile, whose word would ever steal
Her heart's last blood-drop for his precious weal.
And yet what shame, what agony to know
That other sons, as dear, would gladly go—
Fair sons, and cherished as had been her own,
And, in their going, leave sad hearts to moan!

That other mothers, loving just as she,
Were so much braver! That her home, her life,
And his, her son's, were guarded in the strife
By those who treasured their sweet liberty
And would extend it over land and sea!
To bear, to rear, to love—and see him grow
To be a coward! Could she have it so?
No! Death were better! Now, bewildering joy!
He answers proudly—her brave Soldier Boy!

LURANA SHELDON.

FAVORS HUDSON BRIDGE.

Goethals Tells Governor It Would Help in War Shipments.

ALBANY, April 8.—General George W. Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal, appeared before Governor Whitman at a hearing today in opposition to the Sage-Welsh bill, designed to prevent the New York Central Railroad from erecting a bridge with piers in the Hudson River, opposite Castleton. General Goethals declared that the proposed piers would not be a menace to navigation. The erection of a bridge without piers, he said, would require 18,000 more tons of steel than a bridge with piers, an amount of steel sufficient to build 50,000 tons deadweight of ocean steamships, thereby entailing what he termed an unnecessary waste of material and labor.

General Goethals said that the Port of New York was not able to handle all of the embarkation necessitated by war conditions, and that the Federal Government had planned to spend $25,000,000 before the end of the year to make Boston an embarkation port, and that in this connection large reserve storehouses would be built at Schenectady. The construction of the bridge at Castleton should be hastened, he said, in order that there should be no delay in shipments from the West to New York and Boston.

Ex-Governor Glynn was the principal speaker in favor of the measure. He charged that the railroad was "trying to wrap the flag of patriotism around a mere commercial institution" in representing that the construction of the bridge was a war measure. He said he was not against the bridge because there was a possibility that Albany might be sidetracked, but that he opposed a bridge that was not properly built. He called attention to the fact that the Sage-Welsh bill passed the Assembly unanimously, and that only three Senators opposed it.

Others who spoke for the bill were Mayor Watt, Judge Woolard of Albany, and Professor O. H. Landreth of the Union College department of engineering.

PLAN NEW CORPORATION TAX

Bill in Albany Aimed at Firms That Escaped Personal Property Act.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 8.—Many thousand corporations which enjoy exemption from personal property tax under the provisions of the law taxing mercantile and manufacturing corporations would be subject to a tax of 10 cents for each $100 of issued capital stock under a bill that was introduced in the Senate tonight at the request of the State Tax Commission. The law imposing the tax on corporations carried a blanket provision exempting thousands of corporations which were not subject to the 3 per cent. tax it provides for and which therefore escaped the tax collector practically scot free.

It is estimated that from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 would flow into the State Treasury from this new source of revenue. New York City would benefit to the extent of approximately $500,000 annually.

REFUSES IRISH REQUEST.

House Foreign Affairs Committee Won't Discuss Freedom of Ireland.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—John J. Hearn of Westfield, Mass., and a delegation representing Irish organizations of twenty-six States, asked Chairman Flood of the House Foreign Affairs Committee for a hearing on resolutions before the committee touching on the subject of Irish freedom. Mr. Flood said today that there would be no public hearing allowed on this question now. In a letter to the delegation he said:

"I have given careful consideration to your communication and the other letters of similar character, as well as to the resolutions to which they refer, and have reached the conclusion that it would not be for the public interest, at the present time, to grant your request for such a hearing. The serious consideration by the Committee on Foreign Affairs of these resolutions might well be considered as constituting an interference in the internal affairs of another nation, and that nation one of our co-belligerents, and could scarcely fail to prove a source of serious embarrassment to a nation associated with the United States in the war.

"I, therefore, regret that my sense of duty, not only to this country, but also to a nation associated with the United States in the war, makes it necessary to give an unfavorable answer to your request for such a public hearing."

SENATE MODIFIES SEDITION BILL

MEMBERS IN SHARP CLASH

Poindexter and Hardwick Exchange Invectives—Sherman Cites Times Article to Illustrate Point.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Opponents of the Sedition bill as framed by the Judiciary Committee succeeded in the Senate today in putting through modifying amendments, which, it is believed, will smooth the way for ultimate passage of the measure. The day's debate was characterized by a tilt between Senator Poindexter of Washington and Senator Hardwick of Georgia.

The modifications made in the bill were embraced in the acceptance of an amendment offered by Senator Thomas of Colorado inserting the word "willful" in the provision against uttering, printing, or writing "disloyal, profane, scurrilous, or abusive language" about the flag, army, navy, or Government, and substituting "intended" for "calculated" in the use of language put under the ban.

Opponents of the measure as offered by the Judiciary Committee contended that a mere chance remark not intended to be disloyal or scurrilous, ought not to come within the proscribed category. It took the whole day to thrash out this point, the advocates of modification of the measure winning by a margin of half a dozen votes.

As the bill was amended it reads:

Whoever, when the United States is at war, shall willfully utter, print, write, or publish any disloyal, profane, scurrilous, contemptuous or abusive language about the form of Government of the United States or the soldiers or sailors of the United States, or the flag of the United States, or the uniform of the army or navy of the United States, or any language intended to bring the form of Government of the United States, or the Constitution, or the soldiers or sailors, or the flag, or the uniform of the United States into contempt, scorn, contumely or disrepute, or shall utter, print, write, or publish any language calculated to incite or inflame resistance to any duly constituted Federal or State authority in connection with the prosecution of the war, or shall display the flag of any foreign enemy, or shall by utterance, writing, printing, publication, or language spoken, urge, incite, or advocate any curtailment of production in this country of any thing or things, product or products, necessary or essential to the prosecution of the war in which the United States is engaged, with intent to cripple or hinder the United States in the prosecution of the war, and whoever shall advocate, favor, teach, defend, or suggest the doing of any one of the acts or things in this section enumerated and whoever shall by word or act support or favor the cause of the German Empire or its allies in the present war or by word or act oppose the cause of the United States therein, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $20,000 or imprisonment for not more than twenty years, or both.

The Hardwick-Poindexter Clash.

The clash between Senators Hardwick and Poindexter came when the Georgian attempted, unavailingly, to have the measure amended so as to eliminate the word "cause" in the reference to Germany. Mr. Hardwick argued that it was sufficient to prohibit any one from "supporting or favoring" Germany during the war, and that the word "cause" was susceptible of varying construction. The Georgian pointed out that not every one agrees as to the cause of Germany in the war any more than there is entire agreement as to the cause of the United States.

Senator Poindexter insisted that there could be but one viewpoint of America's position in the world conflict, and proceeded to assail Senator Hardwick's opposition to the arming of American merchant vessels. The Georgian, with asperity, replied that he had voted to put the United States in the war and that he was not apologizing for his attitude on the arming of merchant vessels before the United States went into the conflict.

"The Senator from Washington has uttered untruths about me," exclaimed Senator Hardwick. "He has attempted to impugn my patriotism. I want to say I am as loyal to the flag as he is, and I resent his imputation."

Senator Poindexter heatedly retorted that the Georgian had used "insulting and contemptuous language." Senator Hardwick started to reply, but the Washingtonian cut him off abruptly. Senator Poindexter charged that Senator Hardwick was in a position of antagonism to America's attitude in the war. This the Georgian hotly denied.

Senator Sherman attacked the Sedition bill as offered as giving power to the Government to jail its critics.

"It is an abridgment of the right of free speech," he declared. "The trouble now is that there are too many radicals high in the councils of the Administration. Our laws are being administered largely by social settlement workers rather than statesmen."

The Illinois Senator alluded to Assistant Secretary of Labor Louis F. Post as publishing "one of the most scurrilous papers in the country." "Mr. Post, Raymond Robbins, Progressive Party executive; Miss Jane Addams, and others of their ilk," he said, "had too much to say."

"My dear friend Raymond Robbins, I understand, is now in Russia, and I read that he was turned into the streets by the Bolsheviki," went on Mr. Sherman. "They were merely carrying into practice what he has been preaching all his life. He is getting some of his own medicine."

Senator Poindexter suggested that there should be an amendment to the bill to "prevent its administration by any Bolshevik."

Sherman Attacks Creel.

"That would break up the Administration," returned Senator Sherman. The Illinois Senator attacked George Creel, head of the Committee on Public Information, as having put out "radical articles" to the public.

"Well, Mr. Creel and his associates won't administer this law," interposed Senator Nelson of Minnesota. "It is aimed at the gospel of the I. W. W."

Senator Gallinger, Republican leader, remarked that the bill was too extreme.

"It goes from bad to worse," he said. "If in a campaign I happened to say that President Wilson had foolishly sent a letter to Wisconsin denouncing Mr. Lenroot as disloyal, I might say something that could be interpreted as contemptuous, for I would certainly feel that it was a contemptuous proceeding. In that event I could be prosecuted under this law and may be sent to jail."

"That is true," assented Senator Sherman. Picking up a copy of THE NEW YORK TIMES of yesterday from his desk, the Illinois Senator referred to an article in the Magazine Section, under the caption, "Baker and His Task." Senator Sherman called attention to photographs of Secretary of War Baker and Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War under President Lincoln, remarking that "any one could see at a glance who looked like the stronger of the two."

"In the article there are some pointed questions asked," Senator Sherman went on. "It is, in effect, an attack on this Government in the conduct of the war. If it were published after this Sedition bill became a law, some editor of THE TIMES would go to durance vile for it.

"Now, I do not favor curtailment of the freedom of the press. I favor free speech. This bill would be a stroke at it."

Senator Sherman bitterly attacked the Mayor of Collinsville, Ill., for not having prevented the hanging of Praeger, the alleged disloyalist. He characterized the hanging as "willful murder," and declared that every man who had a part in it ought to be hanged.

Senator Jones of New Mexico offered an amendment to the bill providing for the instant dismissal from the Government service of any official or employe who "commits a disloyal act or utters any unpatriotic or disloyal language, or who, in an abusive or violent manner, criticises the army and navy or the flag."

NEW CREEL SPEECH ROUSES CRITICISM

WHY PREPARATION WAITED

War Lecturers Told It Was Because Administration Did Not Want to Give Lie to Peace Efforts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Criticism has been aroused here over a speech delivered today by George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, in which he expressed pride that the country was unprepared for taking part in the great war at the time of its entrance, and made statements flatly contradicting testimony given by officials of the Government concerning defects in the military administration. Among other things Mr. Creel declared that the aerial program would be a credit to the nation, and that not a single soldier had lost his life through neglect.

The occasion of Mr. Creel's speech was the opening meeting of the National Conference of American Lecturers. The delegates represent the lyceums and Chautauquas of the United States and Canada, the National Committee of Patriotic Societies, the societies represented in the speakers' division of the Committee on Public Information, the Red Cross, the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense, State Boards of Education and Chambers of Commerce. The purpose of the convention is to acquaint public speakers with the facts about the war so that they may be better equipped to inform the American people. Montaville Flowers, who presided, introduced Mr. Creel as "the man who made this conference possible."

While Mr. Creel was applauded vigorously when he denounced those who declared that the army was not in first-class condition for the conflict, his remarks did not please all his auditors, some of whom were provoked over Mr. Creel's roseate description of America's ability to fight the Germans and went to the Capitol to tell their Congressmen that Mr. Creel had exaggerated things. Some of the Congressmen were provoked also, and it is likely that Mr. Creel's remarks will be dissected in speeches delivered in the Senate and the House.

What Aroused Most Feeling.

The thing that seemed to arouse the most feeling was Mr. Creel's expression of pride that the nation had not already prepared for war when President Wilson went to Congress a year ago and delivered the address that made the war certain. To have prepared prior to that time, according to Mr. Creel, would have given the lie to the declarations of the Government "that we would not engage in war unless we had exhausted every recourse at our command."

This, it is believed, is the first official attempt to show that the failure to make preparation for war was based on the moral ground that it would have been wrong to undertake war preparation while diplomatic efforts were in progress to preserve peace.

Mr. Creel also said, after a passing reference to "much ado over the fact that a few overcoats were lacking," that "not a life has been lost by negligence." It is expected that sharp issue will be taken with these statements when the Creel speech is aired in Congress. The Surgeon General of the Army, in official reports concerning pneumonia and other diseases in the National Guard camps, referred to the lack of overcoats in the dead of Winter.

It was also brought out by the testimony of the Surgeon General and others that through lack of tents soldiers were crowded in a way to cause the spread of disease. Testimony was also given that hospitals at camps and cantonments were inadequate—some of them not completed and some without heating apparatus in Winter—and there is at least one case of the trial of a medical officer by court-martial on the charge of causing the death of a soldier through neglect.

Congressmen are expected to take issue with Mr. Creel's statement that if it had been thought imperative the Government could have put a rifle in the hands of every soldier in the camps when we went to war. This is in sharp contrast with the testimony brought out before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs as to the inadequacy of the supply of small arms.

Mr. Creel advanced an explanation for drilling soldiers with broomsticks in the early days of America's entrance into the war that was new to Washington. He said that, like England, we thought that in the rudimentary training the broomsticks would serve the purpose "and that only a psycho-analysis could find a difference between those and real rifles for those early days of training."

In defending the fact, although this detail was not mentioned by Mr. Creel, that after a large appropriation had been made to buy machine guns the War Department spent ten months working on a new kind of machine gun, Mr. Creel said that during the interval we were using in France the French gun "as a result of allied insistence," and all the time we were working on the Browning, which he pronounced "the marvel of the war."

Mr. Creel also discussed the failure to provide American heavy artillery for our forces in France, the delays in the ship building program and the aircraft program, and called for apologies from those who criticised Secretary Daniels in the early days of his administration.

The Aircraft Program.

Some of the things said by Mr. Creel in regard to aircraft are in marked contrast with information understood to have been given to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, which the committee is to incorporate in a statement to be made public soon. Mr. Creel was applauded when he told his audience that "the Liberty motor is 100 per cent. perfect."

It is understood that the Senate committee will say that the Liberty motor is to be used only for heavy bombing planes and for photographing and scouting planes, while the British Rolls-Royce engine is to be used for battleplanes of the American Army.

Mr. Creel said that "within thirty days our airplane program will be announced, and it will deserve the confidence of the American people." Officials in charge of aircraft production and operation have told the Senate Committee that only one American battleplane had been shipped to France, and that not more than thirty-seven would be there by July 1. Senator New gave these figures on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. Creel said in part:

Preparation Pending War.

"There are one or two things that I want to take up with some degree of particularity. There was a question, when we went to war, of preparation. We had not prepared, and I shall always be proud, to my dying day, that there was no rush of preparation in this country prior to the day the President went before Congress and said: 'We are driven to accept a state of war by the aggressions of the German Government.' For, to have prepared, to have held out offers of peace with one hand and attempted a conciliation with the other, and all the while have been preparing for war, would have been to give the lie to what we said, namely, that we would not engage in war unless we had exhausted every recourse at our command.

"Inside of one month after war was declared the traditional policy of the United States was set aside by the enactment of the registration law. In June, ten million men were registered without any protest. In September, ninety days after the driving of the first nail, we had thirty-two complete tent cities ready for occupancy by selected men. You will hear much ado made over the fact that a few overcoats were lacking, &c., but no one has ever yet said that food was lacking, that health precautions were lacking, and when you think of the paper-soled shoes, the embalmed beef, and the typhoid camps of the Spanish-American war, and all the graft and nastiness incident to that struggle, I tell you it is a tremendous thing that today eighteen billion dollars have been expended without a cent of graft having been levied; that not a life has been lost by negligence, and that your boys, when they go into the camps, are assured of medical care, assured of food, assured of attention that has never been given to men as individuals before, much less in the mass.

"Pershing landed his staff in France on July 3. Today thousands upon thousands are pouring across the ocean to take their part, and, although it has been the custom of the foreign Governments not to put their men on the firing line without at least a year's training, today American soldiers are taking their part on that great battle line in France.

Broomsticks for Training.

"They will tell you about ordnance, that we had no rifles, that our boys were equipped with broomsticks when we went to war. As a matter of fact, we had 6,000 Springfields and 100,000 Krag-Jorgensons, and if we had thought it imperative we could have put a rifle in the hands of every man in the camps. What we thought, even as England thought, was that, in those first few days, the rudimentary training that could be gotten from the slopsticks would serve the purpose, and that only a psycho-analysis could find a difference between those and real rifles for those early days of training. And those people who complained were seeking, not to win the war, but to win another kind of a campaign at a later date.

"We found that the English in this country had developed factories for the production of the Enfield, and it would have been stupid indeed to have persisted in manufacturing the Springfield rifle, so we accepted the Enfield as our rifle, with modifications. That is, we needed to rechamber the gun in order to use our ammunition, and we found it necessary to make it more rapid in firing, and so today you will find that we have a rifle that is said by every one to be the best in the world. It fires two bullets to the German Mauser's one. We had these rifles in one year. From April 1 to this April, 1,000,000 of these rifles were manufactured, and today they can be produced at the rate of 50,000 a week, ample for every need.

"There is also the criticism that we had no machine guns in France, which is cited as another proof of our failure. We found over there that the French machine guns were supposed to be the best in the world at that time, and we said: 'We will take your gun and use it for our purpose while we are working on one that will meet our needs.' And so we did not have the American guns in France during the last few months because we were using a French gun as a result of allied insistence, and all the time we were working on the Browning, our own gun, and today the Browning gun is the marvel of the war. In its last test it fired 20,000 rounds in forty-five minutes. It does not have to be set up. It can be shot over the head if necessary. Now we are producing machine guns at the rate of 225,000 a year.

Heavy Guns Made Abroad.

"They said also that we had no heavy guns in France. You must understand that we did not go into this war in any bumptious way, but in a spirit somewhat of humility. As far as the knowledge and leadership of France and England were concerned, we said to them: 'You have been fighting for three years; we will take your advice,' and we asked: 'What about heavy artillery'? and they said: 'We have more than we can handle, more than we know what to do with, and, instead of burdening your tonnage with shipments, use ours so we can keep our factories going and employ our labor.' And so in the last few months we placed $2,500,000 worth of orders with those factories, and while those were made in France and England they were our guns that did their part.

"And there is a peculiar lie now being foisted upon the country to the effect that we were so picayunish, indeed so trivial in our approaches, that whereas the French 75, alone of the great pieces of artillery in the war, came over here, we have not developed any of them or manufactured any of them, because we were trying to improve them. What is the result? When we got them over here we found the recoil mechanism of such a nature that there was not a factory in the United States that could turn it out, and so, before we could begin manufacturing, we had to try to develop factories for the production of this gun, a thing so delicate that it cannot vary one two-thousandth of an inch. And so we have gone ahead and made that mechanism and are now ready to produce the French 75. That is in answer to the lies that have been said on that score.

"As I say, this is not pacifism or pro-Germanism entirely, but due to the fact that we are a very patient people, and rather a people who always thought very highly of ourselves. By persistent reiteration we have come to believe that we are the greatest people in the world. We do not ask anybody to prove it; we admit it.

"Now, there is a decent self-confidence that I would not have lessened in one degree, but at the same time sometimes after you have made your boasts and when no human being can possibly live up to those expectations we try to find some one to destroy.

"The same way with your airplane business. After one year we have heard this absurdity that 100,000 planes can be sent to the battlefront in France. Why, do you know that not at any time in the whole history of the world has either side ever been able to put more than 2,500 planes into the air at the same time? And when people talk about 50,000 planes or 75,000 planes they not only shame their country but they destroy our own morale, because they build up expectations that no human being can meet. Every plane in the air must have forty-seven men on the ground to take care of it."

LIVING RELATIVES IGNORED

Father and Three Brothers, to Whom Trust Funds Were Bequeathed, Have Since Died.

It became known yesterday that the will of Robert B. Van Cortlandt, retired banker and a member of the old Knickerbocker family who committed suicide on Feb. 18, was filed on Saturday with Surrogate William A. Sawyer at White Plains. No petition for probate was filed with the will, which leaves, according to estimates made by persons close to the decedent, an estate valued at approximately $500,000 to Columbia University for the establishing of fellowships in political science, fine arts and American history. Published reports to the effect that the estate was valued at from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 were denied by James B. Ludlow, one of the surviving executors named in the will, who added: "A conservative estimate would place it at about $500,000. This is, of course, subject to decrease by debts."

The will was executed May 9, 1890, and no bequest is made in it to Augustus Van Cortlandt, the banker's only living brother, or to his sister, Mary Bayley Matthews, the wife of John Matthews, now a resident of the Isle of Wight, England. Asked last night whether he would contest the will, Mr. Van Cortlandt, who is reported to be a millionaire, said: "No. I don't think so." He said, however, that he could not tell what his sister would do.

The estate consists of about 350 acres known as Guard Hill, near Mount Kisco, Westchester; some securities, and a few small pieces of land. The will named as beneficiaries the decedent's father, Augustus Van Cortlandt; his three brothers, Edward Newenham Van Cortlandt, Henry White Van Cortlandt, and Olaff De Lancey Van Cortlandt, and provided that in the event of the death of these three brothers without issue the residuary estate was to go to Columbia. The three brothers and the father are dead.

"The paper was executed in a great hurry, the day before Mr. Van Cortlandt left for a trip abroad," said Mr. Ludlow yesterday. "It was referred to by Mr. Van Cortlandt as a temporary will. The will was filed by Mr. Kean and myself because we are the only surviving executors named in it and because after a lapse of seven weeks we have come across no other will. The will was found by Augustus Van Cortlandt, Jr., nephew of Mr. Van Cortlandt and a student in the Columbia Law School, in an old desk in the Mount Kisco home of Mr. Van Cortlandt."

Efforts have been made to find if Mr. Van Cortlandt left another will, but the search thus far has been fruitless. Mr. Ludlow said that a week before Mr. Van Cortlandt took his life he called on the lawyer at his home in Yonkers and asked him to draw up a new will, but this was not executed. According to Mr. Ludlow, a bequest was to have been made in it to Mrs. Matthews. Other provisions were $50,000 to the Y. M. C. A., $25,000 each to his nieces, Carolyn and Charlotte Van Cortlandt, daughters of his brother, Augustus; a bequest to the Church of Mount Kisco, and another to an agricultural institution in Washington.

It could not be learned last night what plans the Columbia University authorities are making to move to take formal possession of the estate. John B. Pine, attorney for the university, could not be reached. The will was written and signed at 35 Wall Street, and fills seven sheets of ordinary note paper.

The night before Mr. Van Cortlandt took his life he summoned his pastor, the Rev. Harold Prichard of Mount Kisco Episcopal Church, and discussed with him the ethics of self-destruction. A few hours later he cut his throat with a razor. This was two weeks after he returned from a trip to Japan. He was a member of fifteen clubs, a bachelor, and 55 years old. He was a member of the Commission of Bankers sent to Europe by President Wilson about a year ago to look into the financial and agricultural condition of the Allies.

NAZIMOVA AGAIN AS HEDDA GABLER

'WINE LEES' ARE IN ITS HAIR

HEDDA GABLER, by Henrik Ibsen. At the Plymouth Theatre.
George Tesman....Lionel Atwill
Hedda Tesman....Mme. Nazimova
Judge Brack....Charles Bryant
Mrs. Elvsted....Nila Mac
Miss Juliana Tesman....Lizzie Hudson Collier
Eilert Lovborg....George Probert
Berta....Charity Finney

Mme. Nazimova's interpretation of Hedda Gabler has not changed in any essential in the many years since she first disclosed it. And, as it seems, there is still a faction of good folk willing to accept bizarre personality, meaningless writhing, and broken English as the apotheosis of histrionic art. What the applause last night lacked in volume it made up in persistence. But the protestants also were there, with their "curses not loud but deep."

And, indeed, the faults of the interpretation lay far beneath its surface eccentricities. Many actors, truly great, have had mannerisms. Even broken English has been no let to really powerful performers. Last night the "vine leaves" with which Hedda was so solicitous to crown Eilert Lovborg's hair became from time to time "wine leaves," "vine leea" and "wine lees"—the last an acute symbolism of what was left of the true Ibsen vintage. Yet an agile memory of Modjeska could, perhaps, parallel even this brilliant Malaprop. No, the shortcoming was a matter of sheer, elemental, and, indeed, elementary, art.

It is the manner of Ibsen to introduce us to a group of everyday folk who are, or seem to be, living an everyday, even trivial, existence. But, as act follows act, a ground swell is gradually felt beneath the smooth surface, and it finally rears its head, as if by virtue of some enduring cosmic force, and shatters itself against the reef of a deep-lying fate. Hedda, in particular, is specifically described as quite healthy in seeming—"flourishing" is the word, and Ibsen insists on it. She is light in tone even at her most perverse. She carries on a drawing room flirtation with every brilliant, brittle subtlety of the woman of the world. It is only by degrees that her sordid character and wastrel instincts mount to the surface, and they do not reach their most intense development until the end of the third act.

The figure that Nazimova presents is, from her first entrance, so sinister and diabolic as to be obviously pathologic. What should be light, feline by-play, the toying of velvet paws that seem to caress even as they lacerate, becomes the swift stroke of poisoned claws. That Miss Tesman should be amiably deceived as to Hedda's intention in the matter of her hat, or that Mrs. Elvsted should be drawn into the most intimate revelations as to her love for Eilert, is humanly impossible. Even Tesman—loyal, confiding ass that he is—must have been disillusioned. And when the moment comes for loosing the full venom of this drawing-room Gorgon no climax is possible. Medusa is shorn of her snaky locks, and the beholder, who should be turned to stone, is turned at most to the exit door.

In a word, the performance, like so much of what Mme. Nazimova has done, lacks inward artistic understanding, and even a sound external technique. The play as a whole, and the leading character, are slaughtered to make a Broadway holiday. Such exhibitions have often caught the public, and may do so again, but for those who understand Ibsen, and honor in him a great artist and a dynamic social force, such an occasion is little short of an excruciation.

The effect last night was emphasized by the scene which Robert Jones has fashioned. Instead of the ancient abode of aristocracy, redolent, as Ibsen tells us, of lavender and dried rose leaves—and a little stuffy, perhaps, with decayed gentility—Mr. Jones has given us a flat, "decorative" scene with at most the ugly contortions of a lambrequin border to suggest what we call the Mid-Victorian. The abode of Tesman is as mannered; and meaningless as Nazimova's performance.

The cast includes several good actors, but the devastating breath of artificiality has swept over them all. Even the sterling Lionel Atwill in that almost actor-proof part, Tesman, fails often to strike the true note, though it should be set down in extenuation that he was suffering so painfully from an attack of rheumatism that he could scarcely walk.

Comparisons, as has been remarked, are odorous, and we close with a grateful whiff of memory from the Hedda of Mrs. Fiske and her incomparable company of old. Alas for the public that accepts this tortured and exotic substitute.

PASSES EIGHT MINOR BILLS.

Decks Cleared by House for More Important War Legislation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The House today speeded up war legislation, enacting eight bills of minor importance and paving the way for measures of importance. The bills passed include these:

Establishment of a mine-planter service in the Coast Artillery Corps. The War Department desires to create a confidential service of picked men which will contain American citizens only.

Making it unlawful to entrap, capture, shoot, possess, or detain an Antwerp, or homing pigeon, owned by the United States, or bear a band marked "U. S. A." or "U. S. N." Punishment provided is a fine of $100 or six months in jail.

Amending the Selective Draft act so as to permit the President alone to fill vacancies in the regular army resulting from appointments to higher grades in forces other than the regular army by temporary promotions and appointments up to and including the grade of Colonel. At present these promotions are made by and with the consent of the Senate.

Authorizing the Secretary of War to increase the number of trained military instructors and assistant military instructors at educational institutions.

Increasing the Chaplains in the army to not more than one for every 1,200 enlisted men. The age limit of Chaplains to be appointed under this act is fixed at 45 years. Chaplains may be appointed from all recognized religious sects, which makes it possible to appoint Christian Science readers and others not now admitted to the service. Every such appointment must be credited to some religious organization. Heretofore only ordained ministers could serve.

KREISLER OUT AS COMPOSER

He Asks Release from Contract to Write Music for Comic Opera.

Fritz Kreisler, who canceled all concert engagements recently after being refused permission to play in some cities because of his standing as an enemy alien, has written to Charles B. Dillingham, the theatrical producer, asking to be released from a contract made with Mr. Dillingham in which he agreed to write the music for a comic opera. The conditions which compelled him to withdraw from the concert field are cited by Mr. Kreisler as the reasons why he does not wish to figure as a composer.

GOODWIN NOW ADMITS SUIT.

He Will Not Oppose His Fifth Wife's Action for Divorce.

Nat C. Goodwin last night formally admitted that he had been sued for divorce by his fifth wife, Mrs. Margaret Moreland Goodwin, and also settled another point which has been vexing his friends by announcing that he would not fight the suit. The discovery was made several days ago that Mrs. Goodwin had filed papers in New City, Rockland County, but until last night Mr. Goodwin refused to admit it.

Phillips Wants Surplus Assets Used to Organize Domestic Companies.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 8.—At the request of the Alien Property Custodian, State Superintendent of Insurance Phillips had a bill introduced tonight by Senator Towner of Putnam and Assemblyman Gardner of Dutchess to authorize the use of surplus assets of alien enemy insurance companies doing business in this State to organize domestic companies to continue the writing of insurance for American property owners.

The bill provides that the Custodian of Alien Property may invest all of the assets of alien enemy companies, up to the amount of their surplus, in the capital stock of any domestic insurance corporation organized with the approval of the Insurance Department. The State Superintendent of Insurance would be authorized under the bill to transfer to and hold in trust for domestic insurance companies organized to take over the business of foreign insurance companies all securities deposited with him by the latter.

CIRCUS HELPS LIBERTY LOAN

Fifth Avenue will be the scene tomorrow morning, weather conditions permitting, of a Liberty Loan pageant, in which will appear three herds of elephants, a dozen camels, scores of horses, and many patriotic and military floats. The parade is the contribution of the Barnum & Bailey circus, now paying its annual visit to Madison Square Garden, to the campaign of the Liberty Loan Committee, and a great deal of skill and labor has been spent to make the picture worth while going out to see.

The parade will start at the Garden at 10:30 o'clock in the morning and will go through Twenty-seventh Street to Fifth Avenue and then north to Fifty-eighth Street, where it will switch east to Madison Avenue and return to the Garden south through that street. In case of rain the parade will take place Thursday morning.

The Barnum & Bailey management is now arranging for the exhibition which it gives each year to the orphan children of New York. This special performance will take place some morning next week, and full details will be made known in a few days.

CLUBWOMEN TO RUN FARM.

The Women's University Club of 106 East Fifty-second Street will conduct a model farm for women this Summer at Redding, Conn. The first group of workers, all of whom will be college graduates and members of the club, will formally open the farm with early seed planting next Monday.

WARNING

The public of New York are respectfully warned that speculators are endeavoring to secure the best seats for the Forty-Fourth Street Theatre, where D. W. Griffith's supreme triumph, "HEARTS OF THE WORLD," is attracting the largest audiences ever known in the history of any theatre in New York.

These speculators in some cases have actually charged the public the unprecedented sum of FIVE DOLLARS A TICKET to witness Mr. Griffith's supreme masterpiece.

The management, which sells the best seats to the first person to apply at the box office, is powerless to correct this abuse unless THE PUBLIC itself comes to the rescue.

By buying your own tickets in advance you will best serve your own interests and DEFEAT THE SPECULATORS.

If, when you approach the Forty-Fourth Street Theatre, any-one on the sidewalk endeavors to sell you a ticket in violation of the City Ordinances

CALL A POLICEMAN

In this way only can the best interests of the public be protected. Mr. Griffith's supreme triumph, "HEARTS OF THE WORLD," is being presented twice daily. Matinees every day at 2:10, prices 25 cents to $1. Evenings and Saturday matinee, 25c to $1.50.

Thousands of people are being turned away at every performance, so be sure to get your seats IN ADVANCE.

COOK'S Imperial Extra Dry Champagne

IT takes a certain peculiar soil to grow grapes which are best fitted for making a champagne whose flavor has body and whose bouquet is full. The excellence of Cook's Imperial is largely due to the fact that the fine grapes of which it is made are grown on just this kind of soil. For its purity, flavor, bouquet and life—order Cook's Imperial Extra Dry.

BRAVES CONQUER YANKEES FOR FIRST TIME DURING SERIES

NEW YORK SOLDIERS SEE YANKS BLANKED

BRAVES TRIUMPH BY 2 TO 0

Huggins's Team Unable to Solve Pitching of Nehf and Drop First Contest to Rivals.

Special to The New York Times.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., April 8.—The Boston Braves were better "mudders" than the Yankees today, and won their first game of the series from the American Leaguers on a sticky field by a score of 2 to 0. But for the fact that 10,000 soldiers had been given a half holiday the game would not have been played. Rain fell all morning, and so many of the soldiers figured that no game could be played that the attendance was less than 2,000.

The rooters were about equally divided as a comparatively small number of Manhattan regiments were released from camp duties and the Brooklyn and Boston contingents cheered for the Braves. The Yankees did not do much to arouse enthusiasm.

Major Gen. O'Ryan and many of the officers of the New York division occupied box seats, and the General threw out the first ball. The field was pitched inside a racetrack at the Fair Grounds. The infield was covered with grass. It was dotted with little hummocks and there were big muddy patches in the outfield.

Boston won on better pitching, although each team made five hits. An infield hit an error by Baker on a bad bounder, and a clean single by Smith gave the Braves a run in the first inning. The Yanks were unable to start a rally against Nehf until the fourth inning, when Pipp and Bodie landed safely. The attack fizzled when Peckinpaugh and Ruel filed out, and after that the Yankees did not get a man to second base.

The last four innings were contested in a drizzle which turned into a downpour in the last half of the eighth inning, just after Massey had walked and scored Boston's second run on Kelly's triple. The players protested against further play, and when the spectators signified that they had enough the umpires called the game with the inning uncompleted and Kelly left on third base.

The teams play tomorrow at Charlotte, where Camp Greene is located.

INDIANS SHUT OUT GIANTS.

Pound Benton and Perritt for Victory by Score of 10 to 0.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 8.—The Giants were forced to take a bitter drubbing here this afternoon, the Cleveland Indians riding roughshod over the New York boys in the third game of the series and treating them to a little whitewash by a score of 10 to 0.

Having been held to one hit yesterday by Jess Barnes and Jeff Tesreau, the Clevelanders came forward with war clubs today, and Benton and Perritt felt the wrath of the Indians. However, both were handicapped by ragged support.

Once Rariden threw the ball into right field, letting in a run, and later in the same inning he tossed it into left field. On this second heave Bill was trying to catch Wamby of third, but Heine Zimm never moved an inch to cover the bag. As in the famous Collins play of last Fall, Zimm and Rariden are still arguing as to which was at fault.

Perritt's exhibition was even more disappointing than Benton's. Pitching in his native state, it was expected that Poll would let out a few inches, but he had nothing. His control was poor and he was hit hard and often.

The sturdy right arm of Guy Morton, Cleveland's big right hander, evidently has come back. Morton looked today as he did when he was at his best two years ago, and the Giants could not touch him. Later Enzmann, formerly of the Newark team, did good work for Cleveland and pitched the last three innings of the shutout.

Pep Young kept up his great work and batted 1,000, hitting three singles and drawing a base on balls. He is hitting .000 in the series so far.

ROBINS AND RED SOX TIE.

Battle for 13 Innings, When Darkness Falls, with Score at 6 to 6.

MOBILE, Ala., April 8.—The Brooklyn Dodgers and the Boston Red Sox battled to a 6 to 6 draw in thirteen innings here today, darkness putting an end to the fray. Mitchell and Cheney divided the pitching burden for the Robins, while Mays and Leonard undertook the twirling for the Red Sox. The Bostons scored in their half of the first and then the Dodgers immediately retaliated by putting over two runs in the second. This the Red Sox evened up in their half and then went ahead with another tally in the third. At the end of the ninth the score stood 5 and 5. Each team scored in the eleventh, and then eight come on after two more scoreless innings.

WANTS CLASS A RATING.

Eastern League Also Transfers Two Franchises.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., April 8.—The Eastern Baseball League voted here today to apply for Class A rating. The Lawrence franchise was transferred to Waterbury, and after the formal announcement of the sale of the Portland Club has been made that franchise was transferred to Providence. The league now includes Providence, Worcester, Springfield, Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport, New London and Waterbury. Prices at games will be 30 and 55 cents, including the war tax. Clubs were advised to start their games at the same hour as last year.

Harvard Track Star Enlists.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 8.—The Harvard track team has lost one of its best middle distance runners, Dennis F. O'Connell, Jr., of Boston, who volunteered recently as a Red Cross ambulance driver. O'Connell was captain of the freshman cross country team last Fall and won first place in the intercollegiate cross country run in New York in November.

COCHRAN GAINS BIG LEAD IN CUE MATCH

Welker Cochran secured a big lead over Koji Yamada in the opening games of their 18.2 balkline match at Maurice Daly's Seventh Avenue Academy yesterday, mainly because the little Nipponese was far from being in good stroke. The afternoon game fell to Cochran, with the score 300 to 216, and Yamada was forced to see even a more decisive count registered against him in the evening game, when Cochran won by 300 to 158. These victories gave Cochran a total score of 600, as against 374 for the famous Japanese expert.

At the outset of the afternoon match it looked as if Cochran would demonstrate his skill in tournament play as he has undeniably shown it in exhibition. Runs of 82, 30, and 51, following in succession, gave a touch of real interest to the proceedings, even though Yamada was unable to make the contest close. Cochran started confidently, and his play sparkled with brilliant shots at times. He was holding the ivories well and judging speed to a nicety.

Then, just when it seemed that he would run out the game for a high average, his play followed the path of ineffectiveness, which had been blazed previously by Yamada. The counts became small, and Yamada, although he was not playing well by any means, was able to make up some of the wide difference that had separated him from his rival. Near the close of the afternoon game Cochran succeeded in bringing his stroke under better control, and he ran out his string before Yamada could come dangerously near.

Cochran's average in the afternoon was 16 12-18, and he had a high run of 82, made in the second inning, this the product of some pretty play along the short table. Yamada's average was only 12. In the evening game Cochran swelled his average out to 18 12-16, and Yamada dropped a peg further down the scale when he set a mark of 10 8-15.

During the early part of the evening game Yamada played with better fortune. He managed to run off a lead of 70 points against Cochran, but he could not maintain the advantage, and Cochran by consistent counting outdistanced his rival completely.

The scores:

LEONARD HAS EASY TIME.

Champion Toys with Young Joe Borrell During Six-Round Bout.

PHILADELPHIA, April 8.—Benny Leonard simply toyed with Young Joe Borrell in a six-round bout here tonight. The champion was master of the proceedings from the first tap of the gong, and it appeared that he could have put Borrell down for the count had he so desired. In the last round the crowd was clamoring for a knockout, but Leonard shook his head, and did not force the pace against his fast-weakening opponent.

In the first round the complexion of the match was indicated when Leonard, about five seconds before the bell, dropped his rival to the floor with a left hook to the jaw. From then to the close Leonard was never pressed by his antagonist. Furthermore, the champion did not cut loose with his speed in the least. He was content to let Borrell stay the limit. Every one of the six rounds was in Leonard's favor by a wide margin.

REFEREE SAVES COWLER.

MINNEAPOLIS, April 8.—Billy Miske of St. Paul won a technical knockout over Tom Cowler, English heavyweight, in the seventh round of a scheduled ten-round no-decision contest here tonight. After the English boxer had been knocked down twice for the count of nine the referee stopped the fight to save Cowler from further punishment.

COLUMBIA NET TEAM WINS.

Intercollegiate tennis at Columbia started yesterday when the 'Varsity team took every match from Rutgers in the meeting between the two teams on the East Field courts. Most of the matches were decided in straight sets.

A. von Bernuth, Captain of the Blue and White, and H. W. Forster showed the best tennis of the afternoon in defeating Mac Watty and Bucher, respectively, in the first two matches of the singles. The Columbia players also won in doubles.

Alexander took the third match in the singles from R. L. Butler. The match was rather raggedly played. Holdstein of Columbia won handily from Brandt, at 6—1, 6—1. Columbia used two second-string men for the second of the double matches, but they were successful.

The summaries:

Singles—A. von Bernuth, Columbia, defeated MacWatty, Rutgers, 6—3, 6—4; H. W. Forster, Columbia, defeated P. T. Bucher, Rutgers, 6—1, 6—4; Alexander, Columbia, defeated R. L. Butler, Rutgers, 6—4, 0—6, 6—4; Holdstein, Columbia, defeated Brandt, Rutgers, 6—1, 6—1.

Doubles—Von Bernuth and Forster, Columbia, defeated MacWatty and Bucher, Rutgers, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3; Felstainer and Cort, Columbia, defeated Bucher and Brandt, Rutgers, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Columbia's next match is with Fordham at Columbia on April 11. The other games on the schedule follow:

DOBIE AGAIN NAVY COACH.

Successful Football Mentor Signed for Two Years.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 8.—Gilmour Dobie has signed a contract to coach the Naval Academy football team for the next two years, it was announced here today. Dobie, who is one of the leading football coaches of the country, handled Navy's team with remarkable success last season.

COLUMBIA NINE IS BEATEN.

A nine from the U. S. S. Indiana defeated the Morningside 'Varsity yesterday afternoon in a seven-inning game on the South Field diamond by a score of 5 to 2.

Andy Coakley, coach of the Columbia team, will send his team into two important games this week. The first comes tomorrow afternoon against Fordham at Fordham Field. Colgate will play on South Field Saturday afternoon, the game filling an open date on the Columbia schedule as heretofore published.

CHANGES IN MAROON NINE.

Fordham Captain to Play Second Base on Team.

With the experience gained from the two games played on the Southern trip several changes were made in the lineup of the Fordham nine yesterday. The Maroon coach brought Tom Shankey, Captain, from right field to second base. Al Lefevre, the little catcher, was shifted to right field. Lefevre obtained five hits on the Southern trip and batted 1,000. He has had little experience behind the bat. Scanlan was put in as catcher.

Several other changes may be made before the local collegians face Columbia tomorrow in the first home game at Fordham. Dwyer, who played at second base, will make a strong bid for an outfield job.

COVERT LEADS GUNNERS.

Lockport Trapshooter Has High Score at Pinehurst.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 8.—The United North and South amateur trap shooting tournament opened at Pinehurst today with the shooting of the first 150 of the 200 targets event at 16 yards.

The honors were evenly divided, T. T. Todd of Greenville, S. C., winning the morning 50 with 48 breaks, and B. V. Covert of Lockport, N. Y., the afternoon 100 at 94. Covert missed only two of the final 80 and finished as high gun for the day at 141 out of 150. C. O. Leomto of Asheville led the professional field at 143.

MACOMB'S DAM PARK SAVED.

A. A. U. Officials Prevail Upon City Not to Cut Up Track.

As a result of a conference between Frederick W. Rubien, President of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U., and Park Commissioner Joseph P. Hennessy, the local A. A. U. official yesterday announced that Macomb's Dam Park will not be molested by the proposed improvements which are to be made to 161st Street between the Concourse and Macomb's Dam Bridge.

President Rubien, with Park Commissioner Hennessy, Landscape Architect A. G. Waldraeon, and J. H. Fitch, chief engineer to Borough President Bruckner of the Bronx, examined the plans for the proposed widening of 161st Street, and as a result a departure from the original plan was agreed upon which will leave the quarter-mile track at Macomb's Dam Park intact. A public hearing will be held before the Board of Estimate April 26, but already assurances have been received from the various city officials that the old playground will not be impaired.

LONG ISLAND CLUB QUITS.

Resigns Affiliation with A. A. U. and Organization Disbands.

The resignation of the Long Island Athletic Club as an affiliation of the Metropolitan Association was received yesterday at the local A. A. U. headquarters, writing the final chapter in the career of one of the best known of the metropolitan organizations. The resignation has been expected for some time, inasmuch as the club officials have found it difficult to proceed with the business of the organization.

With the resignation from the A. A. U. came the application for transfers of registration of Jim Plant and Casper Scheffer, two of the leading distance runners of the retired organization. Both have applied to have their registration transferred to the Morningside A. C. Plant is a former junior metropolitan mile champion and Scheffer last year won the junior national two-mile title.

The Long Island A. C. was organized in 1910 and up to a few years ago enjoyed a prosperous career. Some of the foremost athletes of the district were attached to the club at one time.

Stanford Drops Sports.

PALO ALTO, Cal., April 8.—Intercollegiate athletics will be suspended for the duration of the war at Stanford University, it was announced today by the Board of Athletic control. "Energies hitherto devoted to sports will now be devoted to military training," the statement said.

RECORD ENTRY MADE FOR JAMAICA RACES

Horsemen Nominate 1,094 Thoroughbreds for Opening Meeting of Local Season.

Another proof of the increased interest in racing is found in the list of nominations for the fourteen stakes of the Metropolitan Jockey Club, to be run at the Jamaica track. The entries closed last week with 1,094 thoroughbreds named for the events, an increase over last year of twenty-six, and a record for that track in recent years. The Jamaica course will open the metropolitan racing on May 16 with a nine-day meeting, which is to be followed by a second meeting there, in June, of six days.

The distance events for the handicap field, including the Excelsior and Kings County Handicaps, at a mile and a sixteenth, and the Long Beach, at a mile and furlong, each with a value of $5,000, have attracted practically every thoroughbred of standing on the American turf. Included in the number nominated for these events are Omar Khayyam, Spur, Westy Hogan, Rickety, Thunderer, Tumbler, Borrow, Cudgel, George Smith, Gex, Bella Desmond, Campfire, Kalitan, winner of last year's Preakness; Stromboli, Hourless, Ticket, Ten Point, Sunflash 2d, Roamer, Ed Roach, Yankee Witch, Sasin, Meteorite, and a host of others.

The opening event of the year, as in the past, will be the Paumonok Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward, at six furlongs, with a value of $5,000. Almost every sprinter of note has been named for this event. Among them are Jack Hare, Jr., Papp, Campfire, Westy Hogan, High Noon, Startling, Tumbler, Rosie O'Grady, Tom McTaggart, Leochares, Old Koenig, He Will, Corn Tassel, Stromboli, Lucillits, and Sun Flash. The veteran Roamer is also likely to make his 1918 début in this race.

The three-year-olds are strongly represented in the Southampton and Stuyvesant Handicaps, closed to horses of this division. Among those named are Sun Briar, Papp, Lanius, High Cost, Top Coat, Trompe la Mort, Drastic, Enfilade, Kashmir, Bolster, Jusque au Bout, Stargazer, Orestes, champion of Cuba during the Winter; Bully Boy, Royal Ensign, Chief Lally, Thistle, Porte Drapeau, Ultima Thule, Green Gold, Fragonard, Bonnie Broom, and others less known.

The two-year-old events closed with a host of nominations. The Youthful Stakes topped the list with 106 entries. This race will be worth nearly $6,000 in the aggregate.

Among the nominators for the various events are James Butler with 59 entries; Harry Payne Whitney, 71; J. E. Widener, 34; Gifford A. Cochran, 23; J. K. L. Ross, 40; Richard T. Wilson, Jr., 32; Emil Herz, 29; August Belmont, 24; Andrew Miller, 20; John Sanford, 35; George W. Loft, 32; Wilfred Viau, 24, and A. K. Macomber, 18.

Secretary Edwards also announces that the over night purses will be increased in value, with no purse less than $600, while the over night handicaps will have an added value of $700 and $800.

AUNTIE ROMPS TO VICTORY.

Carman Surprises Racegoers with Fleet Filly.

BOWIE, Md., April 8.—R. F. Carman sprang a surprise on racegoers here today when he sent a two-year-old maiden filly, named Auntie, to the post in the opening race of the day, so fit for a run that the filly breezed through the half-mile jaunt, winning, pulled up, by more than two lengths. Auntie was not considered in the race and paid better than nine to one in the betting. Louise V., another outsider, took the three-year-old maiden event, the second race, mainly through her flying start and sustained speed.

The summaries:

FIRST RACE.—For maiden two-year-old fillies, purse $600; four furlongs. Auntie, 114 pounds, (Dominick,) $19.90, $7.70, $6.10, won; Milda, 114, (J. McTaggart,) $4.50, $3.20, second; Tiger Rose, 114, (M. Rowan,) $3.50, third. Time—0:49. Louise Mack, Madam Byng, Bonna A., Little Maudie, and Toddler also ran.

BOSTON, April 8.—Tommy Fall of Lowell, the only champion to appear to defend his title in the National A. A. U. boxing championships, was eliminated in a preliminary tonight. He was defeated by Owen McManus of Pittsburgh in the 108-pound class. The absence of titleholders in the contest this year was ascribed to war conditions.

Preliminary bouts in the 145 and 158 pound classes and the finals in all classes will be held tomorrow night.

The summaries:

You Hear Some Men Say,

"What does this Government expect, anyway? It's piling taxes on us, hampering our business, taking our profits, and asking us to buy bonds, bonds, and still more bonds. When is this thing going to end?"

When you hear anybody talking in that strain, give him this to think about:

"It isn't a question of what the Government wants. It's a question of what YOU want—what YOU expect.

"Do you expect to have any business, any home, any family, after the war?

"Do you think the Government ought to coddle you and consider your feelings and interests, or get busy and whip the Germans as quickly as possible?

"Don't you think that the first and only duty of our Government is to stop this frightful slaughter, this waste of blood and treasure?

"What do your temporary interests amount to as against the victory of our army, the permanent safety of American business, the preservation of human liberty and civilization?"

All true Americans should answer these questions honestly.

We must all put self behind us and back our Government, our soldiers and sailors with all the dollars we can possibly get together UNTIL WE WIN THE WAR.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The stock market yesterday was just a little more active than the sessions in the latter part of the previous week. If it were not that Wall Street's attention has been almost entirely absorbed by the campaign for the new Government loan it might occur to some one to wonder why prices on the Stock Exchange do not forecast the result of the German drive. Dealings yesterday were for the most part desultory. Outside of the usual Spring advance in American Ice, which carried that issue up 3⅜, and equally sharp declines in a few inactive industrials the fluctuations were too narrow to attract much attention. There does not seem to be much selling of securities this time for the purpose of releasing funds for Liberty bonds, and speculative operations have been limited to a few issues. Yet the Street had a busy and diverting day entertaining the largest crowd ever seen within its narrow walls with a moving picture entertainment at the head of Broad Street and a fire just a few doors up Nassau Street.

On the Cotton Exchange prices broke widely following the withdrawal of buying orders for the trade. Purchases of futures in anticipation of mill needs have resulted in pushing the price to new high records, and the short sellers were quick to take advantage of a report yesterday that the leading operators have withdrawn from the market pending an important trade meeting to be held at Washington tomorrow.

The April wheat report was perhaps as satisfactory as any one looked for, but disappointing when laid beside a schedule of the world's needs for the staple this year. The present indications are for a yield of 560,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat, an increase of 142,000,000 bushels over last year, and of 74,000,000 bushels over the crop of 1916, but far below the yields of 1914 and 1915. The condition of the crop on April 1 was 78.6 per cent., against the ten-year average of 83.6 per cent.

The Liberty 4s continued their decline yesterday on selling which has mystified the financial community. The issue closed at 95.98. The foreign bonds showed improved strength, and there was a good demand for municipals.

GOOD TONE IN LONDON.

War Loans Improve on Investment Buying.

LONDON, April 8.—Business was sluggish, but the tone was good on the Stock Exchange today. The war loans and consols were maintained and other gilt-edged securities improved a fraction on investment buying. Iron, steel, tin, and shipping shares formed the bulk of the transactions in the other sections. Russian and Brazilian issues were easy.

Money was plentiful and discount rates were quiet. Short bills were in demand.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, April 8.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 58 francs 50 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 19 centimes. Five per cent. loan, 88 francs 40 centimes.

MORE BROOKLYN GAS STOCK

The Brooklyn Borough Gas Company has applied to the Public Service Commission for authority to issue $250,000 in common stock. The money is needed, it was said, to meet fixed capital expenditures and to provide for needed improvements in the plant and service, and to extend the mains and system of the company.

If the authority is granted 2,500 shares of stock at a par value of $100 will be issued, which is half the amount of an issue authorized by the stockholders on Oct. 21, 1913, the other half having already been issued. The application states that the company has paid dividends at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, in half yearly payments from January, 1914, to July, 1916. A hearing on the application will be held next Monday.

ASSOCIATED OIL EARNINGS.

The Associated Oil Company reports net earnings of $7,544,295 in 1918, an increase of $993,266 over the preceding year. The management wrote off $2,619,217 for depreciation, compared with $2,859,107, and taxes and interest absorbed about $96,000 more than in 1917, with a total of $1,009,248. The balance for dividends, amounting to $3,841,783, was $640,287 larger, and the year's surplus of $1,853,954 showed an increase of $242,740.

The report issued yesterday said that the 7,478,520 barrels of crude oil produced were 810,853 more than in the preceding year. William Sproule, President, told stockholders that current assets at the end of the year exceeded current liabilities by $4,445,543, while the funded debt of $11,320,000 was $967,000 less than at the end of 1916. The company spent $2,565,461 in developing additional oil lands.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

French "Cities" Bonds Firm.

The sturdy defense of the British and French Armies against the German forces has found reflection for some days in the quotations for the French municipal bonds. Yesterday the Bordeaux, Lyons, and Marseilles issues gained a quarter point and the Paris bonds, after a dip downward, quickly recovered most of the decline. Since the sharp turn downward, which followed the start of the German campaign, the French issues have recovered more than 3 points. Through the stress of renewed military developments, the Anglo-French 5s have maintained a fairly steady front.

The Annual Upturn of Ice Stocks.

Yesterday's net gains in excess of 3½ points of American Ice Securities preferred and common stock was looked on as a seasonal advance. If one desired an explanation based on applied economics, it might be the thing to suggest that, with Summer at hand and the possibility of higher prices for ice than in other years, the buying was prompted by the expectation of increased earnings. A cold-blooded Wall Street theory was, however, that some group of speculators, believing that what had happened before might easily happen again, had stimulated the market by concerted buying after laying in a little stock beforehand to be disposed of at a profit when a rise was well under way.

Value of Liberty 4s.

A price of 96 for the second Liberty 4s is considered by many followers of security movements and values to be lower than is warranted by conditions surrounding the issue. At the same time yesterday's price level proved that many other persons were ready to let their holdings go at 96 or in the neighborhood of that figure. Owners of the bonds know that they may be converted into a 10-year issue bearing 4¼ per cent. interest, and that the bonds so converted will have the support of a sinking fund of large proportions. This does not mean, however, that the 4s will be converted in full into the new loan; on the contrary, many holders will probably make the attraction of a sinking fund secondary to the desire to hold a 4 per cent. bond which may be converted later into another, bearing a rate of interest higher than 4¼ per cent. Some of the selling may have come from individuals who did not think so favorably of the sinking fund feature, with interest fixed at 4¼ per cent. on the bonds affected by it, as they did when the third loan was announced.

War Steel Orders.

The steel producers are daily getting a better grasp of the scope to which Government buying and buying for the allied European Governments are attaining. It is estimated that close to 60 per cent. of the steel mill capacity of the country is engaged on war, shipbuilding or allied tasks. And the business is growing. When the orders for 100,000 new railroad cars and 3,000 locomotives are distributed, several months steady work for the equipment companies will be assured, over and above the contracts they already have on hand. The talk heard a year ago about the part American mills are to play in reconstructing Europe after the war has been submerged in plans for making sure that the war ends as the United States and her allies want it to end.

Cotton Uncertainties.

"I never rode a bucking broncho, but I can understand perfectly how it feels," one cotton trader said yesterday as he elbowed his way out of the throng around the ring. "They do say that a tremendous amount of our cotton this year is going into guncotton and smokeless powder, and I feel almost sorry for the Germans. It certainly has a kick in it." The trouble appears to be, as emphasized in yesterday's sudden and spectacular drop in prices, that the conditions governing the cotton trade this year are so absolute[illegible]yond all precedent that the wisest [illegible] most experienced traders of peace[illegible] years are as much at sea as any one. Transportation, crop conditions, co[illegible]sumption are all at the mercy of utter[illegible] incalculable factors, and the possibility of Government interference only adds one more. But if present crop indications hold out there may be enough of a crop next year to steady things down somewhat.

Ship Brokerage in the War.

The ship brokers of New York, or some of them, at least, having seen their business brought to an almost complete stop by the absorption of the entire shipping market by the Government, have found a little something to do in connection with the various commandeering and requisitioning activities of the Government. The Shipping Board has agreed to approve charters for towing ships taken on a bare-boat basis, from the ports where they happen to be, to a loading port. It is not a very big business, proportionately, and it is hard enough to get tugs, but it helps keep the wolf from the door and the market alive.

Railroad Bankruptcy Procedure.

There were rumors around in some quarters interested in railway banking, yesterday, that an important statement is to be expected very soon from Mr. McAdoo, based on the Denver & Rio Grande case, which will lay down the general principles for reorganizing and maintaining the operating efficiency of railroads which are unable to meet their financial obligations. Just what form this may take is not known, but the hope was expressed that it will result, at least, in unlocking some of the funds of the roads, which are taking in money for the Government and paying out for themselves, and in other cases than in that of the Denver & Rio Grande are beginning to find embarrassment in the process, though the Denver is the only road so far compelled to default bond interest. The Government is slow pay, and railroads under Government control are being compelled, in self-defense, to become likewise.

GAIN IN MANUFACTURES.

Firms Employing More Than 600,000 Report February Increase.

Reports to the New York State Department of Labor from firms employing more than 600,000 workers indicate that manufacturing activity was greater in February than in January. Both months' records were affected by the Monday closing order of the Fuel Administrator. As compared with January, the reports for February showed an increase of nearly 2 per cent. in the number of persons employed and a gain of 7 per cent. in wages. The increase in number of workers over February, 1917, was 2 per cent. and the wage expansion was 17 per cent.

The activity of industry and the prevailing high pay are emphasized sharply by comparisons with recent years. Employes in February last were 11 per cent. more in number than in the same month of 1916 and wages were 43 per cent. higher. The increase in workers over February, 1915, was 31 per cent., while wages were 85 per cent. higher. The average per capita earnings of all employes for one week in February was $17.66, compared with $16.81 for a week in January. The corresponding figure for a week in February, 1917, was $15.31 and in February, 1916, $13.77.

WALL ST. FIRM SUSPENDS.

Morgan, Truett & Co. Make Assignment for Creditors' Benefit.

The suspension of the firm of Morgan, Truett & Co. was announced on the Stock Exchange yesterday morning, and at the same time it was learned that an assignment had been made for the benefit of creditors to Edward T. Perine of 149 Broadway. The house was formed on Nov. 1 last year, succeeding Hewitt, Morgan & Truett. Mr. Perine issued this statement:

"The firm has been in business only since last Fall. It succeeded at that time to the business of a firm known as Hewitt, Morgan & Truett. The partners inform me that conditions of current dullness and the inability of the present firm to realize readily on the assets taken over have made it seem wise to suspend operations. I do not understand that there are any very large amounts of unsecured obligations, and the firm expresses a hope that it can resume on an early date."

The members are Frederick H. Hovey, who held the Stock Exchange membership for the house; Edward P. Truett, and Daniel H. Morgan. There was no reflection of the failure in yesterday's business on the Exchange. From what could be learned, the house began business when trading in securities was light, and no opportunity had afterward appeared to improve the income.

Save Your Money and Save a Soldier

Safety is by far the most important thing to consider when you invest your money.

Bankers, insurance companies and big business interests seek the safest possible investments; the rate of interest does not matter so much, if they are SURE the investment is a safe one.

You ought to be glad that U. S. Government Bonds, the safest investment on earth, are now issued in small denominations, and sold on easy terms, so that you can invest your money in them.

You take no chances. You will get your money back. You will be paid a good rate of interest for it.

Just look at it in this light: Every Liberty Bond you buy may save you discomfort and suffering in later years, and it may NOW save the life of an American soldier.

Could you ask for a better investment than this?

COURT CHECKS CITY IN TAX COLLECTION

MILLIONS MAY BE LOST

Several million dollars may be lost to the city through the decision rendered by the Court of Appeals yesterday denying the City Chamberlain the right to use the supplementary proceeding to enforce the tax on personal property against corporations organized under the laws of some State other than New York, although domiciled in this State. The litigation had been in progress for many months, the Supreme Court and Appellate Division both supporting the city in its contention that the personal tax on "foreign" corporations should be made enforceable through supplementary proceedings wherever the corporations refuse to submit themselves to assessment.

The task of collecting was taken up two years ago by the Corporation Counsel's office. In some cases no difficulties were met, the "foreign" corporations submitting voluntarily. From 115 such corporations the city collected in one year about $20,000 in taxes. Where the corporation declined to pay it was decided to move against such corporations as though they were individuals, namely, through supplementary proceedings in which they could be examined as to the exact amount of their property in this State and be assessed accordingly.

The case upon which yesterday's decisions was rendered was that of the Lobsitz Mills Company, a New Jersey corporation which had appealed from the order of the Supreme Court, directing that it be examined in supplementary proceedings for the collection of a tax, imposed upon it for 1914. A warrant was issued by the Receiver of Taxes for the collection of the tax, but it was returned unsatisfied and the tax with interest thereon remained unpaid. The Appellate Division sustained the lower court, but granted leave to attorneys for the company to appeal. Henry B. Twombley represented the Lobsitz Mills Company.

Simultaneously with the appearance of that litigation before the Court of Appeals Walter N. Seligsberg, as counsel for the Reliance Motion Picture Corporation, requested that he be permitted to appear as representing interests that were similarly situated as to the personal tax law. The court granted him permission to appear and he presented a brief on the subject, which was followed closely by the Court of Appeals in its final decision reversing the Appellate Division and dismissing the supplementary proceedings against the Lobsitz Mills Company.

Mr. Seligsberg's chief contention was that supplementary proceedings could not under law be adopted as a remedy against corporations, but only against individuals. The Corporation Counsel's office argued for a more liberal conception of the law with reference to supplementary proceedings in order that the city might be able to collect the personal tax against foreign corporations. But the Court of Appeals held to a strict interpretation of the law, and by its decision yesterday made it impossible for the City Chamberlain to proceed any further against "foreign" corporations.

It was stated at the Corporation Counsel's office yesterday that some steps may be taken to have the law amended through the Legislature whereby the city may be enabled to proceed and recover the personal tax against foreign corporations which have not been collected in the last five years. More immediate remedies will also be considered, although just what they will be the Corporation Counsel's office was yesterday in no position to state. The purpose of the litigation was to recover back taxes, the city being protected in the future by the new franchise law, which makes "foreign" corporations taxable for the amount of capital employed in this State.

SOLDIER SELLS WAR STAMPS

Sergeant McGowan Got Crowd to Help Bluejackets Out.

Attracted by the large crowd gathered about the war savings stamps booth on the Public Library steps, at Forty-second and Fifth Avenue, Sergeant John J. McGowan pushed his way through to where he could watch several women selling thrift stamps. To Sergeant McGowan, who is a member of the 1st Provisional Regiment, the successor of the old Sixty-ninth, the crowd did not show as much patriotic eagerness to buy the stamps as he thought they should. Accordingly he asked and received permission to help out.

McGowan called upon the Navy Yard Band, the members of which he knew had just been paid off, to buy thrift stamps. P. Brandani and F. Dewein came forward, and as they were about to hand their money over the Sergeant told them to give him only $3.15 instead of the $4.15 necessary to buy a stamp. He then called upon the crowd to furnish the other dollar. Then by getting first one sailor and then another to subscribe $3.15, the soldier salesman disposed of $2,900 worth of stamps, all of which went to the Navy Yard Bank, the crowd subscribing one dollar on every thrift stamp bought by the bluejackets. Before he went back to his regiment, Sergeant McGowan sold $5,000 worth of stamps. He received a $5 thrift stamp for his good work.

THE COTTON MARKET

Cotton broke rather heavily on the local market in the late trading yesterday afternoon, losing practically 100 points from the levels which had been attained in a promising start in the early morning, and closed, in an irregular and nervous market, at net declines of from 50 to 69 points.

The break appeared to be due to a variety of causes, chief of which was probably the conspicuous absence of the strong trade demand which has hitherto been an almost unfailing support of the market. Apparently spinners have issued orders to their representatives to keep out of the market until the outcome of the conference to be held in Washington Wednesday with the War Industries Board is known. As the speculative side of the market still leaned to the oversold condition after last week's advances, and Friday's liquidation had been made up again on Saturday's and yesterday morning's advances, the withdrawal of this support left the market in a very tender position, susceptible to any organized selling.

Then there was a continuation of good crop news, particularly from Texas, where the long arrears of rain appear in a fair way to be made up. This steadily better crop news has been overborne by market conditions and buying pressure hitherto, but its persistence apparently contributed to underlying uneasiness, which found expression when the opportunity came.

Another feature confirming the impression that the absence of trade support was a dominating factor in the decline was the belief by close followers of the market that the break, technically speaking, was due more to liquidation by speculative longs than to short selling. As far as could be learned, comparatively little cotton was sold short on the break. Noticeable in this connection was the behavior of quotations in the morning. The market opened up from 9 to 21 points, with some foreign buying, and in the first hour prices generally trended upward. After Liverpool closed there was a noteworthy falling off in demand, but the sensitiveness of the market to large offerings was not uncovered until well along in the afternoon. No exports were reported yesterday. Southern spot markets were unchanged to 50 points lower.

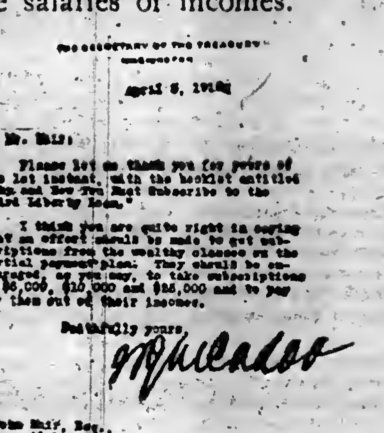
Otis Elevator Co. Earns $1,788,577.

The report of the Otis Elevator Company for the calendar year 1917 shows an increase of $751,989—greater than the total net earnings in 1915—in the company's net earnings over the 1916 showing, the total being $1,788,577. The annual reserve for depreciation was increased from $250,000 to $889,304, so that the net income was left practically stationary, increasing from $736,588 to $799,203. During the year the company invested $240,000 in Liberty bonds. The total surplus was increased from $2,609,-308 to $2,700,000.

To Ex-Cash Subscribers

There are a host of people of means who subscribed liberally for cash to the First and Second Liberty Loans but who find themselves unable now to take their previous allotments on the same basis. Income and other taxes and other circumstances have combined to reduce their liquid capital—but they still have large salaries or incomes.



There is a way by which the man or woman in this position can assure the Government of the same patriotic support as in the other two loans. Former big cash subscribers can maintain their record by making use of the Partial Payment Plan. Originally developed to aid people of moderate means to become investors, this method is now particularly adapted to people of wealth who desire to enlist their dollars for the war.

New capital is needed to win the war. Why this is all important is explained in a new booklet issued after a thorough study of the subject by a man who has specialized in the field.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The Government report on Winter wheat made the condition 78.6 per cent., compared with 79.3 per cent. last December and 63.4 per cent. a year ago. The indicated yield was placed at 560,000,000 bushels, 20,000,000 larger than was estimated last Fall, and compared with last year's final outturn of 418,070,000 bushels. The figures were slightly lower than indicated by recent private reports, but it was the prevailing impression that the crop has improved quite materially since the Government observations were taken owing to the fine rains which occurred in the Southwest. The condition in Kansas was given as 67 per cent.; Oklahoma at 63 per cent., and Texas at 40 per cent. Recent reports from these States have shown a very notable improvement in crop prospects, and it is thought that the condition is much higher than that given by the report. The visible supply of wheat showed a decrease for the week of 686,000 bushels, bringing the total to 4,695,000 bushels, compared with 47,303,000 last year.

RYE.

The local market was again nominal in absence of offers. The Government report made the condition of the new Winter rye crop 85.8 per cent., with an indicated yield of 86,000,000 bushels, compared with the final last year of 60,145,000 bushels.

CORN.

The feature in the corn market was the announcement from Chicago that the vote on the new contract had resulted in its adoption with practically no opposition. Operations will begin on Thursday, and it was the prevailing opinion that prices for the June and July positions, which will be the only months traded in, will be around $1.40 to $1.45. The new contract calls for the delivery of No. 4 corn dried down to 15.5 per cent., and there will be no maximum price. The visible supply showed a decrease for the week of 1,656,000 bushels, and the total was 17,340,000, compared with 11,276,000 last year. Prices for the May contract were higher, closing at $1.27¾ at Chicago. In the local cash market kiln dried No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at $2.00½; No. 4 yellow, $1.98½; No. 3 white, $2.20¼, cost and freight, New York.

OATS.

The oats market displayed a very firm undertone, despite the very favorable crop news, and at the close values were 1⅜c net higher. There was a fairly active demand from commission houses, and it seemed to be the prevailing impression that if the new contract in corn sells at the prices predicted it will have a bullish influence on oats for sentimental reasons. Exporters were not conspicuous, and it was said that in the future they will wait for offers before making purchases. The visible supply increased 939,000 bushels, and the total was 19,037,000, compared with 32,988,000 a year ago. In the local cash market natural was quoted at $1.04 to $1.06; clipped white, $1.05 to $1.08, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was easier early, owing to a decline of 15 to 25 points in the hog market, and also on a bearish construction of the Government report showing the condition of hogs in the country as 96.8 per cent., with an increase in the number of breeding sows of 8.7 per cent. from last year. Prices rallied, however, on covering, in sympathy with grain, closing slightly higher than on Saturday. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 70,000; estimated for Tuesday, 27,000; Kansas City received 13,000, and Omaha 10,500 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was featureless, with quotations entirely nominal. A new proposition has been submitted to the Food Administration, and the local trade feels quite hopeful that it will be favorably received by the authorities in Washington.

COFFEE.

The local coffee market was moderately active yesterday. After a steady opening, with prices unchanged to 1 point advance on scattered covering and a little local buying, prices declined sharply, and with the demand withdrawn sellers made concessions in order to fill their orders. A special cable from Santos showing an advance of 25 to 100 reis there had little or no effect on prices here, and the market closed at the low point of the session or unchanged for the spot month, and generally 14 to 19 points net lower on later months. The local spot market was extremely quiet but unchanged. Prices on some grades might be shaded ⅛c on bids. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

General conditions appear a little more encouraging for an early return of more normal conditions in refined sugar. Just at present some refiners are oversold and behind on shipments from one to two weeks, due partly to delayed arrivals of raw supplies, but there seems to be every promise of arrivals during April reaching the 300,000 tons promised by the committee; in fact, this total may even be exceeded. It is reported that some of the Dutch vessels are now in Cuban waters and that others are being put in shape for sugar carriers. Sailing vessels also have been secured in an effort to cause larger and steady arrivals here for the next three months.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 3,471 packages. A little shortening up of the supply of high grade fresh creamery, and rather more buying interest combine to strengthen the feeling a little. Some of the sales were fractionally higher than at the close of the week, but the general range is unchanged. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 41½@42c; extras, (92 score,) 41c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 39½@40½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 37½@38c; thirds, 36@37c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 42½@43c; extras, 41½@42c; firsts, 39½@41c; seconds, 38@39c; creamery held, as to quality, 34@40c; State Dairy, tubs, finest, 40½@41c; good to prime, 38@40c; common to fair, 34@37½c; renovated, extras, 38½@39c; firsts, 37@38c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 33½@36½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 34@35c; seconds, 33c; lower grades, 31@32½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33@33½c; No. 2, 32@32½c; lower grades, 28@31½c.

EGGS.—26,173 cases. The market continues irregular and unsettled. Receipts show considerable increase, and advices indicate reduction of shipments in transit, but accumulations on hand are still very heavy, and there is continued pressure to sell all medium and ordinary qualities. There is perhaps a little more inquiry from regular distributing trade for desirable qualities of northerly eggs and prices for these are generally rated steady, while the market for the bulk of the supply offering is irregular, prices showing a very wide range. Much of the better class of stock is still going into the warehouses directly for account of shippers, the cost being above prompt selling value here. Nearby eggs are moving slowly, and a good many receivers still have a considerable accumulation on hand. The trade is dependent upon storage buyers for an adequate outlet, and the sales reported are at very irregular prices, but about in the range of recent quotations. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 37@38c; storage, packed firsts, 35@36½c; regular, packed extra firsts, 34½@35½c; regular, packed firsts, 31½@34c; seconds, 30@31½c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 31@31½c; No. 2 and poorer, 29@30c; freshed gathered checks, good to choice dry, 29@30c; State Penn. and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 38@40c; ordinary to prime, 37@38c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 36@38c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 36@38c; State Penn and nearby hennery browns, 37@38c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 33@35c; duck eggs, 40@50c; goose eggs, a dozen, 60@70c.

COURT RULING HALTS TRANSFER HEARINGS

Service Board and Railways Gain Time to Study Decision Respecting Fares.

The hearings by the Public Service Commission on the applications of the surface railroad companies for authority to charge 2 cents for transfers were all postponed yesterday until April 22 in order to give the commission and the companies time to study carefully the recent decision of the Court of Appeals that the Public Service Commissions were without jurisdiction in the matter until after the local authorities had modified the companies' franchises calling for a five-cent fare. Chief Counsel Ransom of the local commission is of the opinion that the decision of the court affects a charge for transfers just as much as it affects a direct increase in the fare.

The hearing scheduled yesterday before the commission was on the application of the Staten Island companies for permission to increase the fare to 6 cents. There is no doubt that the commission is powerless to grant such authority, and the commission is equally sure that it is without authority to grant the application of the New York Railways Company, which wants to charge 2 cents for transfers, because all of the lines of that company are under a single management.

There is some doubt, however, concerning the application of the Third Avenue Railway system for permission to charge for transfers because it is made up of about fifteen different companies, each of which is under the control of separate boards of directors. This is the only company in the city that has so many subsidiary lines under independent managements. All of the companies which have application pending before the commission will submit complete data as to their several transfer points, and facts relating to the provisions of their several charters.

Mr. Ransom said yesterday that the decision of the Court of Appeals had cleared up all doubt as to the power of the commissions to grant authority to increase fare, and that contracts between municipalities and railroad companies in relation to a fare provision would have to be adhered to. He thought it would be unfair to the public to continue the hearings on the applications at this time.

TELLS OF FRENCH LOYALTY.

M. Lauzanne Says Even the Dead Would Rise to Fight Germany.

Warnings not to be deceived into thinking that the war was going against the Allies and to fight every similar subtle influence of the German propaganda were given last night by Stephane Lauzanne, editor of the Paris Matin; Lieut. Col. F. Fraser-Hunter of the British Recruiting Mission, and other speakers at the dinner of the Canadian Club at the Biltmore.

Although the speeches were applauded by the 800 diners, there was much disappointment expressed by the members and the speakers when Thomas D. Neelands, the President of the club, announced that the two chief guests, the Archbishop of York and Major Gen. Leonard Wood, had sent word that they would not be able to attend.

M. Lauzanne spoke of the efforts of German propagandists to detach the Allies from their purpose to crush German militarism, and said that the Allies "must hold steadfastly to their union in spite of the roar of the big guns and the whispers of pessimism." His paraphrase upon the old French saying upon the indomitability of the defenders of France brought cheers and great applause from the diners.

"France has already given more than a million of her sons," he said, "but she is ready to give more—she is ready to give all. When there are no more men to defend France, the women will rise; when there are no more women, the children will rise, and when there are no more children the dead will rise!"

SEAWEED SUPPLANTS OATS.

French Find Way to Save Millions on Food for Horses.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—A. M. Thackara, Consul General at Paris, in a dispatch to the Department of Commerce, announces the remarkable discovery by French chemists that seaweed can be employed as a very good feed for horses in lieu of oats. This is an almost priceless boon in wartime to the French people, whose live stock has suffered through the high cost of hay and oats. Even the cavalry horses of the French Army have been inadequately fed because of the limited supply of oats.

Under the French Ministry of War experiments have been conducted by which comparative lots of horses have been fed on the ordinary feeds and on seaweed from which by a chemical process the salt has been extracted. The results favor the seaweed diet and with very much reduced cost. After small experiments a larger one was tried on the horses of a regiment of cavalry, with army veterinary inspectors in charge. In two months horses fed on seaweed gained six times as much weight as those fed on oats and hay.

With the horses of one experiment the seaweed cured lymphangitis, while those on oats and hay showed no improvement. This incidental result is attributed to the presence of iodine in seaweed.

France is now importing oats to the value of $140,000,000 a year. Government officials announce that this cost can be entirely eliminated by using seaweed. There is an almost inexhaustible supply of seaweed along the coast of Brittany.

ONLY GOLD DEPRECIATED.

One Commodity for Which War Has Reduced the Normal Demand.

That the prevalence of very high prices is a phenomenon appertaining to war economy is the opinion of the Swiss Bank Corporation of London, which points out in its financial and commercial review that Government action, however energetic and clear-sighted it may be, cannot have a permanent effect. The fixing of prices and regulating distribution which have been introduced in almost every country will no doubt, it says, mitigate this state of things, but it cannot ever check it. As long as the war lasts supply and demand will not balance one another, so that periodic readjustments will always be necessary, and one increase in price only foreshadows another.

"The rise in prices," remarks the banking corporation, "is partly responsible for the increase in the monetary circulation, for the simple reason that transactions require more money for their settlement. This explanation alone does not suffice, even when considered that a large amount of paper money replaces an equivalent quantity of gold that has been withdrawn from circulation, estimated for England alone at £80,000,000.

"The volume of paper currency has taken such proportions in belligerent countries that in no one of them is the legal cover of gold for the note issue maintained. [The United States is an exception, however.] This reduction in the proportion of metallic cover, apparently without causing any injury to the negotiability of the notes issued, has been interpreted by some economists as conclusive proof of the uselessness of gold in the monetary system. The jealous care with which national banks watch over their gold reserve is a striking contradiction to this argument. Considering, however, the depreciation in the purchasing power of money, gold seems to be one of the few things which have remained stationary, or may even have depreciated. This is only possible because there is no longer a free market for gold. Once release it from its fetters and let it come into the open market and its price would rise immediately to a premium equal to that of the highest foreign exchange at the moment. The competition of banks of issue would certainly carry the price of gold still higher; in fact, as high, comparatively, as that of any other commodity."

Quits as Head of Tobacco Products.

George L. Storm has resigned as President of the Tobacco Products Company, and his successor will be chosen shortly, presumably from among the higher executive officers. Mr. Storm will continue in charge of operations, with the title of Vice President. When he was elected President a year ago it was understood that his retention of the office would be temporary, as the Directors planned to have several men take charge of the company in succession for brief terms.

ARMY TRUCKS NOT AFFECTED

Commissioner Corrects Error as to Use of State Highways.

By Telegraph to the Editor of The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 8.—My attention has been drawn to an article in your Sunday issue which in effect states that the Hewitt bill regarding motor trucks limits or prohibits the use of the public highways of the State to the army motor trucks. Please permit me to say that this is wholly in error.

The army motor trucks now daily using our main highway from Buffalo to New York are permitted to do so without State license, and there is and will be no restriction whatever as to their size or weight. The Hewitt bill pertains to other trucks whose total weight exceeds that of the army motor truck.

As a matter of fact, there is now pending a bill, which doubtless will be approved, appropriating as an emergency fund the sum of $1,000,000, in addition to the regular maintenance moneys, which sum will be at the disposal of this department for the repair and maintenance of the routes used by the Government trucks during the coming year.

I am very sorry that any mistake has arisen in regard to the matter, and would be pleased to have you set it right.

EDWIN DUFFEY,
State Commissioner of Highways.

Stocks were weak and trading active yesterday at the close of the market on the Consolidated Exchange. In several of the issues, the final quotations were the lowest of the day. There was a fractional hardening of prices in the final moments of trading, but the list showed invariably net losses ranging from a fraction to more than a point for the session.

Whether you have a Hundred Thousand or a Million Dollars in outstanding accounts, an American Unlimited Credit Insurance policy automatically covers them. The limitation stipulates the coverage on each rated debtor.

Not only does the American's Unlimited Policy provide absolute protection against excessive losses on all outstanding covered accounts; it does more—it serves to prevent losses. It also provides for the allowance of covered accounts not over 45 days past due, if the company fails to collect them.

If you are a manufacturer or a jobber, write for the full particulars of this service.

The selling began after the buyers present had subscribed to bonds in the Third Liberty Loan amounting to $1,663,900, following a stirring address by Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company. This total was increased to $1,740,000 later in the day.

Several features out of the ordinary marked the morning session. Two silver fox skins, auctioned for the benefit of the Oshkosh, Wis., chapter of the Red Cross, brought $700. They were contributed by Percy's Fur House of Oshkosh. One skin was bought by G. J. Fuerth of this city for $400, while the other went to David Steiner, also of this city, for $300. The skin bought by Mr. Fuerth is to be given to the "most capable Red Cross nurse now serving with the American forces." For the benefit of the general Red Cross fund was sold the skin of what was said to be the largest muskrat ever caught in the State of North Dakota. It was contributed by the Redick Hide and Fur Company of Grand Forks, N. D., and was bought by M. Harris of the B. Harris Wool Company of St. Louis for $155. This figure established a new high record level for a muskrat skin, and the size of the price may be gauged from the fact that, at the sale last January, the best price paid for black muskrat, which is a variety very much in demand, was $1.55.

A freak, in the shape of a red fox skin that had a pronounced pink hue, was sold for the benefit of the Jewish War Relief Fund to Joseph Sanditz of St. Louis for $400. This pelt was donated by Charles Weinschenker.

Because of the time used up in getting subscriptions to the Liberty bonds and in selling the special skins told of, the day's selling program could not be completed. Because of this, today's sale will begin at 9:30 A. M. with offerings of 12,723 red fox, 1,046 white fox, and 1,080 white fox paws that were left over from yesterday's schedule. Other things to be offered today by Auctioneer J. Gordon Noakes of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation will include about 180,000 mole, 341 leopard, and 708 silver fox. The collection of the last-named is said to be the largest and best ever offered at a local sale.

The fox offerings held the interest of buyers most of yesterday, so far as the actual selling was concerned, and the attendance, which was about 450 when the sale opened, increased to about 700 when the best foxes were being offered. The best blue fox disposed of brought $141, and was sold to Eisenbach Brothers & Co. of this city. Other blue fox buyers were H. Jaeckel & Co., Gross, Engel & Co., Julius Klugman's Sons, Menner & Nabler, and Jacob Adler. For the choicest cross fox put up, Perry Sperling paid $137.50, other buyers including A. Bases, Theodore Thorer, Hochstim & Rossak, Gluck & Weingold, and M. Bayer & Co.

The Gunss Fur Company bought the best fisher pelt, for which $96.50 was paid. Other fisher buyers were H. Halmovics, A. Bases, J. Klugman, Joseph Ullmann, and B. Bloeveren.

Compared with the prices obtained at the sale held in this city last January, wolverine showed no change yesterday, but other furs disposed of during the day showed these percentage advances: Fisher, 15; Northern otter, 15; Southern otter, 10; blue fox, 50; gray fox, 15; cross fox, 30, and Australian fox, 20.

A New Retail Selling "Stunt."

It is not a new trick for high-class specialty shops to supply young women with fashionable clothes at a nominal price, so as to attract their friends and bring other customers to the shop, but, according to the bulletin of the National Garment Retailers' Association, a new one has been sprung on the novelty-proof New Yorker. Beautifully gowned and of striking appearance, a young woman was seen in the various apparel departments of a certain store in the role of a purchaser. When in the sweater department, she wore a beautiful and ultra-modish sweater; in the suit department she appeared in a suit of swagger cut. More recently she has been seen, garbed in a silk gingham dress, at the gingham counter of the store where she is employed.

Employes Are Restless.

"Though higher wages are being paid than ever before," said the head of one of the local department stores, "I have never seen help so restless. Our force is changing constantly. Men and girls come to us at better wages than they have been getting, and in no time at all leave us for still higher pay elsewhere. And there are more cases of employes taking half days and whole days off without pay than there have ever been. They can do this and still make more money than they used to. They don't care about the impression it makes on their employers. They seem rather to regard their jobs as temporary and only as stepping stones to something still better."

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday...6 per cent. for the best names
Saturday...6
The quotations are for six months' paper.

Knitting Bags Well Sought.

Knitting and shopping bags, while they perhaps are not the craze which they once were, are said still to be having a very substantial sale. Bags of wide ribbons in many colors and some very fancy designs are well sought. Many beaded bags are also selling, and in these also many large splash designs in a variety of colors are taken. As a rule, it seems that the bags preferred for Summer use are of lighter colors than those which were selling best last Fall and Winter.

April Starts In Well.

There was more business placed during the first week in April this year, according to several dress and waist manufacturers of this city, than during the corresponding week of any previous year on record. In the better grade merchandise of both lines, it is reported that silks are overwhelmingly the favorite fabrics for late Spring and Summer. Foulard dresses are very popular in many sections, and for waists very fine silk weaves in many colors and combinations of color are generally preferred.

Tall Crowns In Women's Hats.

Tall crowns are said to be very much in vogue in many different types of hats for woman. Whether the brim be wide or narrow, or whether the hat is of the large or small variety, a tall crown seems to be generally preferred in the better class trade that has developed since the Easter season. Even in the straw sailors this tendency is said to be noticeable. Ribbon hats are reported to be increasing in popularity, particularly for sports wear. Some of these are in solid colors, usually the brighter ones, and some combine a number of brilliant but harmonizing shades. Stripes and checks and figured designs all seem to be getting their share of business.

Coats Rivaling Suits.

Popular priced coats for women are said still to be very much in demand by a great many buyers. Some of the large manufacturers in this city believe that when the season is finally ended it will be found that coats have sold better than suits, though at present suits are generally believed to be in the lead. Gabardines and wool velours are among the favored materials, though serges and poplins are also doing very well. There has been some call for capes in these popular-priced lines, but it is thought by many in this trade that capes are only a passing fancy, and that they will not be big sellers in the low-priced business.

Burlap Prices Still Advancing.

Burlap prices continue to advance here, as well as in the primary markets, as a result of recent active trading and a general scarcity of merchandise. In the last several days a big business has been done here in goods to be shipped from Calcutta during May, June and July, it being done on the basis of 17 cents for 8 ounce 40s and 19 cents for 10½ ounce goods of the same width. Yesterday in this market spot lots of 8 ounce 40s were quoted at 19¼ cents, with 10 and 10½ ounce burlaps held at 23¼@23½ cents and 24 cents, respectively. The latter figure is largely nominal, due to the scarcity of this merchandise. West Coast prices yesterday were quoted on the basis of 18¾ cents for 40-inch 8 ounce goods and 22 cents for 40-inch "heavies." Nominal quotations on April shipments from Calcutta are 22 cents for lightweight and 24 cents for heavyweight burlaps.

Gray Goods Advance Sharply.

Prices moved up sharply in the local gray goods market yesterday, but this did not deter buyers from going after the things they wanted. The features of the day's trading included good-sized sales of 39-inch 72-76s at 22¼ cents for delivery during this month and next. For similar deliveries of 38½-inch 60-48s 16 cents was paid. July-October lots of 38½-inch 64-60s sold at 18 cents, but this construction is now being held at 18¼ cents. The feature in the coarse goods end of the market was the selling of 40-inch 2.85-yard sheetings at 30 cents for delivery through the second half of this year. This is the way print-cloth prices closed:

ARMY WANTS 400 EXPERT ENGINEERS

NOT AFTER JOBSEEKERS

Government Wants $10,000 Men Who Will Take Minor Salary as a Patriotic Duty.

The Inspection Division of the United States Ordnance Department issued a call yesterday for 400 expert mechanical and chemical engineerrs who could be appointed to responsible places in the inspection of ordnance materials. While the men required need not be graduate engineers, their training must be such that they can be utilized if necessary in executive jobs of considerable importance. In this respect the Inspection Division, it was stated, offered itself as an excellent opportunity for service to professional and highly trained men who were eager to help the Government.

"The kind of men we are looking for," said Major Arthur Adams, who is in charge of the Inspection Division, "is not represented in the least by the kind we have been getting thus far. We don't want men who come to us merely for the salary that these jobs offer. We want men who would be willing to give up jobs of $8,000, $10,000, and $12,000 a year to take positions in the department that would pay only from $2,000 to $3,500 a year.

"They must be first-class men in every respect, prompted in their quest for these positions not by any desire for higher remuneration, but by an eagerness for patriotic service and a desire to place their skill and their ability in the various technical lines at the disposal of the Government. We need men at once, but we need only the best."

The Inspection Division of the United States Ordnance Department opened its headquarters a few days ago in the Albemarle Building, at Twenty-fourth Street and Broadway. The establishment of an ordnance centre in New York was considered an essential step toward the quick co-operation of Government and manufacturing interests in the production of ordnance material.

In the Albemarle Building are the headquarters for the New York district of the Production Division, the Finance Section, the Property Section, and the Civilian Personnel Section. In other words, all the branches of supervision that relate to the manufacture, inspection, and assembling of ordnance materials for the Government.

The Recruiting Division of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense was informed by the Quartermaster's Department yesterday that there was great need of men in that branch of service, especially those who could qualify as automobile mechanics, horseshoers, chauffeurs, farriers, electricians, and saddlers. Men not in the draft age can be enlisted direct if they are physically fit.

A HIGH TAX ERA.

Untermyer Predicts New Government Functions After the War.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 8.—Speaking at a Liberty Loan rally here tonight, Samuel Untermyer, who has been acting for the Administration in connection with the interpretation of the income tax law, predicted that capital in this country would not again be free from a high rate of taxation, not so much from the necessity of paying for the war as by reason of resultant conditions of the increased socialistic functions of the Government that were bound to come with the establishment of peace. He mentioned among such probable new functions of the State, old age pensions and insurance against sickness and unemployment.

In speaking of the Collinsville lynching he said: "It is to be hoped there will be no repetition in this country of the shocking incident reported from Illinois. Such incidents do incalculable harm. They give the enemy the opportunity to claim that in this country men have no respect for the law."

In another part of his speech he said: "There is one subject on which some of us feel deeply but to which we hesitate to refer because it is unpleasant, and, I believe mistakenly, considered unpopular to speak our minds. That furnishes the best reason for taking one's courage in his hands. The man who refrains from speaking under such conditions is wanting in duty and patriotism. I refer to the un-American treatment that is being accorded in certain sections of the country to our loyal American citizens of German birth in the face of the repeated eloquent and statesmanlike warnings and appeals of our President against the folly, weakness, and injustice of hate and bitterness.

"They are made to feel that they are under suspicion; that their loyalty and sympathies are questioned. We cannot afford to harbor such feelings. They are unworthy of the great cause to which we have dedicated our lives and fortunes."

"We have no right," Mr. Untermyer said further, "to embitter our loyal fellow-citizens of German and Austrian-Hungarian birth by doubting the sincerity of their oath of allegiance to their adopted country by which they voluntarily foreswore and surrendered allegiance to their native land."

Extra Day for Women to Vote.

ALBANY, April 8.—Under an emergency message from the Governor, the Assembly tonight passed a bill introduced by Assemblyman Fearon of Syracuse designed to provide that in connection with the local option elections on April 16 the polls should be kept open also on April 17 in election districts with 750 or more registered voters. When the measure came up in the Senate action was postponed until tomorrow at the request of Majority Leader Brown.

Banded Hats Selling Here.

A sudden demand for banded hats has been experienced by local retail stores since Easter. No sales were necessary to sell these hats, and they are said to be the "big thing" in some departments. Rough straws and milans, peanut straws, and wenchows are best. Tan, navy, sand and natural straws and black are the best colors, and patent leather piping and banding are popular. Among the hats worn here now by the more "exclusive" women are Hindoo turbans to match capes. Several of these were seen at one of the "smart" hotel tea rooms recently, among them some that had a small peaked brim. Most of these hats were in light shades, and were seen in carpet braid and materials to match the costume, as well as in chrysanthemum and chenille braid.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Another mercantile building in the old dry goods district was sold yesterday in a cash transaction. The Tremont-Webster Building Company, of which August F. Schwarzler, the Bronx builder, is President, acquired from the Brooklyn Savings Bank the seven-story loft building at 179 to 183 Wooster Street, on a plot 74.8 by 100, beginning 100 feet south of Bleecker Street.

The bank took back a mortgage of $122,500 on the property, for a five-year term, at 5 per cent.

In the Bronx, where there has been a well-defined trend within the last week toward the acquisition of well-located investment properties, a Forest Avenue apartment house passed into new ownership.

Forest Hall, a seven-story elevator structural, at the northwest corner of Forest Avenue and 158th Street, on a plot 100 by 87.6 was also sold by the Brooklyn Savings Bank to a client of A. H. Levy and Jacob Kaplan. The bank acquired this property recently as plaintiff in foreclosure proceedings. In the present sale it takes back a first mortgage of $87,500.

Tenement Buyers.

Charles Wynne bought from Herman Gotheif the five-story front and rear tenement at 18 Monroe Street, on a lot 25 by 100. The seller took over the property under foreclosure a short time ago. The houses will be extensively improved.

James H. Cruikshank purchased from Edward J. and Bennett J. King the two five-story tenements at 1,646 and 1,648 Third Avenue, adjoining the northwest corner of Ninety-second Street, size 37.9 by 100, and assessed by the city at $30,000. Leon S. Altmayer was the broker in the sale.

Midtown Lofts Transferred to Bing & Bing.

The three and seven story loft buildings, 139 to 143 West Twenty-fourth Street, have been acquired by Bing & Bing, operators, from Raymond H. Kutner. The structures occupy a plot 50 by 116.9 by irregular and were secured from the Union Trust Company by Mr. Kutner for $85,000. Title passed to Mr. Kutner last week, the transfer being made subject to a mortgage of $75,000.

St. Ann's Avenue Deals.

George Bockhaus, Inc., has purchased from the trustees of the estate of Stephen H. Hewlett and John L. Rogers the two five-story tenements, 107 and 109 St. Ann's Avenue; also leased, with an option to purchase, from Joseph Gottlieb and Annette Adelman the two five-story tenements adjoining at 551 and 553 East 132d Street, corner of St. Ann's Avenue. Lawrence Blake, Jr., negotiated the four transactions.

The Alpeplana Realty Company purchased from Charles J. O'Reilly a plot 77.8 by 102.3 by irregular on the southwest corner of Southern Boulevard and 173d Street.

OPPOSES WEST SIDE PLAN.

Estimate Board Asks Senators to Kill Commission Bill.

Members of the Board of Estimate, after an executive meeting in the Controller's office yesterday, sent a telegram to every member of the State Senate asking him to oppose the bill creating the so-called West Side Terminal Commission. The telegram read in part:

"The bill is a breach of faith on the part of the State and robs the city of lands granted by the State. The commission can strip the city of its waterfront, use public funds without limitation, and without regard to other public purposes; close and discontinue streets required for other traffic and devote the land to railroad purposes; deprive the local authorities of all power over municipal property, and release the New York Central from all its obligations to the City of New York whether by lease or contract. Making this bill a general law is a confession that it is so detrimental to the interests of the City of New York that it will not stand public discussion at a public hearing before the Mayor for his approval."

CATHOLIC FUND $4,839,000.

John G. Agar reported for the Finance Committee of the Catholic War Fund at a meeting of the General Committee at Cathedral College yesterday afternoon, that the cash and pledges brought in by the recent Catholic drive totalled $4,839,000. Allowing for the possibility that some of the pledges might not be fulfilled, Mr. Agar said that the sum netted by the campaign would be fully $4,500,000. The sum which was set as a minimum to be raised by the drive was $2,500,000.

Cardinal Farley, who presided at the meeting, said that similar Catholic funds would be raised in all parts of the country, and sufficient money would be found to carry on the great war activities planned by the Knights of Columbus and other Catholic organizations.

ADVERTISING AND SALES EXECUTIVE.

My experience can be used to best advantage by either a manufacturer who has a sales or advertising problem or by an advertising agency or publication as a representative. For the latter I can be more than merely a seller of white space—I can put the interpretation of advertising possibilities behind that selling. Six years in advertising and merchandising work, both with manufacturer and in agency field, planning, investigating, copy, promotion, and administrative work give me a quick sense for business conditions. Three years in publishing business, advertising service, and management. Good selling experience. University (technical) training. McAVOY RETIRES AS LEADER

Thomas F. McAvoy, prominent in Tammany Hall long before Charles F. Murphy became its leader, last night announced his retirement from the leadership in the Twenty-second Assembly District after twenty years' service. Mr. McAvoy's resignation was a surprise which was made known by him at the clubhouse, 501 West 145th Street, at the close of the meeting held to discuss woman's participation in the war. It was said that he consulted with Murphy several days ago and was urged to remain. In declining, he explained that personal reasons brought about his retirement. He is about 70 years old.

Joseph McCormick, President of the Joe McCormick Association, has been mentioned as his successor at an election to be held within a few weeks. Mr. McAvoy's name had been mentioned from time to time as that of a possible successor to Charles F. Murphy when the Tammany chief's retirement was under discussion. Mr. McAvoy's son, John V. McAvoy, was elected a Justice of the State Supreme Court last Fall.

WINTER WHEAT CROP ENCOURAGES HOOVER

Will Have Enough for Ourselves and Allies if Spring Growth Maintains Same Ratio.

MUST SAVE UNTIL HARVEST

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Forecast by the Department of Agriculture today of a Winter wheat crop of 560,000,000 bushels this year brought optimism to the Food Administration, and the prediction was unofficially made that if the Spring wheat crop maintained the same ratio, the next harvest will furnish sufficient wheat to take care of the needs of this country and the Allies next year.

Today's forecast indicates an increase of 142,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat over last year's Winter crop, which was 418,000,000 bushels. Assuming that the Spring wheat crop will yield the same ratio of increase, there will be a total crop of 850,000,000, or an increase of about 200,000,000 bushels over last year, when the entire crop was estimated at 651,000,000.

In addition, there is an increase of 26,000,000 bushels in the prospective rye crop or a total prospective increase over last year of about 225,000,000 bushels of bread grains.

There is also hope of an increase of 100,000,000 bushels of wheat over last year in Great Britain and France, and also an increase in Canada.

The necessity for rigorous saving between now and harvest is, however, in no way relaxed by harvest prospects, the public is warned.

The condition of Winter wheat in the important growing States follows: Ohio, 80; Indiana, 94; Illinois, 88; Missouri, 92; Nebraska, 75; Kansas, 67; Oklahoma, 63.

Widespread interest centred in today's production forecasts, which were estimated from the condition of the crops on April 1. Winter wheat, sown last Autumn on 42,170,000 acres, the largest area ever planted to that crop in the history of American agriculture, entered the Winter with the lowest condition of record on Dec. 1. In its December production forecast, the Department of Agriculture estimated the crop would be about 540,000,000. Efforts had been made in the early Fall to stimulate production by heavy planting, but weather and other conditions were adverse. The Government had aimed to have a crop of 672,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat and relied upon farmers to plant enough Spring wheat to bring the country's wheat production this year to more than 1,000,000,000 bushels.

Weather conditions through the Winter have not been adverse to the Winter grain crops, and early reports indicated that the Winter wheat and rye had begun the Spring in better condition than had been expected. It was felt from those indications that the production forecasts today would be larger than those estimated as a result of the December conditions.

ACCEPTS OFFER TO CONSERVE WHEAT

Food Administration to Divide Eating Places of Nation Into Two Groups.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The United States Food Administration has decided to divide the hotels and other eating places of the nation into two groups, one of which will serve no foods in the preparation of which wheat is used, and the other to be subject to the restrictions of the new wheat conservation program.

This step was taken as a result of the pledge given recently by the representatives of 500 hotels to use no wheat. The new plan will be worked out under the supervision of the Federal Food Administrators of the various States.

Class 1 will include all high-grade hotels and restaurants which, in the opinion of the hotel Chairman for each State, could follow to the letter the pledge to use no wheat adopted by managers and proprietors at their meetings in Washington and New York. All clubs and dining cars should come under this classification.

A list is to be prepared by the Federal Food Administrator and the hotel Chairmen, in conjunction with the latter's committee, of all hotels, restaurants, and clubs in each State which, in the opinion of this committee, should be able to carry out the terms of the resolution, and to the manager of each of these establishments a copy of the resolution is to be sent, with a letter advising him of the action taken in New York, and requesting him to join with all others in this classification in making the application of this resolution general. Dining cars will be handled separately in Washington. It is requested that lists of those who agree to live up to the resolution be printed prominently in all newspapers, where possible.

Class 2, including all other public eating places, must be governed by the new wheat conservation program, which means that they shall adopt a maximum ration of wheat flour (or its wheat equivalent contained in such wheat products as Victory bread, macaroni, wheat breakfast cereals, &c.,) of six pounds of wheat flour for every ninety meals served. In addition thereto, they shall not serve in the aggregate a total of any products containing more than two ounces of wheat flour to any one guest at any one meal.

Wheatless days and meals must be observed, and by "wheatless" is meant no wheat flour in any food served, except that amount contained in Victory bread, which can be served in public eating places on wheatless days and for wheatless meals. No wheat product shall be served unless ordered. In practically every case this class of eating place will be governed by baking rules and regulations, which will assist materially in insuring their compliance with this program.

BOARD FINDS MUCH GARBAGE CAN WASTE

Food Inspectors Report Improvement, but Blame Enemy Alien Servants.

The results of the Federal Food Board's efforts to ascertain, through inspection of garbage cans, how much food is thrown away in the average household, were made public for the first time yesterday in the report of Miss Margaret Butler. Miss Butler included in her survey all of the main apartment house districts of the city, such as Park, Lexington, Fifth, Seventh, and West End Avenues, and Broadway, Riverside Drive, and Gramercy Park.

On the whole she found the garbage output had decreased to about half of what it was in pre-war times, although, she said, in districts here and there "enemy alien servants" were apparently doing all in their power to increase rather than decrease the amount of waste.

Her investigation began six weeks ago and was completed last Friday. She found many instances where large quantities of breads and meats that might have been used for human food had been thrown into garbage pails. Porters gathered bread in many places, according to her observations, and sold it for chicken feed. In some places the pieces of bread were so small as to indicate that there had not been any willful waste or deliberate disregard of the appeals of the Food Administration.

Waste of meatstuffs was found to be general in some places and in others there was a greater waste of poultry, such as chicken and turkey. Lamb chops and bacon which should have been eaten were also found in the garbage in great amounts.

In response to the call for any flour reserve held by hotels, several large houses yesterday turned over to the Food Board their entire stock. At the Biltmore no wheat product has been served for a week. Even pastries were eliminated except those which could be made of rice, chestnut, and rye flour. The Biltmore returned 100 barrels of flour to the Food Administration, the Manhattan twenty-one barrels, and the Plaza twenty barrels.

EXPLOSIONS ROCK BIG NEW HOTEL

DYNAMO PLANT BLEW UP

A fire just after 9 o'clock last night, followed by an explosion in the Pennsylvania Hotel, being built at Thirty-third Street and Seventh Avenue, damaged six buildings on the opposite side of Thirty-third Street, and several women with children, who had just arrived from out of town at the Pennsylvania Railroad Station, fainted, but were revived in nearby drug stores.

Rumors that the Pennsylvania Station had been blown up brought the police reserves from four station houses, and soldiers rushed to the scene to restore order. Agents from the Department of Justice and Secret Service men were also sent to the building.

The fire, which started in the dynamo room of the hotel, was soon followed by the explosion, causing the fuses to blow out. A sudden gust of wind sent the flames across Thirty-third Street. The force of the explosion knocked out the windows in these buildings.

Patrick McGarry, 13 years old, who was in his father's saloon at 137 West Thirty-third Street, was knocked down by the force of the explosion. He quickly got on his feet and rushed to the street and sent in an alarm. A second and third soon followed. Battalion Chief "Smoky Joe" Martin came on the second alarm and Chief Kenlon and Fire Commissioner Drennan on the third.

The fire spread to Gimbel's store, which is in the rear of the hotel, and destroyed four auto trucks before it was extinguished.

McGarry's saloon is in a four-story building with a book store on the ground floor. The interior of the building was badly damaged and all of the windows were blown out.

At 135 West Thirty-third Street is a two-story building with a saloon owned by Theis Brothers. All of the glassware and the windows were destroyed. At 137 is a four-story building, where P. J. McGarry has his saloon. Only part of the bar was left. At 139 is a barber's shop, owned by Peter Megory, which was also wrecked. At 141-143 is a stable of the Pennsylvania Trucking Company, and only one window withstood the force of the explosion. There were twenty-two horses in the stable at the time, but all were taken out by employes.

Following the explosion electric lights in the neighborhood went out, which added to the confusion. The police later ordered the electric light power shut off.

When the police reserves from the West Thirtieth Street Station arrived they had much difficulty in trying to quiet excited persons in the neighborhood who were hurrying out of their homes, frightened by the noise of the explosion.

E. M. Statler, who is to lease the hotel, said the explosion occurred in the dynamo room, but could not give any reason for it. He and Superintendent Smith of the building placed the damage to the hotel at between $75,0000 and $100,000.

6,000 More to be Called in Draft.

Draft Director Martin Conboy said last night that he expected about 6,000 New York City registrants would be called to the colors within the next ten days. Mr. Conboy understands unofficially that the first contingent of the next draft will leave for Camp Upton on April 26, the others following on the succeeding four days. The calling into service of these men will mean that New York City will suply about 14,000 soldiers to the National Army this month.

Who Discovered RICORO ?

"An Efficiency Engineer," said the manufacturer. "He had just demonstrated how I could increase our output and decrease our operating expense when I offered him one of my 'customers' cigars.

"'Try one of mine instead,' he laughed, 'Maybe I can also increase your smoking enjoyment at less expense.'

"I bit off the end, lighted up and puffed it. 'Well,' I said, 'What's the answer? This is as good as the cigar I smoke, and probably costs as much.'

"'That's half the answer,' he replied, 'It's as good as your cigar—but it costs only 10c. It's a Ricoro, the Cabinet size—imported duty free from Porto Rico.'

"'As an Efficiency Engineer you are sure some Cigar Expert,' I remarked."

Sooner or later you'll discover—

Ricoro
the "Self-Made" Cigar

Cabinet Size 10c.
Box of 50—$5.00

Because you can afford 15c or 25c cigars is no reason for smoking them if a 7c, 8c, or 10c Ricoro will prove as enjoyable. A trial is the only test that tells.

SPEECH IN THE COMMONS

BILL ADMITTED BY 299 TO 80

NEW LIGHT ON GREAT DRIVE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 9.—Great Britain was asked this afternoon to place at the disposal of the Government the services of every able-bodied man up to 50 years old, and even in certain cases up to 55. The announcement was made that conscription was to be applied to Ireland.

Crowds gathered at the approaches to the Houses of Parliament, and the benches of the Commons were closely packed with members, who showed deep interest in the questions and the Premier's method of presenting the prime importance of the issues involved. There were no fireworks in his speech, but an earnest insistence on the peril of the moment and the necessity of taking every possible measure to meet it.

The House at question time had shown itself full of life. It rose to every controversial point, and it sent up a deep cheer of welcome as Captain Redmond took the oath on his reelection to his father's old seat. As Mr. Lloyd George began his speech it settled down to listen, and resented fiercely interruptions from pacifist members.

The Premier seemed at first to be restrained by the gravity of the moment. "We have now entered the most critical phase of this terrible war," he began, and he spoke slowly and with constant consultation of his notes. For nearly an hour he reviewed the military situation, and though he expressed his entire confidence in the army and paid a high tribute to the courage, endurance, and skill of soldiers and Generals alike, it was clear that he was impressed by the vastness of the forces against the Allies and the reality of their danger.

Not until he spoke of General Carey and his "brilliant achievement" in stopping the German advance with a scratch corps of signalmen, engineers, and labor battalions did he arouse the enthusiasm of the House in a round of deep cheers.

As the Premier came to discuss the appointment of Foch as generalissimo it was clear that he felt himself to be on delicate ground. He spoke with something like his old animation, struck the box on the table, and looked the House squarely in the face. He was prepared for criticism and got applause, but it was not very cordial.

Replies to Salonik: Critics.

Once again, as Lloyd George replied to the critics of the subsidiary expeditions in Saloniki, Palestine, and Mesopotamia, he spoke with vigor, but the House was not inclined to show much interest in these matters when it was full of anxiety about the Government's man-power proposals.

At last Lloyd George reached these and in the main they did not create surprise. They had been forecast fairly accurately in the newspapers and the House received quietly the news that men up to 50 might be called up, that essential industries were to be combed out again, and that ministers of religion would be subject to noncombatant service.

Irish Create a Storm.

The real surprise came when the Premier announced shortly and decidedly:

"As to Ireland, it is not possible any longer to justify her exclusion from the act."

Like a field of wheat swept by gusts of wind, sharp interruptions burst out. Lloyd George appealed to the United States, more Irish than Ireland, he called it, where all were subject to conscription. "But not by the English," came back a retort by a member, shouted with a steatorian volce.

Cheers hurst out in a great volume from all parts of the house except the Irish benches, and they answered with cries of protest. The Premier tried to continue his quiet, dispassionate speech, but Irish members were wound up to fierce excitement. Their quarter of the house was rocking with anger. Lines of members swayed to and fro.

"It is a declarntion of war on Ireland," said one.

Quietly the Premier read out what Irish leaders like the late John Redmond had said of the justice of the war, and brought John Dillon, the new leader, to his feet in explanation of words he had used in 1914. But what especially roused the Irish to bitter anger was the Premior's insistence that this was n war in the interest of small nations. They flung back the words in his teeth, and stirred the rest of the House to angry reply, but the Premier, with only one protest that he be permitted to speak, went quietly on to his peroration.

Asquith Counsels Deliberation.

John Devlin wished to move an adjournment to permit the Government to consider the report of the Committee on Conscription of the Irish convention, hut gave way to ex-Premier Asquith.

Mr. Asquith spoke calmly and coolly, dwelling on the reality of the crisis. He reserved the right to criticise the Government bill at a time when he had an opportunity to consider its details, and then obtained a sympathetic cheer from the House as he told of the heroism of the British soldiers, as he had just learned it from a letter from a "relative, in fact one of my own sons." As an old Parliamentarian, he advised the Premier not to rush the new bill, but to permit the House plenty of time to digest it.

Text of the Speech.

LONDON, April 9.—The full text of the Prime Minister's speech follows:

"We have now entered the most critical phase of this terrible war. There is a lull in the storm, but the hurricane is not over. Doubtless we must expect more fierce outbreaks, and ere it is finally exhausted there will be many more.

"The fate of the empire, the fate of Europe, and the fate of liberty throughout the world may depend on the success with which the very last of these attacks is resisted and countered.

"The Government, therefore, propose to submit to Parliament today certain recommendations, in order to assist this country and the Allies to weather the storm. They will involve, I regret, extreme sacrifices on the part of large classes of the population, and nothing would justify them but the most extreme necessity and the fact that we are fighting for all that is essential and most sacred in our national life.

"Before I come to the circumstances which led up to our submittlag these proposals to Parliament, I ought to say one word as to why Parliament was not immediately summoned. Since the battle began the Government have been engaged almost every hour in concerting with the Allies the necessary measures to assist the armies to deal with the emergency.

Action "Far Removed" from Panic.

"The proposals which we intend submitting to Parliament required very close and careful examination, and I think there is this advantage in our meeting today, rather than immediately after the impact of the German attack, that we shall be considering these proposals under conditions which will be far removed from any suggestion of panic.

"I shall now come to the circumstances which have led to the present military position. It is very difficult at this time to present a clear, connected, and reliable narrative of what happened. There has been a great battle on a front of fifty miles—the greatest battle ever fought in the history of the world. Enormous forces have been engaged; there was a considerable retirement on the part of the British forces, and under these conditions it is not always easy for some time to ascertain what actually happened.

"The House will recollect the difficulty we experienced with regard to Cambrai. It was difficult to piece together the story of the event for some time, and Cambrai was n very trivial event compared with this gigantic battle.

"The Generals and their staffs are, naturally, engaged and have to concentrato their attention upon the operations of the enemy, and until the strain relaxes it would be very difficult to institute the necessary inquiries to find out exactly what happened, and to furnish an adequate explanation of the battle.

German Forces Slightly Smaller.

"However, there are two or three facts which stand out, and in stating them I should like to call attention to two things which I think above all must be avoided. The first is that nothing should be said which could give information to the enemy; nothing should be said which would give encouragement to the enemy, aad nothing should be said which would give discouragement to our own troops, who are fighting so gallantly at this very hour.

"And the second question is that all recrimiaation at this bour must be shut out.

"What was the position at the beginning of the battle? Notwithstanding the heavy casualties in 1917 the army in France was considerably stronger on Jan. 1, 1918, than on Jan. 1, 1917. Up to the end of 1917—up to, say, about October or November—the German combatant strength in France was as two to the Allies' three. Then came the military collapse of Russia, and the Germans hurried up their released divisions from the eastern front aad brought them to the west. They had a certain measure of Austrian support, which had been accorded to them.

"Owing to the growth of the strength of our armies in 1917, when this battle began the combatant strength of the whole of the German Army on the western front was only

LONDON, Wednesday, April 10.—The Daily Chronicle says editorially, in commenting on yesterday's proceedings in Parliament:

"The Irish proposal provoked immediate and stormy opposition from the Nationalist members. This was inevitable. We see no prospect of its being abated, and its result can hardly fail to be prejudicial both to the Irish question and the man-power qucation; to the former because it substitutes an atmosphere of coercion for that of reconciliation at a supremely inopportune moment, and to the latter because the controversy over this feature of the bill must tend to impede and obscure discussion over those more material features of it which affect Great Britain.

"Setting aside the views of the extreme Nationalist and Unionist partisans, one may doubt whether there is a single one of those more centrally minded Irishmen who have worked so hard for the triumph of the convention and the reunion of the Irish people who does not recognize that the attempt to enact Irish conscription at this juncture is a blunder and a catastrophe."

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, April 9.—A heavy and determined attack was begua against us this morning a considerable distanco north of our recent battles on about cleven miles of front between Armentières and La Bassée Canal. So far as the news comes to us up to this afternoon the enemy apparently has succeeded la driving in parts of the Allies' post lines, while the troops are holding him by Givenchy on the right and about Fleurbaix on the left.

This new attack wss preceded hy a long, conceatrated bombardment, which had gradually been increasing during the last day or two, until it reached great heights of fury last night and early this morning. The enemy used poison gas in immense quantities, and it may he estimated that during the night he fluag over 60,000 gas shells in order to croate a wide zone of this evil vapor and stupefy the gunners, transport, and infantry if they were caught without their masks, which is improbable.

His gunfire reached out to many towns and villages behiad the allied lines, like Bethune and Armentières, Vermelles and Philosophe, Merville and Estaires, and this did not cease around Armentières until 11:30 this morning, though further south from Fleurbaix his infantry attack was in progress at an early hour, certainly by 8 o'clock, and his barrage lifted in ordor to let his troops advance.

The strength of his attack is not yet known with any certainty, hut three divisions are in that area, incluaiag the 44th Reserve and 81st and 11th Ersatz, and it is probahle that he hns other forces engnged.

Portuguese Troops in Line.

Part of the line was held hy Portuguese troops, who for a long time have been between Laventie and Neuve Chapelle, holding positions which were subject to severe raids from time to timo. They are now in the thick of this battle, most fiercely beset and fighting gallantly.

It is a hattle over the old and famous ground where early in this war there was most deadly strife during the struggle around Neuvo Chapelle in March of 1915 and at Festubert. It is ground where the Indian infantry attacked again and again with most gallant courage and where afterward the survivors held the lines through the Spring and Summer, so that the flat fields all around with fringes of willows along narrow canals that intersect all this moist land and the villages behind, like Estaires and Laventie, and places of ruin like La Gorgue and Richebourg and Quinque Rues, will ho forever hauated with memories of those dark-dyed men, who to tbe French peasants seemed like fairy princes and figures out of the Arabian Nights tales. They disappeared long ago through tho mists of these flats to othor fighting fields in other couatries.

Suddenly the enemy has struck, and the centre of strife for the moment has shifted. It is awkward ground for attack and bad weather for such ground, because the enemy has to advance across dead-flat marshes, cut

DEEDS OF DARING BY OUR ENGINEERS

PRAISED BY THE BRITISH

"Held On by Their Teeth Till the Last Moment," Says an Officer Who Saw Them.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, April 8, (Associated Press.)—The American railway engineers who helped stem the tide of the onrushing Germans during the opening days of the battle now in progress fought shoulder to shoulder with Canadian engineers in carrying out their task. They held their ground stubbornly, and only retired to previously prepared positions when forced to do so, and inflicted casualties by the thousand upon the Germans as they advanced in close formation—in one place in as many as seven waves, each wave 10 men deep and 100 yards from the next.

The Americans with the Canadians had all the ammunition they needed, and, although they were unsupported by the artillery and armed only with rifles and with a few machine guns, they poured streams of bullets into the enemy at several different times until their weapons were so hot as to be useless.

This handful of American soldiers, who were not hardened to such terrific slaughter, were sickened by the shnmbles they created, but fought furiously for several days, helping to hold the enemy all the way from near St. Quentin to the vicinity of Noyon. These were the Americans mentioned at the time in the official communiqués, but these details of their exploits it has only now been possible to obtain.

When the German attack began the Americans were working in the rear lines with the Canadians, under Canadian command. They quickly threw down their tools and seized the weapons with which they had been armed for some months, and formed themselves into a fighting unit. The Germans came on and finally reached the positioas where the Amoricans were waiting.

The exact number of the engineers cannot be given, but they were comparatively small. They had no intention of retreating, however, and were bent upon killing all the Germans possible.

Tore Gaps in German "Waves."

As the first gray enemy wavc advanced, the American forces let them come until they were within certain range: then opened fire, pouring in a storm of bullets. Gaps appeared in the advancing lines at many places, some of them large, where the machine guas had chewed through. Still the German waves came on, without firing a single shot—just advancing.

The Americnns were unable to understand these tactics, but, nevertheless, were certain that it was a question of slaughtering the enemy or being themselves smothered under the advance. By this time their weapons were so hot that they could not be used effectively, and the enemy was close, so that the engineers retired, fighting, took up another position, then turned and began operations again. A British officer who witnessed the engagement is reported to have said:

"They held on by their teeth until the last moment, inflicting terrifio casualties on the enemy. Then they moved back and waited for the Germans, and repeated the performance."

By the time the engineers reached a place somewhere near Noyon they were nearly exhausted and almost without equipment. There they had a chance to rest and re-equip. According to all reports, they were entitled to it, for, certainly they gave the Germans a generous sample of what the enemy is to expect from the American Army.

A German Trick that Failed.

During a battle unusual stories always crop up, but the following is one which the correspondent heard from an unquestioaable source, and it is said to have been verified:

In one of the periods when the Amer-

German Staff Fully Expected to Rout the Allies And Cause Withdrawal of Entire Western Front

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 9, (Associated Press.)—Prisoners captured on the Oise front say that the German staff fully expected to reach their objectives on the morning of April 6, counting oa their superior aumbers to overwhelm the French.

Other information from prisoners shows that the Germans expected immensely greater results from their surprise offensive. They not only hoped to push the Allies back from the Somme, but also looked for a general withdrawal all along the front, even far eastward of the line attacked.

German observers, both in the trenches and in sausage balloons, had orders to keep a sharp lookout for signs of a French retreat and report them to the staff. They were told to watch for burning villages and supply dumps, and were surprised w. en they saw nothing of the kind.

Still other prisoners, who have recently come from the Russian front, assert that the German authorities were profoundly disappointed concerning Russia. Much of the land there is uncultivated, while the greater part of the stocks of wheat has disappeared, through pillage or wastage. Reports regarding these conditions have reached tbe Germaa people and caused coasiderable effervescence.

Further Gains Made by Hindenburg's Troops in Region South of Oise.

BERLIN, April 9, (via London.)—The War Office this evening issued the following communication:

North of La Bassée Canal we penetrated into English and Portuguese positions.

On both sides of the Somme there have been violent artillery duels.

On the southern hank of the Oise we threw back the enemy across the Oise-Aisne Canal hetween Coucy-le-Château and Brancourt.

The losses in March of enemy aerial fighting forces la the western theatre amount to twenty-three captive halloons and 348 airplanes. Of the latter 158 were brought down behind our lines. The others were observed to fall within the enemy's positions.

We lost eighty-one airplanes and eleven captive balloons.

The official communication issued earlier in the day said:

Lively artillery duels have frequently developed on the battlefront.

On the south bank of tbe Oise the troops of Generals von Schoeller and Wichlsra again have attacked the enemy.

Between the Oise and Folembray they advanced across the Ailette as far as the Oise-Aisne Canal, and in a fierce battle captured the stubboraly defended wood east of Guny.

Attacking from the north and east, they climbed the steep slopes of the heights east of Coucy-le-Château and captured by storm strongly fortified enemy positions. Queacy and Landricourt were taken, and Coucy-le-Château fell early this morning.

AMSTERDAM, April 9.—The very slight German gains of the last few days have been reported in the German press with much the same wealth of headlines and resounding comment as greeted the first successes in March.

All the papers had frankly stated that the renewed fighting at the end of last week was the definite reopening of the offensive, and a good deal of effort has been expended by the critics in explaining away the wait, which certainly had not been expected in Germany before Amiens was reached. The Cologne Gazette says that the halt was occasioned by the need "on both sides" (the word "both" is interesting) to bring up the reserves, and it deals at length with the

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, April 9.—Although the American infantry is not in action on the Picardy battlefield, the United States has been represeated in the air from the outset of the German drive. Many American aviators serving under the French flag have been engaged in battle. A NEW YORK TIMES correspondent met today Sergeant Frank Baylies, from New Bedford, a member of the famous "Ace squadrilla" of storks to which Guyaemer belonged.

Baylies joined the aviation service last June after two years in Macedonia with the French Red Cross, for which he was decorated with the War Cross with star, became a member of the Stork squadrilla Oct. 1, a few days after Guynemer's death, and has brought down two Germans for which he has been rewarded with two palms on the cross. Shortly after the opening of the German offensive the squadrilla went by air at an hour's notice to Moatdidier and took active part in all subsequent operations.

Whea the town was captured by the enemy the airmen managed to remove all the machines aad camions, but several fliers lost the greater part of their personal effects. Baylies was more fortunate.

Throughout the French retirement the airmen co-operated with the infantry and made three patrol flights—averaging from an hour and a half to two hours' duration—daily. As the German attacks were made almost without artillery or airplanes—for whole days no enemy planes were sighted—the fliers devoted themselves to harassing enemy infantry and convoys on the march.

Flew Low for Attacks.

Flying often as low as sixty-eight feet, airmen turned mitrailleuses pointblank on the enemy, who fled headlong or threw themselves flat to escape the stream of bullets. When convoys were attacked, horses plunging madly in death agony threw the whole line into confusion.

At such an altitude the aviator was greatly exposed to the fire of the German infantry, and injury to the motor forced an immediate landing, as the height was insufficient for a long volplane. On March 28 Baylies was thus downed near Mesnil-St. Georges. The young American—he is just 22—gave the following description of his experience:

"I had been annoying Fritz all morning and having a wonderful time when I spotted a body of infantry moving toward Tickish Wood just after luncheon. As I dived upon them over the trees, quickfirers concealed there riddled my machine with bullets. My impetus luckily carried me a little further into a grassy field, just between the two armies, where I landed not too abruptly.

"Unfortunately I was barely fifty feet from the boches and nearly a hundred yards from the French. At this point there were no trenches and both sides fought in the open, the Germans advancing in small groups from thicket te thicket and taking cover wherever possible. As they saw me falling the enemy began firing furiously and a party of five Germans ran out to intercept me. A French Alpine Chasseur

LONDON, April 9.—Beginning with a bombardment of great intensity, German troops this morning delivered heavy attacks upon the British and Portuguese lines from the La Bassée Canal to the neighborhood of Armentières, (a distance of about eleven miles.)

The enemy forced back the Portuguese in the centre and the British on the flanks of the line of the River Lys between Estaires and Bac St. Maur.

Richebucq-St. Vaast, (nbout a mile south of Neuve Chapelle,) and Laventie, (about two miles northeast of Neuve Chapelle,) were taken by the Germans in the assault.

The British withstood all attacks at Givenchy, (nt the southern limit of the German assaults,) and Fleurbaix, at the north, about three miles southeast of Armentières.

The German attack was favored by the thick mist which shrouded the battlefield in the early morning.

Severe fighting continues on the whole of this front, according to Field Marshal Hnig's night report.

South of Arras there were only minor engagements today on the British ...ont.

Severe fighting is continuing on the whole of this front.

South of Arras only minor engagements, in which were secured a few prisoners, have taken place during the day on the British front.

The afternoon official statement reads:

Early this morning the enemy's artillery developed great activity on the front extending from La Bassée Canal to south of Armentières.

Elsewhere on the British front, except for heavy hostile shelling in the neighborhood of Villers-Bretonneux and Moricourt l'Abbé, there was nothing special to report.

BILL ADMITTED BY 299 TO 80

NEW LIGHT ON GREAT DRIVE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 9.—Great Britain was asked this afternoon to place at the disposal of the Government the services of every able-bodied man up to 50 years old, and even in certain cases up to 55. The announcement was made that conscription was to be applied to Ireland.

Crowds gathered at the approaches to the Houses of Parliament, and the benches of the Commons were closely packed with members, who showed deep interest in the questions and the Premier's method of presenting the prime importance of the issues involved. There were no fireworks in his speech, but an earnest insistence on the peril of the moment and the necessity of taking every possible measure to meet it.

The House at question time had shown itself full of life. It rose to every controversial point, and it sent up a deep cheer of welcome as Captain Redmond took the oath on his re-election to his father's old seat. As Mr. Lloyd George began his speech it settled down to listen, and resented fiercely interruptions from pacifist members.

The Premier seemed at first to be restrained by the gravity of the moment. "We have now entered the most critical phase of this terrible war," he began, and he spoke slowly and with constant consultation of his notes. For nearly an hour he reviewed the military situation, and though he expressed his entire confidence in the army and paid a high tribute to the courage, endurance, and skill of soldiers and Generals alike, it was clear that he was impressed by the vastness of the forces against the Allies and the reality of their danger.

Not until he spoke of General Carey and his "brilliant achievement" in stopping the German advance with a scratch corps of signalmen, engineers, and labor battalions did he arouse the enthusiasm of the House in a round of deep cheers.

As the Premier came to discuss the appointment of Foch as generalissimo it was clear that he felt himself to be on delicate ground. He spoke with something like his old animation, thumped the box on the table, and looked the House squarely in the face. He was prepared for criticism and got applause, but it was not very cordial.

Replies to Salonika Critics.

Once again, as Lloyd George replied to the critics of the subsidiary expeditions in Saloniki, Palestine, and Mesopotamia, he spoke with vigor, but the House was not inclined to show much interest in these matters when it was full of anxiety about the Government's man-power proposals.

At last Lloyd George reached these and in the main they did not create surprise. They had been forecast fairly accurately in the newspapers and the House received quietly the news that men up to 50 might be called up, that essential industries were to be combed out again, and that ministers of religion would be subject to noncombatant service.

Irish Create a Storm.

The real surprise came when the Premier announced shortly and decidedly:

Like a field of wheat swept by gusts of wind, sharp interruptions burst out. Lloyd George appealed to the United States, more Irish than Ireland, he called it, where all were subject to conscription. "But not by the English," came back a retort by a member, shouted with a stentorian voice.

Cheers burst out in a great volume from all parts of the house except the Irish benches, and they answered with cries of protest. The Premier tried to continue his quiet, dispassionate speech, but Irish members were wound up to fierce excitement. Their quarter of the house was rocking with anger. Lines of members swayed to and fro.

"It is a declaration of war on Ireland," said one.

Quietly the Premier read out what Irish leaders like the late John Redmond had said of the justice of the war, and brought John Dillon, the new leader, to his feet in explanation of words he had used in 1914. But what especially roused the Irish to bitter anger was the Premier's insistence that this was a war in the interest of small nations. They flung back the words in his teeth, and stirred the rest of the House to angry reply, but the Premier, with only one protest that he be permitted to speak, went quietly on to his peroration.

Mr. Asquith spoke calmly and coolly, dwelling on the reality of the crisis. He reserved the right to criticise the Government bill at a time when he had an opportunity to consider its details, and then obtained a sympathetic cheer from the House as he told of the heroism of the British soldiers, as he had just learned it from a letter from a "relative, in fact one of my own sons." The first is that nothing should be said which could give information to the enemy; nothing should be said which would give encouragement to the enemy, and nothing should be said which would give discouragement to our own troops, who are fighting so gallantly at this very hour.

"And the second question is that all recrimination at this hour must be shut out.

"What was the position at the beginning of the battle? Notwithstanding the heavy casualties in 1917 the army in France was considerably stronger on Jan. 1, 1918, than on Jan. 1, 1917. Up to the end of 1917—up to, say, about October or November—the German combatant strength in France was as two to the Allies' three. Then came the military collapse of Russia, and the Germans hurried up their released divisions from the eastern front and brought them to the west. They had a certain measure of Austrian support, which had been accorded to them.

"Owing to the growth of the strength of our armies in 1917, when this battle began the combatant strength of the whole of the German Army on the western front was only

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, April 10.—The Daily Chronicle says editorially, in commenting on yesterday's proceedings in Parliament:

"The Irish proposal provoked immediate and stormy opposition from the Nationalist members. This was inevitable. We see no prospect of its being abated, and its result can hardly fail to be prejudicial both to the Irish question and the man-power question; to the former because it substitutes an atmosphere of coercion for that of reconciliation at a supremely inopportune moment, and to the latter because the controversy over this feature of the bill must tend to impede and obscure discussion over those more material features of it which affect Great Britain.

"Setting aside the views of the extreme Nationalist and Unionist partisans, one may doubt whether there is a single one of those more centrally minded Irishmen who have worked so hard for the triumph of the convention and the reunion of the Irish people who does not recognize that the attempt to enact Irish conscription at this juncture is a blunder and a catastrophe."

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, April 9.—A heavy and determined attack was begun against us this morning a considerable distance north of our recent battles on about eleven miles of front between Armentières and La Bassée Canal. So far as the news comes to us up to this afternoon the enemy apparently has succeeded in driving in parts of the Allies' post lines, while the troops are holding him by Givenchy on the right and about Fleurbaix on the left.

This new attack was preceded by a long, concentrated bombardment, which had gradually been increasing during the last day or two, until it reached great heights of fury last night and early this morning. The enemy used poison gas in immense quantities, and it may be estimated that during the night he flung over 60,000 gas shells in order to create a wide zone of this evil vapor and stupefy the gunners, transport, and infantry if they were caught without their masks, which is improbable.

His gunfire reached out to many towns and villages behind the allied lines, like Bethune and Armentières, Vermelles and Philosophe, Merville and Estaires, and this did not cease around Armentières until 11:30 this morning, though further south from Fleurbaix his infantry attack was in progress at an early hour, certainly by 8 o'clock, and his barrage lifted in order to let his troops advance.

The strength of his attack is not yet known with any certainty, but three divisions are in that area, including the 44th Reserve and 81st and 11th Ersatz, and it is probable that he has other forces engaged.

Portuguese Troops in Line.

Part of the line was held by Portuguese troops, who for a long time have been between Laventie and Neuve Chapelle, holding positions which were subject to severe raids from time to time. They are now in the thick of this battle, most fiercely beset and fighting gallantly.

It is a battle over the old and famous ground where early in this war there was most deadly strife during the struggle around Neuve Chapelle in March of 1915 and at Festubert. It is ground where the Indian infantry attacked again and again with most gallant courage and where afterward the survivors held the lines through the Spring and Summer, so that the flat fields all around with fringes of willows along narrow canals that intersect all this moist land and the villages behind, like Estaires and Laventie, and places of ruin like La Gorgue and Richebourg and Quinque Rues, will be forever haunted with memories of those dark-dyed men, who to the French peasants seemed like fairy princes and figures out of the Arabian Nights tales. They disappeared long ago through the mists of these flats to other fighting fields in other countries.

Suddenly the enemy has struck, and the centre of strife for the moment has shifted. It is awkward ground for attack and bad weather for such ground, because the enemy has to advance across dead-flat marshes, cut

DEEDS OF DARING BY OUR ENGINEERS

PRAISED BY THE BRITISH

"Held On by Their Teeth Till the Last Moment," Says an Officer Who Saw Them.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, April 8, (Associated Press.)—The American railway engineers who helped stem the tide of the onrushing Germans during the opening days of the battle now in progress fought shoulder to shoulder with Canadian engineers in carrying out their task. They held their ground stubbornly, and only retired to previously prepared positions when forced to do so, and inflicted casualties by the thousand upon the Germans as they advanced in close formation—in one place in as many as seven waves, each wave 10 men deep and 100 yards from the next.

The Americans with the Canadians had all the ammunition they needed, and, although they were unsupported by the artillery and armed only with rifles and with a few machine guns, they poured streams of bullets into the enemy at several different times until their weapons were so hot as to be useless.

This handful of American soldiers, who were not hardened to such terrific slaughter, were sickened by the shambles they created, but fought furiously for several days, helping to hold the enemy all the way from near St. Quentin to the vicinity of Noyon. These were the Americans mentioned at the time in the official communiqués, but these details of their exploits it has only now been possible to obtain.

When the German attack began the Americans were working in the rear lines with the Canadians, under Canadian command. They quickly threw down their tools and seized the weapons with which they had been armed for some months, and formed themselves into a fighting unit. The Germans came on and finally reached the positions where the Americans were waiting.

The exact number of the engineers cannot be given, but they were comparatively small. They had no intention of retreating, however, and were bent upon killing all the Germans possible.

Tore Gaps in German "Waves."

As the first gray enemy wave advanced, the American forces let them come until they were within certain range; then opened fire, pouring in a storm of bullets. Gaps appeared in the advancing lines at many places, some of them large, where the machine guns had chewed through. Still the German waves came on, without firing a single shot—just advancing.

The Americans were unable to understand these tactics, but, nevertheless, were certain that it was a question of slaughtering the enemy or being themselves smothered under the advance. By this time their weapons were so hot that they could not be used effectively, and the enemy was close, so that the engineers retired, fighting, took up another position, then turned and began operations again. A British officer who witnessed the engagement is reported to have said:

"They held on by their teeth until the last moment, inflicting terrific casualties on the enemy. Then they moved back and waited for the Germans, and repeated the performance."

By the time the engineers reached a place somewhere near Noyon they were nearly exhausted and almost without equipment. There they had a chance to rest and re-equip. According to all reports, they were entitled to it, for certainly they gave the Germans a generous sample of what the enemy is to expect from the American Army.

A German Trick that Failed.

During a battle unusual stories always crop up, but the following is one which the correspondent heard from an unquestionable source, and it is said to have been verified:

German Staff Fully Expected to Rout the Allies And Cause Withdrawal of Entire Western Front

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 9, (Associated Press.)—Prisoners captured on the Oise front say that the German staff fully expected to reach their objectives on the morning of April 6, counting on their superior numbers to overwhelm the French.

Other information from prisoners shows that the Germans expected immensely greater results from their surprise offensive. They not only hoped to push the Allies back from the Somme, but also looked for a general withdrawal all along the front, even far eastward of the line attacked.

German observers, both in the trenches and in sausage balloons, had orders to keep a sharp lookout for signs of a French retreat and report them to the staff. They were told to watch for burning villages and supply dumps, and were surprised when they saw nothing of the kind.

Still other prisoners, who have recently come from the Russian front, assert that the German authorities were profoundly disappointed concerning Russia. Much of the land there is uncultivated, while the greater part of the stocks of wheat has disappeared, through pillage or wastage. Reports regarding these conditions have reached the German people and caused considerable effervescence.

FRENCH LOSE THREE TOWNS

Further Gains Made by Hindenburg's Troops in Region South of Oise.

BERLIN, April 9, (via London.)—The War Office this evening issued the following communication:

North of La Bassée Canal we penetrated into English and Portuguese positions.

On both sides of the Somme there have been violent artillery duels.

On the southern bank of the Oise we threw back the enemy across the Oise-Aisne Canal between Coucy-le-Château and Brancourt.

The losses in March of enemy aerial fighting forces in the western theatre amount to twenty-three captive balloons and 348 airplanes. Of the latter 158 were brought down behind our lines. The others were observed to fall within the enemy's positions.

We lost eighty-one airplanes and eleven captive balloons.

The official communication issued earlier in the day said:

On the south bank of the Oise the troops of Generals von Schoeller and Wichisra again have attacked the enemy.

Between the Oise and Folembray they advanced across the Aliette as far as the Oise-Aisne Canal, and in a fierce battle captured the stubbornly defended wood east of Guny.

Attacking from the north and east, they climbed the steep slopes of the heights east of Coucy-le-Château and captured by storm strongly fortified enemy positions. Quency and Landricourt were taken, and Coucy-le-Château fell early this morning.

AMSTERDAM, April 9.—The very slight German gains of the last few days have been reported in the German press with much the same wealth of headlines and resounding comment as greeted the first successes in March.

All the papers had frankly stated that the renewed fighting at the end of last week was the definite reopening of the offensive, and a good deal of effort has been expended by the critics in explaining away the wait, which certainly had not been expected in Germany before Amiens was reached. The Cologne Gazette says that the halt was occasioned by the need "on both sides" (the word "both" is interesting) to bring up the reserves, and it deals at length with the

LONDON, April 9.—Beginning with a bombardment of great intensity, German troops this morning delivered heavy attacks upon the British and Portuguese lines from the La Bassée Canal to the neighborhood of Armentières, (a distance of about eleven miles.)

The enemy forced back the Portuguese in the centre and the British on the flanks of the line of the River Lys between Estaires and Bac St. Maur.

Richebourg-St. Vaast, (about a mile south of Neuve Chapelle,) and Laventie, (about two miles northeast of Neuve Chapelle,) were taken by the Germans in the assault.

The British withstood all attacks at Givenchy, (at the southern limit of the German assaults,) and Fleurbaix, at the north, about three miles southeast of Armentières.

The German attack was favored by the thick mist which shrouded the battlefield in the early morning.

Severe fighting continues on the whole of this front, according to Field Marshal Haig's night report.

South of Arras there were only minor engagements today on the British front.

This morning, after an intense bombardment of our positions from La Bassée Canal to the neighborhood of Armentières, strong hostile forces attacked the British and Portuguese troops holding this sector of our front. Favored by a thick mist, which made observation impossible, the enemy succeeded in forcing his way into the Allies' positions in the neighborhood of Neuve Chapelle, Fauquissart, and Cardonnerie Farm.

After heavy fighting, lasting throughout the day, the enemy succeeded in forcing back the Portuguese troops in the centre and the British troops on the flanks of the line of the River Lys, between Estaires and Bac St. Maur.

We held out positions on both banks [flanks?] about Givenchy and Fleurbaix. At both these latter places there was heavy fighting, but the enemy was repulsed.

Richebourg-St. Vaast and Laventie have been taken by the enemy.

Severe fighting is continuing on the whole of this front.

South of Arras only minor engagements, in which were secured a few prisoners, have taken place during the day on the British front.

The afternoon official statement reads:

Early this morning the enemy's artillery developed great activity on the front extending from La Bassée Canal to south of Armentières.

Elsewhere on the British front, except for heavy hostile shelling in the neighborhood of Villers-Bretonneux and Mericourt l'Abbé, there was nothing special to report.

BAYLIES, DOWNED, ESCAPED

From a Staff Correspondent.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, April 9.—Although the American infantry is not in action on the Picardy battlefield, the United States has been represented in the air from the outset of the German drive. Many American aviators serving under the French flag have been engaged in battle. A NEW YORK TIMES correspondent met today Sergeant Frank Baylies, from New Bedford, a member of the famous "Ace squadrilla" of storks to which Guynemer belonged.

Baylies joined the aviation service last June after two years in Macedonia with the French Red Cross, for which he was decorated with the War Cross with star, became a member of the Stork squadrilla Oct. 1, a few days after Guynemer's death, and has brought down two Germans for which he has been rewarded with two palms on the cross. Shortly after the opening of the German offensive the squadrilla went by air at an hour's notice to Montdidier and took active part in all subsequent operations.

When the town was captured by the enemy the airmen managed to remove all the machines and camions, but several fliers lost the greater part of their personal effects. Baylies was more fortunate.

Throughout the French retirement the airmen co-operated with the infantry and made three patrol flights—averaging from an hour and a half to two hours' duration—daily. As the German attacks were made almost without artillery or airplanes—for whole days no enemy planes were sighted—the fliers devoted themselves to harassing enemy infantry and convoys on the march.

Flew Low for Attacks.

Flying often as low as sixty-eight feet, airmen turned mitrailleuses point-blank on the enemy, who fled headlong or threw themselves flat to escape the stream of bullets. When convoys were attacked, horses plunging madly in death agony threw the whole line into confusion.

At such an altitude the aviator was greatly exposed to the fire of the German infantry, and injury to the motor forced an immediate landing, as the height was insufficient for a long volplane. On March 28 Baylies was thus downed near Mesnil-St. Georges. The young American—he is just 22—gave the following description of his experience:

"I had been annoying Fritz all morning and having a wonderful time when I spotted a body of infantry moving toward Tickish Wood just after luncheon. As I dived upon them over the trees, quickfirers concealed there riddled my machine with bullets. My impetus luckily carried me a little further into a grassy field, just between the two armies, where I landed not too abruptly.

"Unfortunately I was barely fifty feet from the boches and nearly a hundred yards from the French. At this point there were no trenches and both sides fought in the open, the Germans advancing in small groups from thicket to thicket and taking cover wherever possible. As they saw me falling the enemy began firing furiously and a party of five Germans ran out to intercept me. A French Alpine Chasseur

Germans Made Early Gains.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 9, (Associated Press.)—Another sector of the British front suddenly developed intense fighting today, when the Germans delivered a heavy attack over approximately an eleven-mile front between Givenchy (near La Bassée) and a point east of Fleurbaix, just below Armentières. A Portuguese sector is included in the line involved.

East of Le Plantin and east of Petillon the enemy appeared to have gained a footing in advanced defenses, according to the latest reports, and a fierce battle was raging all along the sector. Le Plantin is northwest of Givenchy, and Petillon lies to the east of Laventie.

At Givenchy and on the left of the front attacked the Allies apparently are holding their ground in the very heavy fighting, which was reported to be especially bitter east of Festubert. The Portuguese were being supported by British troops.

The attack was preceded by a violent bombardment, which began in the early morning and extended all along the front affected. Bethune, Estaires, and other towns behind the British lines have been heavily shelled.

It is too early to say what relation this new move has with the main German offensive further south. Only time will tell whether it was undertaken as a diversion or whether the enemy has a serious idea of pushing forward here.

SPLITTING TACTICS AGAIN.

The eleven-mile line against which the Germans yesterday made their attack in the Departments of Nord and Pas-de-Calais has been known as the Lille front: it is flanked on the north by the beginning of the British penetration in the Third Battle of Ypres, or the Battle of Flanders, June to October, 1917, and on the south by the northern reaches of the British attempt to envelop the Lens coal fields last July and August. It was taken over from the French by the British in October, 1914, and here in January, 1917, were introduced two divisions of Portuguese troops, which it is believed have been considerably augmented.

The Lille front had practically been "dead" from the memorable battle of Neuve Chapelle, Oct. 28, 1915, to Feb. 17, 1916, with the memories of La Bassée, the Hohenzollern Redoubt, &c., until the present assault was foreshowed by a raid made upon the Portuguese line southeast of Laventie and north of Neuve Chapelle on March 23. This raid was completely repulsed. The British artillery flanked the German advance north and south, and several prisoners remained in the hands of the Portuguese.

Aside from topographical intsrest in the front attacked there is the ethnic, for here the Germans are doing what they tried to do on March 21 at St. Quentin—drive in a wedge where difference of language and tactics among the troops attacked makes cohesion of defense difficult.

The Germans also have the advantage of position, for from a couple of miles northwest of La Bassée, extending for a dozen miles northeast to a point three miles southeast of Armentières, runs the elevation known as Aubers Ridge, which faces the British and Portuguese lines and protects the front of Lille.

Up to March 21 the Lille front from Armentières south to La Bassée was known to have been held by the 19th Active German Corps, the 6th Division of Bavarian Reserve, the 7th Active Corps, and the 2d Guard Reserve Division, or 120,000 men at the maximum strength of their detachments over a front of nearly fourteen miles. Lille, eight miles behind the front, is the headquarters of the 6th German Army.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 9.—The Berlin Tageblatt, which sees Prussian reforms getting ever more distant on the political horizon, owing to the energetic efforts of the Pan Germans to postpone them, makes an appeal to the Kaiser on the anniversary of the latter's famous Easter message.

This political message, it says, was consecrated by the religious festival of Easter, and continues:

"With full consciousness the Kaiser put his own personality on the foreground in the delivery of this message. Each decisive phrase denotes the personal conviction, and will of the Kaiser in the most marked manner." Then quotes the Tagebiatt message, remarking that the Crown took the initative in the matter of reforms and is responsible for their execution.

through and through by an intricate system of canals, which must be all flooded now, after the heavy rain and the shellfire which has broken their banks.

Enemy Checked in Marshes.

All the enemy's efforts this morning do not seem to have carried him far through these marshes, and up to the time I write his storm troops are being held back and shattered by machine-gun fire before Givenchy, outside an outpost in the marshes, a sap, and at a place called Picanty, in front of Laventie. If he gets no further, his venture will be futile except as a demonstration in order to weaken our reserves by further casualties and increase the strain on our main defense.

Meanwhile his own losses must be reaching prodigious figures. Today again many of his men lie dead in those swamps by Neuve Chapelle.

LONG "BATTLES OF ARREST"

Germans Paid Ruinous Price for Gains, While French Economized in Men.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, April 8.—Apart from a local attack at Grivesnes, which completely failed on Saturday evening, there has been, up to this morning, no further action on the French front in Santerre. The loss of force in the German offensive is noteworthy, but not at all surprising. An unprecedented mass having been prepared to deliver a swift and crushing blow, enormous losses do not at once arrest it, but everything in such an adventure depends upon rapid success. The original mass, prodigally spent and yet not successful, has lost its freshness, and passed its maximum strength just when the more economical adversary is reaching his maximum. What the latter has lost in ground he has saved in men; and, on the other hand, the enemy, who wanted not these miles of desolate territory, but a final decision, has paid inordinately without getting any nearer the desired result.

For five days his advance, though somewhat behind his ambitious program, was not seriously interrupted. On March 25 a certain General reached the region of Montdidier and began to build a human barrier. On March 23 began what may be called a four days' battle of arrest. Three French divisions had to meet and did meet the onset of fifteen German divisions. There were smaller units that fought one against ten.

Attacked with 150,000 Men.

The main German effort was against the Moreuil-Grivesnes-Montchel line, the object being (with 150,000 men in play there could be no less ambitious aim) to break right through to the south of Amiens and completely separate the French and British Armies. It culminated on the 31st with a suicidal assault by the pick of the Prussian Guards and other chosen divisions at Grivesnes, when a certain gallant Colonel, rifle in hand, directed the barricading of the windows of the château, and with not more than 500 men kept off three or four times as many assailants and had strength enough left at last to sweep those who remained out of the park.

I need not measure again the trivial gain for the enemy of this four days' battle. Perhaps the most significant fact about it is that while, overwhelming as was his original force, the enemy had repeatedly to withdraw and renew his units, not one French unit was relieved in that time. At Mesnil St. Georges one infantry battalion, with some groups of chasseurs, drove off five successive attacks by a whole German division. I might multiply such instances, but space would fail me to make them real with detail.

A pause of four days followed this failure. Then, on April 4, twelve divisions were again launched in the northern part of the same narrow field—10,000 men per mile of front. They won at great cost the ruins of two hamlets and a slice of fields beside them.

Three days more have passed without any considerable development. Prisoners say all leave has been stopped in the German armies. Men are not allowed to write home, and official bulletins are no longer read to the troops.

Needn't Struggle Against Odds Now.

What I know from sure sources is that, while General Foch hoards his reserves, not merely to have a mass for manoeuvre in hand when the time is ripe, but to save the manifold wastage of superfluous men in the front lines, the days of struggle against odds have gone by, and that means that the German opportunity has gone, too.

Among the minor actions there are two which deserve mention. The French position on Mont Renaud, near Noyon, has been maintained against repeated attacks preceded by heavy bombardments. I have described this lately. It was a pleasant little hill, with its country house and farm hidden in a clump of trees. Its importance is very slight, for it is overlooked by the hills on the north and northwest, held by the enemy, as well as by the French heights west of Chiry. It is a local observatory, useful for its view over Noyon—that is all; and, German bulletins to the contrary notwithstanding, it has been bravely and continuously kept since the end of last month.

A final word about the position of the armies between St. Gobain Forest and the Oise. Here the German advance left the French in a somewhat dangerous corner, reaching as far north as Deuillet, with the Germans across the river on the west, and in the great forest block on the east. A retirement to the line of the Aliette and the canal running beside it was clearly advisable. The new front was already prepared when the Germans attacked in strength on Saturday afternoon, between Chauny and Barisis. North of the Aliette there remained only light detachments, and these retired after taking toll of their assailants. The front now runs from Renaud across the Oise and up the south bank to near Ahbecourt, whence it turns southeast.

FRENCH GUNS PREVENT ATTACKS BY GERMANS

PARIS, April 9.—Violent artillery engagements continued today on the battlefront north of Montdidier. Near Hangard-en-Santerre (further north, on the Luce River) French artillery prevented the Germans from starting an attack which they had prepared.

Advanced French troops having been withdrawn to prepared positions south of Coucy-le-Château, the French have been keeping the Germans on the left bank of the Oise under the fire of their batteries, and today dispersed enemy concentrations on that front. A German attempt at an attack west of Noyon was repulsed, according to the night report from the War Office, which reads:

North of Montdidier the enemy artillery, violently countershelled, bombarded our positions at several points. In the region of Hangard-en-Santerre our fire prevented a German attack from debouching from his lines. We repulsed an enemy attempt west of Noyon, in the sector of Riermont.

On the left bank of the Oise there was intermittent artillery action. Our batteries caught under their fire and dispersed enemy concentrations in the region of Coucy-le-Château.

Following is the text of the afternoon statement:

There was great activity on the part of the artillery on both sides at numerous points along the front north of Montdidier and between Montdidier and Noyon. No infantry action occurred.

On the left bank of the Oise there were intermittent bombardments. Advanced French troops, in conformity with orders which had been given, carried out a withdrawal to prepared positions southwest of the lower forest of Coucy and south of Coucy-le-Château. German troops were kept constantly under the French artillery fire, and suffered heavy losses in the course of this operation.

Two German raids northwest of Rheims were repulsed. Other German efforts against small French posts near Eparges, in the sector of Reillon, and north of Bonbomme, achieved no greater success.

Everywhere else the night passed in quiet.

Retreating French Shell Germans.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 9, (Associated Press.)—Extreme artillery activity nearly everywhere again today marked the battle line. The abandonment of Coucy-le-Château was cleverly effected by the French, who, while making their way toward the new positions in full freedom of movement, gave the Germans a terrific harrying bombardment with field and heavy guns, causing a great toll in casualties.

The Germans had several divisions in line in this part of the front, but could not do more than follow warily behind the retiring French, whose effectives were outnumbered many times.

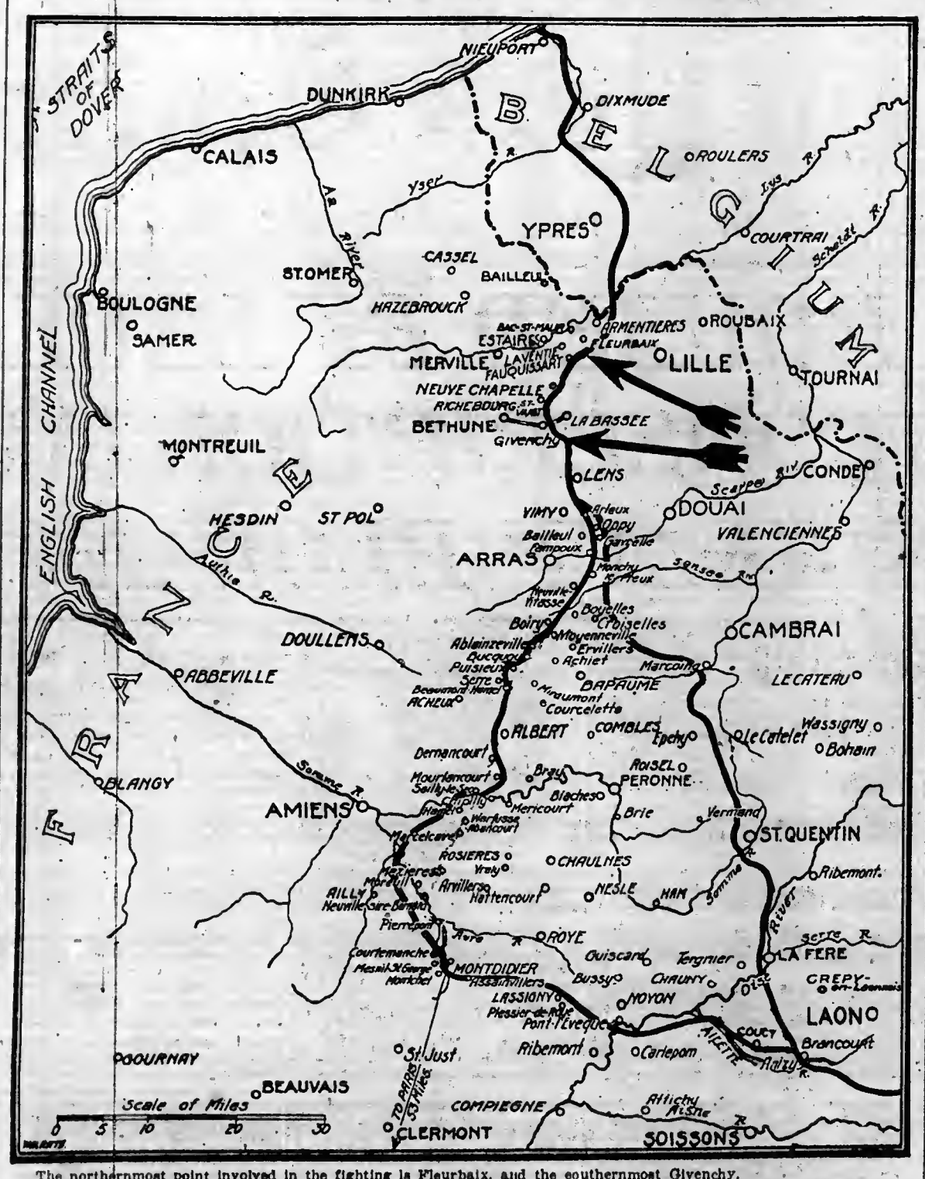
Further details of the first furious days of the German offensive bring to light a most important part played by the French cavalry in keeping in liaison when a breach was threatened, and overwhelming German columns. The conduct of the horsemen was superb, despite the great fatigue from which they suffered and their shortage of rations. They kept the Germans at bay by dismounting and acting as infantry and holding precarious lines without trenches or artillery support, until foot regiments, which naturally were slower in arriving on the spot, could occupy positions from which they could offer a stable defense. In some places small groups of cavalrymen thus opposed odds of more than ten to one for many hours, and saved the critical situation.

GERMANS PROMISE TO GIVE UP TERRITORY

MOSCOW, April 9, (Associated Press.)—The Department of Foreign Affairs says that Germany will evacuate all the territory captured in the recent advance, as well as some taken before the Brest-Litovsk peace negotiations.

Thus the Narva and Pskov districts, the Mohilev Government, and other territory will be restored to Russia.

Scene of Yesterday's German Offensive.



The northernmost point involved in the fighting is Fleurbaix, and the southernmost Givenchy.

The greatest success of the German thrust was between the towns of Estaires and Bac St. Maur, where the Portuguese, constituting the centre of the line attacked, were forced to give ground. Laventie, two miles northeast of Neuve Chapelle, was lost, and Richebourg-St.Vaast, on the southern outskirts of Neuve Chapelle, also fell into the hands of the Germans.

French aviators have located the big gun with which the Germans are conducting their long-range bombardment of Paris. It is at Crepy-en-Laonnois, eight miles southeast of La Fère, and about seventy-five miles from the capital.

The arrows indicate the approximate north and south limits of the German drive of yesterday north of Arras.

The War Situation

By THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

We have additional evidence of the failure of the German plan as originally indicated by the attack in Picardy, in the attack launched yesterday against the British line from La Bassée to Fleurbaix. The first evidence was the shift in the attack from the Montdidier salient. There is not the remotest connection between this action which so far has resulted in driving the French behind the Aliette River and the battle on the main field of Picardy.

The only advantage that can be gained is to clear the southern bank of the Oise of French troops and possibly bend the line back from the forest of Coucy to Noyon. Certainly this attack was not launched as a means of discouraging any counteroffensive on the French at this section of the front. The French were behind the marshy banks of the Oise, the Germans were on the hills to the north. If General Foch intends to counterattack he certainly would not do so where every feature of terrain was with the enemy rather than with him.

The disadvantage of having to attack across the Oise with its broad marsh belts lining each bank of the river are so evident that such a proposition would be discouraging from the outset. It appears, then, that there was no further object than to clear the Oise and to eliminate the angle between the new line which the French were compelled to form and the original line held when the German attack began on March 21st.

The attack against the British north of Lens has an object more definitely connected with the battle of Picardy than the action on the Oise, it is true. But it is at a point far removed from the scene of the original attack, and would never have been launched had not the German attacks further south below Lens broken down under the British defense. It is a blow against the northern hings on which the British Army swung back in the retreat from Cambrai, the position before Arras. Failing both at the centre and on the left to break the British hold on this hinge, the Germans are now trying on the north.

The chances of succeeding on the front of attack are distinctly better from the sole consideretion of terrain than they were at either Bucquoy or along the Scarpe. In both of the latter cases, the British had directly behind them good hill positions, excellent artillery locations, and good points of observation—one of the most important elements in war. The country between La Bassée and Fleurbaix is absolutely flat, as flat as the Flanders country, of which it really forms a part. There is not an eminence, not a distinguishing feature of the ground behind the British lines until Bethune is reached, where a line of broken hills stretches out to the westward for a distance of eight or ten miles.

The British line over the front of attack traces a curve convex toward the west, beginning at Hill 70 and ending before Armentières, these points being the extreme eastern ends of the crescent. The maximum depth of this curve is about two and a half miles west of the chord joining these two ends. The general German plan seems to be the same here as was the British plan in the battle of the Somme, the development on a large scale of a salient already existing, rather than the more usual strategy of pinching out a salient by an attack against its sides. As this salient grows deeper naturally the positions to the north and south become more precarious, and if it be made deep enough the lines which limit it must be withdrawn and reformed.

These are the general features of the situation on this particular front. It does not appear, however, that, unless the British are forced back a considerable distance, their line will be very much if any affected by a limited retirement. Along the northern leg of the salient the British line is more or less guarded by the River Lys, which runs through Armentières. On the south the La Bassée Canal performs the same function. Only by pushing the British back almost if not quite to Bethune can the German guns be made effective against the positions about Lens, and even then the range will be excessive.

In such a case, however, the British would have to correct their lines north of Lens and vacate Hill 70, which would enable the Germans then to get a converging fire on Vimy Ridge. Even so, the British still hold the high ground north of Armentières-Passchendaele Ridge and its extension, the Messines-Wytschaete Ridge, which give them a great advantage, both from the standpoint of artillery and observation.

There is no centre point of value as yet involved. The nearest such is Bethune, about six miles away. Similarly, there is no railroad in this new battle area the cutting of which would in the least disturb the Allies' supplies. Unless the Germans can break through the lines as they did at St. Quentin, the advance will be difficult, due to the absolutely flat character of the country, which offers no cover for concealing the concentration of troops or the movement of artillery. On the whole, it is a situation which may be viewed, in its present stage, without alarm.

The German attack has apparently had just about the same measure of success as the attack before Arras. At three separated points—Neuve Chappelle, where the British attacked successfully in the early Spring of 1915; Fauquissart, some distance further north, and the Cardonnerie Farm, a little north of Fauquissart—the Germans made small gains reaching into the British front lines. These gains, however, scarcely indented the fighting line and, in spite of the fact that the attack was prefaced by nearly forty-eight hours of artillery fire, are of no moment. If this operation is proved a failure by subsequent events, Germany's next move will be watched with interest, as she will then be confronted with the probability of a repetition of Verdun.

GERMANS ATTEMPT TO EXPLAIN CHECK

difficulties which the Germans have on their lines of communication over the devasted area.

Baron von Ardenne, in the Berliner Tageblatt, says that the struggle is about to enter a new phase and that Amiens is now regarded as the definite and immediate German goal. He adds that the German heavy artillery "appears at least to some extent" to have been brought up in the centre line, and that when the remainder has been advanced "the final act of the great dramis of Amiens should not be far off." But sections of the people very naturally wonder why the advance has not been more rapid. Meanwhile, where is the colossal number of airplanes promised of which up to this present time there is no trace?

Trying to Head Off America.

The paper concludes that American help has come more slowly than the Entente expected, and remarks that armies are not made overnight. It asks if the Entente can hold out until the Americans are ready. "This is being answered on the French battlefields," it says.

That the Moderates are fairly powerful in high quarters is demonstrated by the mere fact of the publication of the Lichnowsky memorandum and that von Jagow is allowed to speak out. No doubt those utterances have had an enormous effect among the sober-minded population. The Moderates, too, have published in many papers articles pointing out the seriousness of the raw material problem after the war, and that an unbending military attitude on the part of Germany would only tend to make matters worse.

Count Czernin's speech is regarded from two viewpoints. His revelation regarding the alleged peace feeler by France is looked upon as an effort to throw the blame on France for prolonging the war, but while that pleases the Pan Germans they are mightily angry with the way in which, by the reported terms of the Rumanian treaty, he successfully withstood the extensive German demands.

The action of the Kreuz-Zeitung in demanding an outright indemnity from France and the annexation of the Longwy-Brie region has attracted a good deal of attention in the country, as that organ voices the views of the high Conservative and Military parties. This claim for annexation is supported by the Vossische Zeitung, which publishes opinions by several famous Industrial magnates, pointing out how important that district is to the future of German industry.

Reventlow is busy lecturing in favor of a western peace on the eastern model and the general activity of the Junkers tends to support the view that the militarists have been given a time limit in which to make good. If they do so they will naturally carry the day politically as well. If not—and that the matter is one for haste is admitted on all hands in Germany—the Moderates will have their say.

In the majority of circles there is a fairly general belief that the famous July peace resolutions should be revised. The Socialist attitude appears to be unchanged, but other parties now maintain that they have a free hand. Some leaders favor a revision of the resolution on the basis of the status quo ante as the minimum condition, but all will depend on the outcome of the military struggle. In some circles it is held that this struggle must bring peace in one way or another, and everything goes to point to the offensive being the last big throw by Germany to turn the scale finally in her favor.

"I am one copy of SYSTEM.

"I was one of the September bunch. There were 160,000 of us. I went to the Gordon Tire and Rubber Company, Canton, Ohio. Mr. H. B. McMaster, vice president and general manager, read me carefully. One of my articles, 'How to Pick Men,' pleased him, I know, because he slapped his knee, then jumped up and showed the article to another man in a private office. Then he pinned a note on me, addressed to J. C. K., which recommended reading that article. This was one of the paragraphs in the note: 'I do not think our organization as a whole gets nearly enough of these outside slants, a knowledge of which naturally would broaden our viewpoint.' He sent another note to C. W. McK., adjuring him likewise to study the article. Then he thought a minute and sent still another advance note to a third man, telling him to watch for me. Well, all those busy officials read me from cover to cover. Conferences took place. I overheard the name of 'SYSTEM' again and again. Quiet, confidential talks were had with employees who walked out beaming. Things were happening!—careers being brightened, men sent home with happy news for their wives. It was wonderful! So many waves and billows of influence! All from a few printed pages! What must have occurred, I asked myself, in places where the rest of the 160,000 copies of SYSTEM went, for—approximately, though not quite equal to, the total combatant strength of the Allies in infantry. They were slightly inferior in artillery. They were inferior in cavalry, they were considerably inferior, and, what is very important, they were undoubtedly inferior in aircraft.

Teutons Had Smaller Divisions.

"The Germans, therefore, organized their troops so as to produce a larger number of divisions out of the slightly smaller number of infantry and slightly smaller number of guns. They had fewer battalions in a division and fewer men in a battalion. That is entirely a question of organization, and it yet remains to be seen that their organization is better than ours. It is necessary to explain that, in order that the House should realize why, with approximately the same number of men, the Germans have a larger number of divisions on that front.

"According to all the facts which have come to hand as to the losses of the battle, that roughly represents the relative strength of the combatants on both sides at this moment. The Germans had, however, one or two important advantages. The first, the initial advantage, which is always commanded by the offensive, is that they know where they mean to attack. They choose the ground, they choose the location, they know the width of the attack, they know the dimensions of the attack, they know the time of the attack, they know the method of the attack. All that invariably gives the initial advantage to the offensive.

"The defense has a general advantage, as, owing to air observation, concealment is difficult. At the same time, in spite of all that, owing to the power of moving troops at night, which the Germans exercised to a very large extent, there was a large margin for surprise, even in spite of air observation, and of this the enemy took full advantage.

"I should like to say one word here as to the difficulty which the allied Generals were confronted with in this respect. Before the battle the greatest German concentration was in front of our troops. That was no proof that the full weight of the attack would fall on us. There was a very large concentration opposite the French lines. There was a very considerable concentration—I am referring now to the German reserves—on the northern part of our line.

"After the battle began, or immediately before the battle, the Germans by night brought their divisi from the northern part to the point where the attack took place. They also took several divisions from opposite the French in the same way and brought them to our front. But it would have been equally easy for them, while concentrating troops opposite our front, to manoeuvre them in the same way opposite the French. I am only referring to that in order to show how exceedingly difficult it is for Generals on the defensive to decide exactly where, in their judgment, the attack is coming and where they ought to concentrate their reserves.

Gen. Wilson's "Remarkable Forecast."

"I may just say a word here. This problem was considered very closely by the military staff at Versailles, and I think it right, in justice to them, to point out that after a very close study of the German position and of the probabilities of the case, they came to the conclusion, and they stated their conclusion to the military representatives and to the Ministers in the month of January, or the beginning of February, that the attack would come south of Arras; that it would be an attack on a very wide front—that it would be an attack on the widest front ever yet assailed; that the Germans would accumulate ninety-five divisions for the purpose of making that attack; that they would throw the whole of their resources and their strength into breaking the British line at that point, and that their objective would be the capture of Amiens and the severance of the British and French forces.

"That was the conclusion which Sir Henry Wilson, Chief of the Imperial Staff, came to and which was submitted at that time, two or three months ago, and I think that it was one of the most remarkable forecasts of enemy intentions that was ever made.

"As a matter of fact, the attack was made up, I think, by about ninety-seven divisions. It was an attack on the widest front that had ever been engaged. Its object undoubtedly was the capture of Amiens and the severance of the British and French forces. So that, almost in every detail, that very remarkable forecast has been verified in the event. event.

"Another remarkable prediction was that it might probably succeed in penetrating the British line to the extent of half the distance of the front attacked. They came to the conclusion from a close examination of the offensives of the war.

Advantage of United Command.

"There was another advantage. There was, first of all, the advantage which the Germans had from having the initiative. There was a further advantage they had, and this undoubtedly was the greatest advantage, from having a united command opposed to a dual one. The Germans undoubtedly relied on this to a very large extent for their success. They owe much of the success of this attack to this.

"It was reported to me on good authority that the Kaiser informed ex-King Constantine: 'I shall beat them, for they have no united command.' Which shows that that was what they were relying in the main upon; that, although their numbers were slightly inferior, they knew the importance that was to be attached to the fact that there was a perfectly united command.

"And that is an obvious advantage, for if the risks in one particular part of the line are great, and in another part of the line are great, but substantially less than in the former, with one command there is no hesitation in the mind of the Commander in Chief as to which risk he will make the greatest provision against.

"With two separate commands the problem is a different one. It is more difficult to adjust the balance of risk, and the General is always naturally inclined to give himself and his army the benefit of any doubt. That may be because if anything goes wrong there he alone is to be held responsible to his own countrymen for the safety of his army.

Weather Favored Germans.

"The enemy had another incidental hut, as it turned out, very important advantage—that of weather. Exceptional weather favored his designe. It was both dry and misty. The attack which succeeded was made on that part of the line where under ordinary Spring conditions the ground would have been almost impassable.

"A wounded officer told a friend of mine today, a General, that under ordinary conditions no one could walk across the part which was traversed by the Germans at this time of the year. But it just happened to be absolutely dry and firm, and they walked across ground which no one had any right to expect at this time of the year would be in that condition.

"Not only that, hut the fact that it was warm increased the mist, and the Germans were actually in some parts within a few yards of our front line before any one knew of their approach. It was quite impossible to observe them. This was a special disadvantage to us, inasmuch as our scheme of organization in that particular part of the line depended largely upon the cross-line fire of machine guns and artillery. They had, therefore, a very special advantage, of which they made the fullest use.

Closed Up Gap in Armies.

"With regard to the hattle itself, as I have already stated, it will take some time to ascertain the whole facts. At one time it was undoubtedly very critical. The enemy broke through hetween our Third and Fifth Armies, and there was a serious gap, and the situation was retrieved owing to the magnificent conduct of our troops. They retired in perfectly good order, re-establishing the junction hetween the two armies and frustrating the enemy's purpose.

"The House can hardly realize, and certainly cannot sufficiently thank—nor can the country—our troops for their superb valor and the grim tonacity with which they faced overwhelming hordes of the enemy and clung to their positions. They retired, but were never routed, and once more the cool pluck of the British soldier, that refuses to acknowledge defeat, saved Europe.

"I am referring to the whole army, Generals, officers, and soldiers. I mean the whole army, and I draw no distinction. Their conduct has been one of incredible conrage and great coolness under the most trying conditions. I do not think that any distinction can be drawn between officers and men. I am referring to the British Army, and that means all.

Praises General Carey's Feat.

"And I specially refer to what one Brigadier General did. Some reference has heen made in the press already to it, where at one point there was a serious gap, which might have let the enemy into Calais."

At this point the Prime Minister spoke of the critical situation which developed when the German attack hegan. He said the gap on the way to Amiens was held hy Brig. Gen. Carey, who for six days stood off the enemy with engineers, laborers, signalers, and anybody who could hold a rifle.

"Until the whole circumstances which led to the retirement of the Fifth Army and its fail..re to hold the line of the Somme, at least till the Germans brought out their guns, and perhaps the failure adequately to destroy the bridges—until all these are explained it would be unfair to censure the General in command of the army, General Gough. But until those circumstances are cleared up it would be equally unfair to the British Army to retain his services in the field. It is necessary to recall him until the facts have been fully ascertained and laid before the Governmen hy their military advisers."

"After the retirement of the Fifth Army the French reserves came up with remarkahle rapidity, when their position before the hattle is borne in mind. In fact, the speed with which, when the final decision was taken as to the real designs of the enemy, the French reserves were brought up is one of the most remarkahle feats of organization in this war, and hetween the courage of our troops and the handling of the army—the way the Third Army held, never giving way a hundred yards to the attack of the enemy—I think it right that it should be said about the army commanded hy General Byng—what between the efforts of our soldiers and the loyal assistance given in true spirit of comradeship by the French Army, the position is for the moment stabilized. But it is clear that the Germans, having gained an initial success, are preparing another, and perhaps an even greater, attack on the allied armies.

Teutons Fail in Main Objects.

"Up to the present the enemy has undoubtedly obtained a great initial success. There is no good in not accepting the facts. It is from that hasis we must hegin to huild. But he has failed so far in his main objects. He failed to capture Amiens. He failed to separate the French and British armies. But we should be guilty of great, it might be fatal, error if we were to underestimate the gravity of the prospect.

"The enemy has captured valuable ground, which is too near Amiens for comfort or security, and he has succeeded for the time being in crippling or of our great armies.

"I will now tell the House something of the measures adopted hy the Cabinet to meet the emergency. I have already explained what was done ahout the French reserves. The Cabinet took every step to hurry up reinforcements in order to fill up the gap in our armies. No such large numhers of men ever passed across the Channel in so short a time.

"As the emergency was great it was impossihle to allow those who were summoned to France the usual leave to visit their relatives. It was with the greatest regret that we found it necessary to cancel this permission, and nothing but the gravity of the position would have justified so harsh a proceeding. But the troops accepted the position in a manner which is worthy of the fortitude, courage, and patriotism they have shown throughout.

"There was an understanding that boys under 19 years would only be used in case of emergency. We felt that the emergency had arisen, and in so far as those who were over 18 were concerned, those who had already received six months' training, we felt it necessary that they should be sent to France.

"As to the guns and machine guns which were lost, the numbers are grossly exaggerated hy the enemy. I am assured that they have also exaggerated very considerably the number of prisoners they have taken. The Commander in Chief assured me last week that it was a gross exaggeration.

"I am very glad to be ahle to say that the Ministry of Munitions were ahle not merely to replace those guns and machine guns, hut that they still have got a very suhstantial reserve. The same thing applies to ammunition. There is an ample reserve of ammunition hoth in this country and in France.

"Our aircraft strength is greater now than before the battle, and we all know what brilliant service our airmen rendered in this hattle. Until the whole story of the hattle is told it will he almost impossible to estimate the services they rendered in retarding the advance of the enemy, in desiroying his machinery, and in making it difficult for him to bring up his guns and ammunition. We feel confident that our armies, Generals, and soldiers will he quite equal to the next encounter, whenever it comes.

Wilson's "Dramatic Assistance."

"The next step to which I should like to call the attention of the House is the material and dramatic assistance rendered hy President Wilson in this emergency—one of the most important decisions in the war. In fact, the issue of the battle might very well he determined hy this decision.

"In America there is a very considerable number of men in the course of training, and the Allies looked forward to having a large American army in France in the Spring. It has taken longer than was anticipated to turn those soldiers into the necessary divisional organizations. If America waited to complete these divisional organizations it would not be possible for these fine troops in any large numbers to take part in this battle in this campaign, although it might bo very well the decisive battle of the war.

"This was, of course, one of the most serious disappointments from which the Allies had suffered. It is no use pretending it was not one of our chief causes of anxiety. We depend upon it largely to make up the defection of Russia.

"For many reasons—reasons, perhaps of transport, reasons connected with the time it takes, not merely to train troops and their officers, hut to complete the necessary organization—it was quite impossible to put into France the number of divisions every one had confidently expected would he there. Under the circumstances we, therefore, submitted to the President of the United States a definite proposal. We had the advantage of having the Secretary of State for War in this country within two or three days after the battle had commenced. Mr. Balfour and I had a long conversation with him upon the whole situation, and we submitted to him certain recommendations which we had heen advised to make to Mr. Baker and the American Government.

Reading Submitted Proposal.

"On the strength of the conversation we suhmitted proposals to President Wilson, with the strong support of Premier Clemenceau, to enahle the combatant strength of the American Army to come into action during this hattle, inasmuch as there was no hope of it coming in as a strong separate army. By this decision American battalions will be hrigaded with those of the Allies.

"This proposal was submitted by the Earl of Reading on hehalf of the British Government to President Wilson, and President Wilson assented to the proposal without any hesitation, with the result that arrangements aro now being made for the fighting strength of the American Army to be immediately hrought to hear in this struggle, a struggle which is only now beginning, to this extent, and it is no mere small extent, that the German attack has heen held up. It has stirred up the resolution and energy of America heyond anything which has yet occurred.

"Another important decision taken by the allied Governments I must also call the attention of the House to. It hecame more ohvious after the battle than ever hefore that the allied armies were suffering from the fact that they were fighting as two separate armies and had to negotiate support with each other. Valuahle time was thus lost. Some of us had heen deeply impressed by this peril for some time and had done our best to avert it.

"But the inherent difficulties to be overcome are tremendous. There are national prejudices, national interests, professional prejudices and traditions. The inherent difficulties of getting two or three separate armies to fight as one are almost insurmountable, and it can only he done if public opinion in all these countries insists upon it as one condition of success.

"The Versailles conference was an effort at a remedy. How were the Versailles decisions carried out, and the extent to which they were not carried out? This is not the time to inquire.

"I respectfully suggest to the House that no good would come at this stage in discussing this question. But if any one needed conviction as to the wisdom of that policy, this battle must have supplied it. The peril we passed through, hy estahlishing the conviction without challenge may, I think, he worth the price we paid for it.

"A few days after the hattle commenced there was not merely the Government, hut the commanders in the field. We had not merely Field Marshals, but army commanders present. We were so convinced—and the same thing applied to the French—of the importance of more complete strategic unity that they agreed to the appointment of General Foch to the supreme direction of the strategy of all the allied armies on the western front.

"May I not say just one word ahout General Foch? It is not merely that he is one of the most hrilliant soldiers in Europe, hut there is this to be said about him: Foch is the man who, when we were attacked and were in a similar plight at the first battle of Ypres, rushed the French Army there by every conceivable expedient—buses, cabs, lorries, anything he could lay his hands upon. He crowded French divisions through, and undoubtedly helped to win the great hattle.

"There is no doubt ahout the loyalty and comradeship of General Foch. I have no doubt that this arrangement will be carried out not merely in the letter but in the spirit. But it is the most important decision that has been taken in reference to the coming hattle. This strategic unit is, I suhmit to the House, the fundamental condition of victory. It can only be maintained hy complete co-operation hetween the Governments and the Generals and hy something more than that—the unmistakable public opinion hehind it.

Asks Support for Foch.

"Why do I say that? For this reason: A Generalissimo in the ordinary and full sense of the term may he impracticable. There aro three functions which a General wields—strategical, tactical, and administrative. What does administrative mean? It means control of organization, the appointment and dismissal of officers and Generals, and that is a power which it is difficult or almost impossible to give to Generals of another country with a national army.

"Therefore, in spite of all the arrangements made, unless there he not merely good-will, but the knowledge that the public of France, Great Britain, and America will assist in co-ordination and in supporting the authority in the supreme strategical plans chosen by the Governments, and in supporting the Governments in any action they may take to assert their authority, any arrangements made will he futile and mischievous. I make no apology for dwelling at some length upon this point. I have always felt that we were losing value and efficiency in the allied armies through lack of co-ordination and concentration.

"We have sustained many disasters already through this, and we shall encounter more unless this defect in our machinery is put right. Hitherto, I regret, every effort at amendment led to rather prolonged and very bitter controversy, and these great inherent difficulties were themselves accentuated and aggravated. There were difficulties of carrying out plans and other obstacles, and, what is worse, valuahle time is lost.

"I entreat the nation as a whole to stand united for the united control of the strategical operations of our armies at the front. We know how much depends upon unity of concentration. We are fighting a very powerful foe, who, insofar as he has triumphed, has triumphed mainly hecause of superior unity and the concentration of his strategic plans.

"There is another matter to which I should like to refer, and it is the suggestion that our forces have heen dissipated on a subsidiary enterprise. Not a single division was sent from France to the East. With regard to Italy, had it not been for the fact that there are battalions of French and British divisions there, the Austrian Army would have been free to throw the whole of its strength on the western front. If there were not some there now the Austrian Army would be more powerfully represented than is on the western front.

"With regard to Saloniki, the only thing the present Government did was to reduce the forces there hy two divisions. In Mesopotamia there is only one white division in all, and in Egypt and Palestine together there are only two white divisions, and the rest are either Indians or mixed with a very small proportion of British troops. In these divisione I am referring to infantry divisions.

"I want the House really to consider what that means. There is a menace to our Eastern empire through Persia, because through Persia you approach Afghanistan, and through Afghanistan you menace the whole of India. Had it not been for the hlows inflicted upon the Turks, what would have happened? Before these attacks there were Turkish divisions helping the Germans in Russia. They would have heen there helping the Germans on the west, exactly as they helped them on the east.

Germans Sent to Help Turks.

"But what has happened? They were attacked in Palestine and Mesopotamia and two Turkish armies were destroyed. If we had remained in Egypt and defended Egypt by remaining there on the canal and allowing the Turks to hold us with a small force while they were putting the whole of their force in Mesopotamia and menacing our position in India by that means, the Turks could now have been assisting the Germans in the west as they did in the east.

"What is happening now? German battalions at this moment have heen sent to assist the Turks instead of the Turks sending divisions to help the Germans. The Germans now have sent battalions to help the Turks in Palestine. After all, if you have a great empire you must defend it.

"There was a great empire which withdrew its legations from the outlying provinces of the empire to defend its heart against the Goths and those legations never went back. The British Empire has not heen reduced to that plight yet. We can defend ourselves successfully in France, and wo can also hold our empire against any one who assails it in any part of the world at the same time.

"May I, before I leave this topic, say how much gratitudo we owe to India for the magnificent way in which she has come to the aid of the empire in this emergency?

"It is not the fact that we have got three British divisions in Egypt and Palestine and ono in Mesopotamia that has enabled us to hold our own, but it is the fact that wo have had these splendid troops from India. Many of them volunteered since the war, and they have been more than a match for their Turkish adversaries on many a stricken field.

Can't Give Accurate Losses.

"It is too early to state yet with accuracy our losses, hecause in the case of a battle over such a wide front, fought with such intensity for over a fortnight, with vast numhers of men engaged, the losses sustained must be considerahle. The claims of the enemy as to prisoners have been grossly exaggerated, and Field Marshal Haig has assured me that they were quite impossihle from the figures at his disposal, and which he showed me, and the enemy's claims seem quite preposterous from the statement he made to me.

"But still our losses are very great and our reserves have been called upon to a considerahle extent to make up the wastage and refit tho units, and if the drain continues on this scale, a drain on the resources of reserves and of man power, it must cause the deepest anxiety, unless we take immediate steps to replenish it.

"The immediate necessity is relieved hy the splendid and generous way and promptitude with which America has come to our aid, but they are simply lent to receive their training, with a view to their incorporation at the first suitable moment in the American Army in France, and even if they remain with the British right through the hattle, the time will come when wo shall need large reinforcements, if this hattle continues.

"I want the House to consider for a moment what the plans of the enemy may be as they are now revealed. It was never certain he would take this plunge, hecause he knows what it means if it fails. But he has taken it. The hattle proves that the enemy has definitely decided to seek a military decision this year, whatever the consequences to himself.

Reasons for German Effort.

"There is no douht he has overwhelming reasons. There is the economic condition of his country and the critical economic condition of his allies. He is now at the height of his power, and Russia is at the least, while America has not yet come in in its strength. So this year the enemy may put forth something which approaches his full strength. But soon he will grow feehler and weaker in comparison with the allied forces.

"Everything, therefore, points to the definite determination of Germany to put the whole of her resources into seeking a military decision this year, and this means a prolonged battle from the North Sea to the Adriatic, with Germany and Austria throwing in the whole of their strength.

"There are still seven or eight months within which the fighting can continue, and everything depends upon keeping our strength right to the end, whatever the strain upon our resources may he.

"With American aid we can do it. But even with American help, we cannot feel secure unless we are prepared ourselves to make even greater sacrifices than we have hitherto made. I know what the Government wish. I know also what will happen if the demand which the Government is putting forward is not responded to.

"It is idle to imagine, as some people very light-heartedly seem to think, that you have got an unlimited reservoir of man-power in this or in any helligerent country. We have already raised in this country for military and naval purposes very nearly six million men. We canot raise here the samo proportion of men per population as you can in other helligerent countries. I have repeatedly emphasized that in the House of Commons.

Says Navy and Shipping Are First.

"We have the greatest navy in the world, the command of the seas depends not merely for ourselves, but for our allies, upon the efforts we put forward. That is not only a question of manning the fleet; it is also a question of huilding, of adding to the numhers of ships, and of repairing the ships. Then you have got a mercantile marine, without which the Allies could not continue the struggle for a singlo month.

"All that must he borne in mind, and whatever happens and whatever proposals wo put forward today, it would be folly to do anything which would interfere with the one fundamental condition of success to the Allies—that the navy and shipping must be first.

Industry to Bear Strain.

"We have also got to supply coal largely to our allies, as well as steel. But, owing largely to improved organizations in the various industries, to the way they are adapting themselves from day to day to new conditions, and to the increased numbers and greatly increased efficiency of woman labor, there is a reserve of men, which, consistent with the discharge of these ohligations, may yet be withdrawn in great emergency for our battleline; not without damage to industry—I do not forget that—and not without, to a certain extent, weakening the economic strength of the country, and not without imposing restrictions and perhaps privations, but without impairment to the striking power of the country for war.

"I want to point out especially why the steps taken now are steps which will be useful in this hattle. First of all, it is a hattle which may last for months. The decision may be taken not now or next month, hut may be months hence. But, beyond that, the Allies at the present moment have the same reserves of man power to reinforce their armi.. as Germany has, without taking into account those great reserves in America.

"The Germans, however, are calling up another class, which will produce 550,000 efficient young men. These will be prepared to be thrown into the battle line. This is the 1920 class, aged 18½. These can be thrown into the battle line before this fight is over, and we must be prepared for their advent in this struggle this year.

Continuation of Lloyd George's Speech to the Commons

"Therefore, I have to submit to Parliament the totals for increasing, and increasing very materially, the reserves which will be available for reinforcing our armies in the field during this prolonged battle, upon which we are only just entering. I will now give roughly some of the proposals we intend to make in order to increase the number of men available.

"We already have raised for armed forces during the first quarter of the year more than the quarter's proportion of the original number of men which it was estimated was the minimum required for the present year. We are also effecting a very strict comb out of some of the essential industries. Very large levies have been taken from munition works. They will amount, I think, to something like 100,000 grade 1 men.

New Call on the Miners.

"That has been done already this year, and it will, of course, involve the utilization of other labor to a very large extent in munition works. A call for 500,000 has been made already on the coal industry, and these men have been rapidly recruited. I regret to say that military needs will necessitate the calling up of another 150,000 men from this industry. These men can be spared, we are convinced, after entering into the matter very carefully, without endangering the essential output of coal for national industries.

"No one is likely to forget the fine response made by the miners at the beginning of the war, or the splendid part they have taken in hundreds of battles since then. They have been loyal in meeting the present demand of 50,000 men, and I am confident they would meet a further call upon them in the same spirit, in view of this great national emergency under which we are making it. The transport services also have been called upon to release the greatest possible number of fit men.

"Further calls are to be made upon the civil service. I do not think it is realized how much the civil service has done already. On one hand, it has had to release a large number of men for the army, and, on the other, it has to meet and is meeting the increased strain of work. But even at the risk of some dislocation we must call upon it to do more, and a clean cut of young, fit men must be made.

Not to Keep Men Below 25.

"It is proposed that no fit men below the age of 25 should be retained. That is the clean-out. We comb out beyond that. I shall explain it later. It is proposed that it should be applied to other industries as well.

"When we are adding to the age and when we are extending the military age, it should not be said that there are fit young men of 25 who are employed in the various industries of the country. This will bring the Civil Service into line, and on a general level, so far as a clean-out is concerned, with the munitions industries.

"Under an act passed in January of this year, we are issuing orders canceling all occupational exemptions by age blocks in specified occupations. That is the clean-out. The first of these orders is being laid on the table in the House today and other orders of the same power will follow.

"I know that the House will appreciate that it is not merely necessary to have men, but to have them quickly. It is no use raising them unless they are raised in time to take part in the struggle this year, when we shall be short of drafts, if the battle is a prolonged one.

"The Government, therefore, have shortened the length of the calling up notice from fourteen days to seven and have authorized the sending of notice by whatever method is the most expeditious and convenient. It may be necessary even to curtail the rights of appeal on medical grounds, but for the moment it is not proposed to do so. We have had a good many frivolous appeals, which have wasted a good deal of time, and if that goes on, it will be absolutely necessary, in the interest of the security of the country, that the rights of appeal should be curtailed in this respect.

"There is another consideration. The strain upon the medical profession has been great already. We are very short of medical men, and we may be driven to do it by the hard necessities of the case.

Special Draft of Men Up to 55.

"I now turn to the new proposal embodied in the bill, which I beg leave to introduce today. Our first proposal is to raise the military age up to 50, and in certain specified cases we ask for powers to raise it to 55, but that only when a man with special qualifications is needed.

"For instance, it may be necessary to do it, in the case of medical men, in order to secure their services. It may be necessary in certain special classes, with special training and special experience, to secure their services for the army. When you come to the question of raising the age to 50, it does not mean that men between 42 and 50 are necessarily to be taken in order to put them into the fighting line. It may be that there are men of that age who are just as fit as men of 25, but I am sorry to say that that is the exception, and we cannot, therefore, depend upon men of that age altogether to make the finest fighting material.

"There are a good many services in the army which do not require the very best physical material, and it would be very helpful to get men of this age to fill those services, in order to release younger and fitter men to enter the fighting line. There is also to be borne in mind the fact that we have to prepare for home defense, so as to be able to release men from this country and fill their places by men between 42 and 50, who, I have no doubt, would fight very tenaciously for their own homes if there were an invasion.

"The proportion of men from 42 to 50 years of age whom we expect to be available is not very high—something like 7 per cent. That is only 7 per cent. of men from 42 to 50 will be available for the army.

"I only want to reassure people between 42 and 50 that all the men of that age are not going to be called up to the fighting line. I gave a sort of rough estimate that it would be only a small percentage of men of this age who would be likely to come under the provisions of the bill.

"Now I come to the question of exemptions from military service. It is known to everyone who has had experience in the difficulty of obtaining man-power that one of the many obstacles to success is the number of exemptions which have been granted, often for reasons which at the time appeared sufficient, but which should no longer be effective at the present time of crisis.

"The Minister of National Service already has the power under the act passed this year to cancel certificates granted on occupational grounds, and it is proposed to make free use of this power. There will be several of these exemptions which will be cancelled under the power which already has been conferred on the Minister of National Service by means of proclamations, but when the existing powers have been used to the utmost it may be necessary to go farther and deal with exemptions granted on other grounds.

"Accordingly it is provided by the bill that his Majesty may, by proclamation declaring that a national emergency has arisen, direct that a certificate of exemption from the military service of the nature specified in the proclamation shall cease to have effect, and that while any such proclamation remains in force no exemptions shall be granted which would fall within the terms of the proclamation.

"It is obvious that under this provision it would be open to the Government to cancel exemptions in respect of men under an age to be specified in the proclamation. This is another means of arriving at a clean-out so as to secure men of military age, fit young men for the purposes of the army under an age to be specified in the proclamation, and any existing exemptions granted to such men will be superseded and the men will be taken or left on medical grounds only. We have to choose between either submitting to defeat or taking the necessary measures to avert it. We will never submit to accepting defeat.

"I need hardly say that this provision will not be used to set aside the pledges given to discharged soldiers. They will be carefully observed.

"It is proposed further to make a change in the constitution of the appeal tribunals dealing with exemptions and to speed up their procedure. I want again to emphasize the fact that time is the essence of this thing. The existing tribunals, no doubt, have done very admirable work, but they will be the first to admit that their work has been hampered by a number of circumstances—the number of the tribunals themselves, the facilities for unnecessary and repeated applications, and the opportunities for delay under recurring rights of appeal.

To Reshape Appeal Boards.

"In these circumstances it is proposed to take power by an Order in Council both to reconstitute the tribunals and regulate the areas in which they shall work and standardize the grounds of exemption and limit the rights of appeal. It is impossible now to specify the precise nature of the changes to be made, but I may indicate the nature of the changes we have in mind.

"Firstly, the areas within which the tribunals may act will be reconsidered and in some cases adjusted; secondly, the local tribunals, like appeal tribunals, will become nominated bodies and be reduced in size. This does not mean that use will not be made of the assistance of existing members of tribunals and they will be willing, I hope, to continue to work under the new conditions.

"We propose to make an attempt to standardize more accurately than is now done the grounds of exemption, to prevent conflicting decisions on these matters in different localities, which is one of the great grievances felt in the country.

"Changes also will be made in the procedure, but upon these I do not intend to dwell at the moment. There is also the question of the extension of the act to ministers of religion for noncombatant purposes.

Announces Irish Conscription.

"I now come to the question of Ireland. When an emergency has arisen which makes it necessary to put men of 50 and boys of 18 into the army in the fight for liberty and independence"—Joseph Devlin here interrupted—"and small nationalities."

The Premier resumed: "Especially, as I am reminded, to fight for liberty and independence and small nationalities. I am perfectly certain it is not possible to justify any longer the exclusion of Ireland."

"What is the position?" continued Mr. Lloyd George. "No Home Rule proposal ever submitted in this House proposed to deprive the Imperial Parliament of the power of dealing with all questions in relation to the army and navy. These invariably are in every Home Rule bill I have ever seen and are purely questions for the Imperial Parliament, so that I am no more claiming any national right that was ever claimed in the House. The Defense of the Realm act also was extended to Ireland.

"The character of the quarrel in which we are engaged is just as much Irish as English. May I say it is more so? It is more Irish, Scotch, and Welsh than it is even English. Ireland, through its representatives at the beginning of the war, assented to it.

Mr. Devlin here interjected—"Because it was a war for small nationalities."

The Prime Minister resuming: "Ireland, through its representatives, assented to the war, voted for the war, supported the war. Irish representatives and Ireland, through its representatives, without a dissenting voice committed the empire to this war. They are as responsible for it as any part of the United Kingdom. May I just read the declaration issued by the Irish Party on Dec. 17, 1914, shortly after the war began.

Byrne Recalls "Revolution."

Mr. Byrne interrupted with: "We have had a revolution since then."

The Prime Minister, resuming: "This is the Declaration of the Irish Party: 'A test to search men's souls has arisen. The empire is engaged in the most serious war in history. It is a just war, provoked by the intolerable military despotism of Germany. It is a war for the defense of the sacred rights and liberties of small nations and the respect and enlargement of the great principles of nationality. Involved in it is the fate of France, our kindred country and the chief nation of that powerful Celtic race to which we belong; the fate of Belgium, to whom we are attached by the same great ties of race and by the common desire of small nations to assert their freedom, and the fate of Poland, whose sufferings and struggles bear so marked a resemblance to our own.

"'It is a war for the high ideals of human government and international relations, and Ireland would be false to her history and to every consideration of honor, good faith, and self-interest did she not willingly bear her share in its burdens and its sacrifices.'

"It is not merely illogical that Ireland should not help, it is unjust. If it were merely England's battle, the young men of Ireland might regard that fact with indifference, but it is not. They are just as much concerned as the young men of England. Therefore, it is proposed to extend conscription on the same conditions as in Great Britain.

"As there is no machinery in existence and no register has as yet been completed in Ireland, it may take some weeks before active enrollments begin. As soon as arrangements are complete the Government will put the act into immediate operation."

"We won't have conscription in Ireland!"

An uproar followed.

The report of the Irish Convention was adopted by a majority only, and therefore the Government would take the responsibility, the Premier said, for such proposals for self-government as were just and could be carried out without violent controversy. It would be some weeks before enrollment in Ireland began, the Premier continued. One Nationalist cried out:

"It will never begin."

Michael Flavin, Nationalist member from Kerry, said:

"You come across and try to take us."

The Premier said the Man-Power act would be extended to Ireland under the same conditions as to Great Britain and that a measure of self-government for Ireland would be introduced. He told the Nationalists that conscription and self-government would not go together, but that each must be taken on its merits.

While the Premier was speaking, Joseph Devlin, Nationalist member for West Belfast, interrupted to move that the House report progress until the report of the Irish Convention was presented. This interruption created a storm of protest, and Mr. Devlin shouted:

"You cannot howl me down. I won't sit down. You may try Prussian methods in Ireland, but you won't try them on me."

The Speaker intervened, and told Mr. Devlin he could move adjournment after the Premier's speech, but not in the middle of it.

When the Premier was referring to Ireland John Dillon, the successor of the late John Redmond as leader of the Irish Nationalists in Parliament, said:

"If Irish liberty were at stake I would not hesitate to support that policy. I never challenged the justice of war. I don't challenge it now."

Mr. Lloyd George began: "I don't want to cause trouble—"

"You will get plenty," interrupted an Irish member.

The Premier said he hoped to get the bill through all its stages this week as it was a matter of urgency. He was interrupted by an Irish member, who shouted:

"You will have to get us out of the House first."

Resuming, Lloyd George said:

"While we have one ship afloat we should not accept a German peace. The men being taken now may be the means of a decisive issue."

Mr. Asquith Asks for Time.

After the Premier had delivered his address former Premier Asquith said that if, as he believed, the gravest peril which ever had menaced the empire was now confronting it, there was no sacrifice Parliament was not prepared to make. He appealed to the Premier to give a little more time for consideration of the bill.

Mr. Asquith said he would suspend judgment until he saw the bill in print. He invited everyone to keep his mind and ears accessible to reasonable argument. All the needful machinery, he added, could not be set up for weeks, perhaps for months.

At the conclusion of Mr. Asquith's speech Joseph Devlin moved an adjournment and warned the Government that it was entering upon a course of madness if it endeavored to enforce conscription on Ireland. Ireland, he said, never had been consulted on its willingness to pay this blood tax. If the Government would do justice to the Irish people it would give them the free Government of a free people.

After some debate Mr. Lloyd George asked that the motion be withdrawn so that the bill might be printed. John Dillon, supporting Mr. Devlin's motion, asked the Premier whether he had consulted anybody before taking this decision—if he had consulted a single Irish representative. If he had he should name the man.

Mr. Dillon said he hoped for the sake of the war and for the sake of the empire that the methods of the War Cabinet in dealing with the war were different from its methods in dealing with Ireland.

A bill applying conscription to Ireland, Mr. Dillon continued, would plunge the country into bloodshed and confusion and would open a new war front in addition to the western front. He urged the War Cabinet to inform itself as to the state of Irish feeling before proposing conscription to Ireland.

Carson for Conscription.

Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, said that the only thing that interested him on the present occasion was the pressing necessity of the country in relation to the war. He declared he asked himself what right had he as an Irish Member to give his adhesion to a bill which called upon the people of Great Britain to make sacrifices most terrible in character while Ireland should be absolved. If such a thing could happen, he would hang his head for shame.

Sir Edward said he regretted that the bill had been mixed up with home rule. Conscription for Ireland, either right or wrong, ought not to be propped up by home rule. He warned the Government that by introducing home rule they might be raising two agitations, one against conscription and another in regard to home rule, both of which might affect the operation of the bill.

Mr. Devlin's motion was defeated by a vote of 323 to 80, after the Government had applied the closure.

Then on a motion for leave to introduce the Man-Power bill, William O'Brien protested against what he termed the madness and wickedness of applying it to Ireland, the Government offering a shadow of a sham home rule, he said, in order to impose upon Ireland a naked military despotism at the point of machine guns. Because Ireland was weak, the Government was going to do to her what it dared not to do to Australia without consent, Mr. O'Brien said.

Leave to introduce the Government's Man-Power bill was carried in the House tonight by 299 to 80.

Discussion Period Extended.

It was announced in the House that the Government had decided to extend the time for discussion of the Man-Power bill until Tuesday of next week. This was a concession to a request of Mr. Asquith after a vote had been taken, and the bill had passed its first reading amid cheering.

SAYS LIBERALS ARE AMAZED.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, April 10.—The Daily Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondent, who has been consistently a supporter of the Lloyd George Government, writes:

"Why the Government should have gratuitously chosen at this moment above all others to impose conscription on Ireland is a mystery that I find it impossible to solve. Liberals for the most part are aghast at the folly of this impolicy. In the passion of resentment on the Irish benches the Prime Minister's announcement that the Government intends to bring in a bill to establish self-government in Ireland on the lines of the convention report passed almost unheeded.

"A great impression was made on the House by a noble, well-conceived, and very eloquent speech delivered by Mr. Asquith. It was a somber reminder of the perils that threaten the splendid inheritance that our forefathers have bequeathed to us. Mr. Asquith thinks the situation confronting us today is graver than any that ever menaced this country in its thousand years of existence. He does not quail before the peril, least of all when he thinks of the indomitable spirit animating our soldiers. In this connection he told the House that one of his sons, an artillery officer, stated in a letter which was received this morning that his battery had been in twenty-one engagements in twelve successive days.

"It is not alone the British Empire," said Mr. Asquith, "but the cause of liberty and humanity that is in grave peril. In the face of such an emergency there is no sacrifice which the country is not prepared to make."

He earnestly appealed to the House to approach the bill from that point of view and begged the Government to give more time for its consideration. He made no reference to Ireland and abstained from any allusion to any specific proposal in the bill until he has been able to see it in print. This brief speech, so worthy in its spirit and temper, touched the emotions of every one who listened to it.

The atmosphere in the House of Commons did not foreshadow success. From his first sentence on Ireland the Premier was assailed with what Reuter's correspondent describes as "running hostile comment from the Irish benches."

The new Nationalist Leader, John Dillon denounced conscription for Ireland heartily. Nor were there signs of conciliation from the Ulster faction. The Irish Unionists met under the Chairmanship of Sir Edward Carson and resolved to support conscription, but they were merely indorsing what has been one of the planks in their platform.

It is felt generally that there is a greater and stronger force in the country than any operating in the House of Commons. That is public opinion, which apparently demands that Irish questions shall not stand in the way of winning the war.

Mr. Lloyd George's speech revealed that the Irish Convention had not reached any agreement and that the constructive work must be done by the Cabinet, guided somewhat by Irish opinion as revealed in the debates of the convention.

CALLED HIS BOLDEST STROKE.

Lloyd George Seeks to Solve Two Problems at Once.

LONDON, April 9.—David Lloyd George, it is thought here, made the boldest stroke of his career today by coupling home rule for Ireland with the conscription of Irishmen.

His disclosure in an address in the House of Commons in presenting the new conscription bill to Parliament swept aside all interest in the details of the conscription scheme, which had been forecast by the newspapers.

Ireland is the only subject talked of tonight. The only question asked is how will the Irish parties and their British sympathizers take to the new policy.

Everything depends on the nature of the proposals for self-government for Ireland to be adopted, as the Premier said, "without violent controversy." The first impression was skepticism as to whether the War Cabinet could frame a measure that would stand that test and the fear that the country might be plunged again into the old fury of the Irish quarrel, while fighting for its life against enemies outside its walls. It was because of this fear that the Asquith Government shelved the old Home Rule act and the Nationalists have blamed that shelving for the failure of more Irishmen to enlist.

Mr. Lloyd George, however, is daring enough to attempt to balance both debts by granting home rule and enforcing conscription.

IRISH BISHOPS JOIN IN DRAFT PROTEST

They Assert That Conscription Would Be the 'Worst Blunder' in Four Years.

DUBLIN, April 9.—The Irish Catholic Bishops' Committee at a meeting held today, which was presided over by Cardinal Logue, passed by a unanimous vote a resolution protesting against conscription in Ireland and declaring that to enforce conscription without the consent of the Irish people would soon inevitably end in defeating its own purpose.

"What between mismanagement and mischief making," said the resolution, "this country already has been desperately upset, and it would be a fatal mistake, surpassing the worst blunder of the last four years, to furnish a telling plea for desperate courtesy by an attempt to enforce conscription."

The Bishops attending the meeting included some who have supported recruiting and the Government's attitude in the war.

AUSTRIA GIVING LEAVE TO FARMER-SOLDIERS

Indications That Food Shortage Takes Precedence Over an Offensive Against Italy.

By a Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, Tuesday, April 9.—The rumors of a coming Austrian offensive against the Italians do not gain confirmation from information obtained by the Intelligence Department of the American Army. It is learned that the Austrian High Command is utilizing the present lull to give leave on a large scale to farmers in uniform, so that they may go back home during the Spring to cultivate their fields.

It is understood that these leaves are being given on a larger scale than ever before, and have given rise to inquiries in the Reichsrat, in answer to which the Government hinted that the situation was such that the crops must be attended to, even by soldiers, to take care of future food needs.

CAREY'S VOLUNTEERS FILLED GAP FOR DAYS

General's Party of Servants, Clerks, and Signalers Beat Off Heavy Attacks.

The exploit of Major Gen. George Glas Sandeman Carey, referred to by Premier Lloyd George in the House of Parliament yesterday, was performed between March 22 and March 28, on the left of the British Fifth Army, just below St. Quentin.

Here the Germans on March 21 drove a wedge between the Inniskilling Fusiliers and the Ulster troops which would have ultimately separated the Third Army under Byng from the Fifth Army under Gough. The former held fast and the latter was giving way on the 22d, when Carey organized a "scratch" battalion in the rear, filled the gap and for nearly six days kept it filled until relieved.

How he did this was described by Philip Gibbs in a dispatch from the front dated April 2:

"The enemy struck in between these Ulster troops and battalions of Manchesters, Bedfords, Yorkshires, and Scottish fusiliers on their left, and it was necessary to draw back toward Ham. To fill up the gap 200 men from headquarters—staff clerks, servants, and signalers—assembled, and with great gallantry held their ground. To pioneer battalions, among them young citizens of Belfast, rifles were given, and they became a fighting force which beat off heavy attacks."

General Gough, who had been rapidly promoted, was removed from his command on April 1. A year ago Carey, with the rank of Colonel in the regular army, had only been commissioned temporary Brigadier General by the Military Secretary notwithstanding he was a Boer war veteran, Queen's medal, two clasps, an artillery expert of European reputation, and in the present war, besides being thrice mentioned in dispatches, had received the decoration of Companion of the Bath. He is 51 years old.

LISTS OF CASUALTIES AGAIN MADE PUBLIC

On Baker's Cabled Order, War Department Will Now Issue Them Regularly.

447 NAMES FOR SIX DAYS

Heaviest Toll of Any Day Since Our Men Landed in France—Was 124 on April 5.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Acting on cabled instructions from Secretary Baker, the War Department tonight resumed publication of the daily list of casualties among the American expeditionary forces. Lists which had accumulated between April 2, when the practice was temporarily discontinued, and April 8 were made public, and it was stated officially that the casualties would be announced regularly hereafter.

The reports issued tonight showed that 447 American soldiers were killed or wounded in action, died of various causes, or were captured by the enemy in the six-day period covered. The heaviest toll for a single day reported since the first American soldiers landed in France was shown by the list of April 5, which contained 124 names. Specific reference is made to twenty-one men having been captured by the Germans. Twenty of these previously had been reported missing and one previously reported dead.

During the last week correspondents with the American forces have reported unusual activity by the Germans on the fronts where the Americans are in the trenches, the dispatches of Sunday referring to the heavy artillery bombardment of the trenches held by General Pershing's men. A number of the casualties reported are belived to have occurred among the engineer units that took part in the great battle in Picardy.

The issuing of the daily casualty lists was suspended after receipt of a general order from Secretary Baker, in France, that in future all news relating to the expeditionary forces must come from the headquarters of General Pershing. While it was not believed that the order was intended to refer to the casualty lists, Acting Secretary Crowell and Major Gen. March, Acting Chief of Staff, decided to hold them up until a formal ruling on the point could be obtained from Mr. Baker.

Pressure still is being exercised in the attempt to have published the home addresses and next of kin of each man named in the casualty list. This system was abandoned by the War Department after General Pershing had reported receipt of a formal protest from the French Government that it resulted in the enemy's obtaining valuable military information. It is believed here that the feature objected to by the French was the inclusion of the date on which the soldier was killed or injured.

President Wilson is understood to have this matter under consideration now, but he is expected to withhold final decision until he has had an opportunity to discuss the point with Secretary Baker on the latter's return from Europe.

HEAR OF ATLANTIC FLIGHT.

Rumor in England That an American Plane Crossed the Ocean.

LONDON, April 9.—All London was talking today about the latest war rumor—the landing in England last night of an American airplane after a non-stop flight from New York with twelve passengers. The authorities declared there was no basis for the story, but this denial served merely to give it additional currency.

According to the popular version, this was the "big surprise" which Premier Lloyd George said last week that the Americans would soon give the Germans.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — American aviation officials said today that no American airplane had crossed the Atlantic, and they were at a loss to explain reports in England that a machine carrying twelve passengers had landed there from America.

Testing the Woolens for Saks Clothes

¶ These are days of much uncertainty in the color world, but there never was any uncertainty at Saks. Before ever a piece of cloth is considered fit for service in our selections it must remain exposed to all the elements of the weather for at least two weeks.

¶ If after this test it shows any signs of disloyalty to its original colors it cannot enter our stocks under any conditions. And this is only one of a hundred ways we test everything that goes into Saks clothes for men.

LENINE TALKS WAR AGAINST JAPAN

ADVANTAGE TO BERLIN SEEN

Papers Refuse to Consider Disembarkation As Having Any Other Motive Than Invasion.

MOSCOW, April 8, (Associated Press.)—Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevist Premier, in a speech here today, said that possibly Russia would have to declare war on Japan in connection with the landing of Japanese troops at Vladivostok.

"The Germans creep up from the south," said Lenine. "General Dutoff's movement slackened for a time, but it is again reviving. There are Japanese landings, assisted by Englishmen, and Frenchmen are coming from the Murman coast. We are being surrounded in a tight ring. It is possible after a short time, perhaps even within a few days, that we will have to declare war on Japan."

M. Lenine also hinted at grave complications with Great Britain and France because of their alleged help to the Japanese.

By ARTHUR RANSOME.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, April 8.—I have just been to the Smolny Institute, which is an almost empty and deserted building—a strange contrast to the Smolny Institute when it was the headquarters of the all-Russia Soviets instead of, as now, of the Petrograd commune.

While I was there news came from Helsingfors that the whole story of a German landing at Hango was false. The landing was made by Finnish White Guards in German uniforms.

The German demand that the Russian Baltic ships in Finnish ports be disarmed is based on the absence from the text of the peace agreement of a provision that Russian ships icebound in Finnish ports may stay there until navigation is possible. The crews are being reduced to a minimum, and disarmament is to be concluded by April 11. The parts of the ships' machinery removed are to be brought to Kronstadt.

Guarding the British Consulate.

It is now reported from Vladivostok that the Japanese authorities have received the Soviet representatives and have declared that the landing of troops was undertaken by Admiral Kato on the responsibility of the English. The landing party is posted near the railway station and is guarding the British Consulate. The streets are heavily patrolled by Red Guards, but there have been no conflicts.

In Petrograd Soviet circles it is still believed that the long-expected has happened, and that the Japanese will attempt to seize the Siberian railway.

Expect Mutinies in Siberia.

MOSCOW, April 7.—It is believed here that the Japanese who have landed at Vladivostok will probably encourage the anti-Soviet minorities in Siberia to mutiny and increase the difficulties in the rear, thus creating disorder and an excuse for more interference. Already there are signs of this. This may be profitable for Japan. It certainly is to the advantage of Germany, especially at a moment when steady organization inside the Soviet republic, both economic and military, was promising a new danger to Germany in the not distant future.

Even the anti-Bolshevist newspapers oppose the Japanese landing, although they are prepared to use it as a ground of agitation against the Bolsheviki. The Retch criticises the Bolsheviki for not being strong enough to prevent the Japanese landing. The Novoya Jizn indirectly calls for resistance to the Allies, and says scornfully:

"The Government talks of diplomatic measures. After the agreement of Brest-Litovsk, are they going to give us an agreement of Vladivostok?"

"We fear the partition of Russia from the East has begun in the name of restoring order," it says.

The Pravda says:

"For us it is clear that this action of the imperialists of the alliance has a double end; on the one hand, to seize as big a lump as possible of Russian territory, and on the other to strike a blow at the Soviet authority."

To gauge the full moral effect of what has happened, it should be remembered that the Japanese descent synchronizes with the German descent on Hango. The Finnish anti-German Socialist Government has been forced to evacuate from Helsingfors to Viborg. Within a short time there will be a German-supported anti-Soviet State within an hour from Petrograd.

Unless the Japanese exploit is speedily liquidated, the Soviet will be cut off from the east by a similar foreign-supported anti-Soviet State, in which case nothing can follow except the destruction of the revolution and a disguised partition of Russia between the East and West for the lasting and not merely temporary advantage of Germany.

PEKING HEARS JAPAN MAKES NEW DEMANDS

Sending of 200,000 Troops Into China to Restore Order Said to be Included.

PEKING, April 4, (Associated Press.)—It is reported in semi-official circles that Japan has proposed to send 200,000 troops to China to co-operate with 200,000 Chinese troops, officered by the Japanese, to restore order throughout China and protect the borders. The alternative is that Japan will dispatch troops to Shangtung and Fukien Provinces for the protection of Japanese interests.

It is said also that Japan has submitted a new series of demands to China, including the complete control of China's finances, purchase of 50 per cent. of ammunition to be made in Japan, operation of iron mines and dockyards under Japanese control, and recognition of special Japanese interests in Mongolia, the same as in Manchuria.

The proposal is said to have been submitted by Baron Sakatani, the new financial adviser to China, and Baron Hayashi, Japanese Minister to China, at a conference with the President and Premier Tuan Chi-Jui. It is believed that part of the plan is the reorganization of China's currency on the basis of a Chino-Japanese financial alliance, which is alleged to be the object of the presence in Peking of Baron Sakatani as the head of a group of leading Japanese bankers.

British Generals to be Chosen by Selection

LONDON, April 9.—King George has signed a royal warrant providing that promotions to the rank of General in the British Army shall be by selection instead of by seniority.

This, it is said, will make it possible for a young officer who shows brilliant abilities as a leader to jump over the heads of seniors in the service.

With the King's decree for promotions of commissioned officers by selection there disappears a cherished tradition of the British regular army. Promotion by selection has always been the backbone of the non-commissioned body.

Military England has been divided into two camps—the press, which alleged that there was no chance for a man to rise in the service, and the military writers, usually retired officers, who adhered to the old system of initial preferment and then seniority.

In the army of the United States close adhesion to the seniority system is overcome by having an officer skip so many "numbers" or promoting him by legislation or Presidential orders, or both.

FALL OF HELSINGFORS EXPECTED BY RUSSIANS

Germans Acting as Masters of Finland—Fear Felt for Russia's Northern Ports.

LONDON, April 9.—With the arrival of the Germans in Finland, the Red Guard cause is lost and the fall of Helsingfors is expected in the near future, says Reuter's Petrograd correspondent, telegraphing Monday. The Germans demanded the disarmament of the forts, as well as of the Russian warships in Finnish waters before Friday, he reports, and the Russian commissaries agreed to comply.

The Germans have distributed by airplane a proclamation declaring that any damage to the fleet or to shipping in the ports or to the land defenses would be severely punished. They likewise demanded that the bolts and sights of the guns on the ships and in the land batteries be loaded on barges and anchored in the outer harbor of Helsingfors, off Gustafssvard, before April 11, the crews of the Russian ships to return to Russia, with the exception that thirty men might be left on the dreadnoughts, twenty men on the cruisers, five on the destroyers, and thirty on the submarines.

The Germans base their demands on Article 6 of the peace treaty, a note attached to which allowed the Russian fleet to remain in Finland until the ice melted.

M. Kameneff, who some time ago was appointed Bolshevist Ambassador to France and was arrested in Finland, will be held by the Finnish White Guards as a hostage, Reuter's Petrograd correspondent reports. In reply to a request made by the Russian authorities through the Swedish representative in Finland for M. Kameneff's release, the White Guards said he would be held pending the receipt of guarantees of non-interference in Finnish affairs by Russian Red Guards.

RIBOT CONTRADICTS CZERNIN'S PEACE STORY

Says His Ministry Never Took Initiative in Any Negotiations with Austria.

PARIS, April 9.—Ex-Premier Ribot said today that the French Government of which he was the head at the time that Count Czernin said conversations concerning peace were held between Austria-Hungary and France never directly or through a neutral intermediary took any initiative in such a proceeding as the Austrian official communication asserted.

This constitutes a contradiction by M. Ribot of the Austrian statement that Count Revertata, Counsellor of the Austrian Legation in Switzerland, was invited by a neutral intermediary in the French Government's name to make known if he was prepared to take cognizance of the French Government's overtures to Austria-Hungary. It contradicts also the statement that Count Armand, confidential agent of Premier Clemenceau, in Ribot's name asked Revertata if conversations between France and Austria-Hungary were possible.

AMSTERDAM, April 9.—The Vienna Zeitung am Mittag, a copy of which has reached here, says that it has been authoritatively informed that the Austrian Government has decided never again to negotiate with the Clemenceau Cabinet, even in connection with the cessation of the war, as M. Clemenceau openly admitted that he had used confidential discussions as the means of obtaining information for the purposes of espionage.

The newspaper adds that Count Zzernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, adheres to everything he said concerning the parleys in Switzerland, and that further sensational disclosures are being prepared.

GERMANS' GREAT GUN BOMBARDED BY FRENCH

Long-Range Piece Discovered by Airmen—Continual Attacks Hamper Its Handling.

PARIS, April 9.—French aviators have discovered the location of the big gun with which the Germans have been bombarding Paris at long range. Continual bombardment of the spot by French artillery and bombing by airmen have made the handling of the great piece difficult. This explains the intermittent fire of the long-range weapon.

The piece is mounted at Crepy-en-Laonnois, near the road from La Fere to Laon. (The spot is eight miles southeast of La Fere and about seventy-five miles from Paris.)

A reply to Cardinal Farley's message of sympathy in connection with the German long-distance bombardment of a Paris church on Good Friday, in which seventy-five persons were killed, was received yesterday from Cardinal Amette, Archbishop of Paris. The message follows:

"I hasten to thank your eminence and the Catholics of New York for their sympathy, their prayers and the generous resolutions which the sacrilegious deed of Good Friday has inspired them to make. I am confident that the Almighty will heed your vows and prayers in favor of the cause which unites us and which more than ever proves itself to be the cause of justice and of Christian civilization."

AMERICANS TO JOIN IN BIG BATTLE SOON

Assistant Secretary Crowell Announces That They Are Not Yet in the Fighting.

HAVE 1,000 AIRPLANES NOW

WASHINGTON, April 9.—American troops have not yet gone into battle in Picardy, Acting Secretary of War Crowell announced tonight in an address to the National Conference of American Lecturers.

He added, however, that indications were that in the near future General Pershing's men would be actively opposing the Germans in their supreme effort on the western front.

The purpose of the German high command in its thrust, Mr. Crowell said, is to drive a wedge between the British and French armies, roll up the former force to the sea, and capture the Channel ports. No Bavarian or Austrian troops have been employed in the battle, the speaker asserted, the German leaders depending upon the Prussian troops, the flower of their army, to carry through to victory.

"The situation will be serious for a long time," Mr. Crowell declared. "The Germans have been going well, and only heavy rainstorms have prevented them from making further progress."

Turning his attention to the nation's much-discussed airplane program, Mr. Crowell said that there were more than 1,000 qualified American army fliers in France and that 1,000 machines had been procured from the French and Italians.

"When you hear of American soldiers defending themselves from German airplanes with their pistols, you need not believe it," the speaker said.

André Tardieu, French High Commissioner to the United States, addressing the conference this afternoon, said that to crush the German military machine allied unity must extend beyond military commands, that it must be applied to war supplies, to food, and to shipping.

"The first duty is national unity," said M. Tardieu. "Follow your chief. Act like one single man. Forget political struggles. We have done it; you will do it. The second duty is interallied unity. It has been effected as far as military command is concerned, but is not enough. The same unity must be truly and practically carried out for all other purposes, such as war supplies, food, shipping. This has not yet been done; it must be done. The third duty is the unity of feeling and understanding as to the conditions of victory."

France has been able to furnish the American forces with artillery, machine guns and airplanes, M. Tardieu said, and thus America has been allowed a sufficient length of time to organize and to start her own production along that line.

In telling of the sacrifices that France has made and is making the High Commissioner said that 1,300,000 French soldiers had been killed in action or died of wounds, and that another 1,000,000 had been maimed, invalided or captured.

AIRMEN BROKE UP GERMAN ATTACKS

shot one dead and an infantry quick-firer drove the rest to cover. Just the same, I never covered a hundred yards faster in my life with bullets buzzing around me like angry wasps.

Dashing French Attack.

"The French cheered in delight when I threw myself down among them unhurt, and I stayed with them till night and saw them make a counterattack that afternoon, when they advanced two kilometers. Though many of them had been fighting several days without rest, they charged forward in splendid style. All were supremely confident that they could beat the boche, and kept saying, 'Wait. You'll soon see the whole lot retreat.'

"Next morning I got another machine and began again as before."

In the last few weeks the Storks have accounted for a great number of Germans officially corroborated and nearly as many whose fall it has been impossible to check up.

ican engineers and their Canadian comrades in arms were holding a position, what appeared to be a British staff motor drove up. The driver was in the uniform of a British soldier, and a man in the tonneau was in the uniform of a British staff officer. The officer stepped out and asked for the commanding officer. He was taken to a Canadian officer nearby. The staff officer ordered the commander to retire four kilometers, saying that the Germans were pressing on both flanks, and he might be cut off.

For some reason the Canadian commander became suspicious. He had the staff officer searched, when the latter failed to produce his authority, and papers were found on him proving that he was a German officer. He and his chauffeur were immediately shot.

American engineer officers are said to have been present when this incident occurred.

SAILORS ARE TOLD OF PERSHING HONORS

MAY GET OVERTIME BONUS

AN ATLANTIC PORT, April 9.—The officers of the American steamship Woonsocket and such members of her crew as are still on board received the official commendation of General Pershing today for their voluntary part in expediting the military cargo at an American base port in France. They were appreciative of the recognition their work had brought, and they were especially pleased in that it came directly from General Pershing.

Besides this, the men have also the appreciation of the United States Shipping Board. The officers of the board were quick to express their satisfaction over the public recognition of the crew of the Woonsocket, for they believe that such notice will be a stimulus to the crews of other vessels in the Government service to do just a bit more than their articles call for in order to assist in the war.

There were forty-eight men on the last eastward trip, and many of them have been paid off and have sought service on other steamships. Some still remain to make other voyages on the Woonsocket. There was nothing extraordinary in the makeup of the crew which won General Pershing's praise. The really extraordinary thing about it all is that these men should show such a unanimous spirit of helpfulness.

There is no appropriation for rewarding such services, but it is probable that the Shipping Board may find some way to pay overtime bonuses to the men who really did the work that hastened the unloading of the vessel at a time when hours were important in getting supplies to the American Army.

"It is most gratifying to find men who will do more than is required of them," said Captain W. B. Baker of the Committee on Ship Control. "It is only this spirit which will enable us to put the Kaiser back where he belongs."

This is the first voyage of Captain McCarthy on the Woonsocket, and he came to her at the last minute to take the place of a skipper who is said to have been injured by a fall. Her company was what one of the shipping representatives of the Government termed a general mixed crew. It contained men of a dozen nationalities. In the engine room Ireland, Scotland, and Spain were represented.

A Representative Crew.

The crew was drawn from the country from Denver to New York, and some of the men whose names were signed to the ship's articles came from Finland, Norway, Canada, Panama, France, and Holland.

The order commending the crew of the Woonsocket came from General Pershing through the Navy Department and Major Gen. George W. Goethals, as Director of Storage and Traffic. It finally reached the men through the Shipping Board. The services for which the crew was commended were rendered while the vessel was in a French port. There was urgent need not only for getting the cargo ashore, but the vessel had sustained some minor damage that made repairs necessary. Instead of awaiting the usual course of events the men set to work getting the cargo from the hold, and while one shift was doing this others set about making repairs. In this way the crew saved a delay which, General Pershing said, amounted to about a week. Their act also saved thousands of dollars. General Pershing wrote:

"I recommend that the extraordinary amount of work and efficiency shown by this crew should, if possible, be made known generally in such a way as to secure emulation."

OUR SUBMARINES OFF GERMAN BASES

ONLY ONE HAD TO RETURN

Then Set Out Again and Weathered Fourth Storm—Some Driven Far from Course.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—In the face of bitter Winter gales, American submarines, primarily designed for operations off the home coasts, have crossed the Atlantic to engage in the common fight against German U-boats. They are now aiding allied naval forces, as are American destroyers and American naval airmen, and they have been in the war zone for some months.

Secretary Daniels revealed the fact that the submarines had gone "over there" in his address at Cleveland Saturday at a Liberty Loan celebration, but gave no details. It is now possible, however, to tell for the first time of the mid-Winter passage of the boats across the seas in the face of the most severe weather known in years. In the perilous passages, the best traditions of the service have been maintained.

The first submarines to leave got under way in early Winter. Arrangements for the trip were made without a hint appearing in the papers, and, in fact, until Secretary Daniels spoke no word of the participation of the underwater boats in the war against Germany had been published.

The navy had some experience with long-distance work with submarines on which to draw. Boats have been sent to the Philippines, to Hawaii, and to Panama, but always in mild seasons of the year and with plenty of time for precautionary steps.

This time, however, they were to go in Winter, and a terrible Winter at that, with the Atlantic in its ugliest mood. The steps taken to get them across cannot be disclosed. But the fact that the department has no disaster to record is pointed to as proof of their sufficiency.

Officers and men of the submarines faced hard days as they put out. Cramped in narrow quarters and with storms in prospect they steered to sea with complete confidence in themselves and their boats. A laconic report of uneventful voyages bore out that confidence.

In mid-December others got started. While it was fair on sailing day, ahead of the submarines a 100-mile gale was brewing. Into it they plowed, rolling and tumbling. Details of the commander's reports have not been made public, but among the crews undoubtedly were men who recalled the first employment of the submarines at manoeuvers, when seasickness all but put the flotilla out of commission.

But there was no faltering. The boats were going to the front in real warfare this time. Even when towlines parted in some cases, unknown to the tugs and accompanying craft, the submarines battled forward alone. A majority of them reached their destination under their own power, ready for duty.

Some of the boats were driven far from their course. They showed up at different ports, but promptly put to sea again and reached their station.

One boat was the hard-luck vessel of the lot. Separated from the flotilla in the first storm and its compasses out of order, it turned homeward, only to strike two more gales in quick succession. However, it made port successfully and undamaged. With new fuel and supplies aboard and with a man or two, worn out by the long struggle with the elements, replaced, in a few days the boat put to sea again. It went through that time, despite a fourth gale it encountered.

Little has been said of the work of the British and French submarines in the U-boat hunt. They are playing a definite part, however, and lurking close to enemy bases. There has been encounters between submarines, some of which read like fiction. The service has been described as a trying one, for which men of courage and daring are needed. It is in this work, presumably, that the American submarines are engaged.

Advertising Limited by McAdoo to Actual Needs of Public.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Railroad publicity and advertising will be limited to information needed by the public, under orders issued today by Director General McAdoo.

"The custom of exploiting train service, pleasure or health resorts, and the like must be discontinued until further notice," said the order. "All forms of general advertising, such as pictures, calendars, will maps, &c., must also be discontinued. Newspaper and other advertising must be confined to the giving of necessary information to the public.

"Timetable folders must be standardized, and distribution carefully checked to avoid waste. All advertising of luxurious trains, claims of superior service, and extraneous matter of every description must be eliminated and the folders made purely informative."

To work out standardized time tables a committee of three passenger agents from each of the three operating districts has been appointed, with A. L. Craig, General Passenger Agent of the Chicago Great Western, as Chairman.

Orders also went to the railroads today from Director General McAdoo to curtail expenditures by discontinuing many city freight and passenger ticket offices, or consolidating ticket offices, and by abandoning passenger travel solicitation and "off line" traffic offices.

Wilson to Address D. A. R.

$44,000,000 LOAN TO GREECE

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Greece will receive a loan of $44,000,000 from the United States as soon as the Greek Parliament has passed the necessary authorizing legislation, it was announced at the Treasury today.

The credit was arranged in Paris by Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and American representative on the Interallied Council. It was found necessary for the Greek Government to obtain special legislation before finally concluding an agreement.

Greece is the last of the allied belligerents in Europe to get a loan from the United States. A credit of $6,666,000 for Rumania was arranged several months ago, and a payment of $5,000,000 was made through Russia. Overthrow of the Kerensky Government prevented its delivery, and it was returned to the Treasury here. In view of the indefinite situation on the Rumanian front, the status of this loan has not been definitely determined.

Amends Draft to Exclude Neutrals.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The House today amended the draft law to exclude subjects of neutral countries who have declared their intention of becoming citizens of the United States. The measure goes to the Senate. Drafting of neutral subjects has been the cause of many protests to the State Department on the ground that it violated treaty agreements.

CREEL DENOUNCED IN HOUSE AND SENATE

Longworth Calls Unpreparedness Speech Most Unpatriotic Utterance of the War.

DEMANDS HIS RESIGNATION

Senator Johnson Declares Creel Is Not Fit to Participate in Prosecution of the War.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, was denounced in the Senate and the House of Representatives today for his statement yesterday before the National Conference of American Lecturers, that he would always be proud that this country had made no preparation for the war until President Wilson delivered the speech that made war inevitable. Senator Hiram Johnson of California and Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania were Mr. Creel's Senate critics, and Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio attacked him in the House, demanding his resignation.

In his speech Representative Longworth called Mr. Creel's statement of pride that America was unprepared before the war, the most "unpatriotic, un-American sentiment that has been uttered by an American citizen since this war began." He said that it would "delight only the Hindenburgs and those here who wished ill to America."

After he had read the extract of Mr. Creel's speech delivered yesterday, Mr. Longworth launched into the attack, and was greeted with prolonged applause, in which some Democrats joined.

"Let me read the most monstrous utterance any American citizen has uttered since we entered the war," said Mr. Longworth, as he quoted the extract from the speech by Mr. Creel before the Conference of Lecturers. "Can you believe that any American, especially a man connected with the Government, could have said this?"

"Read it; what is it?" shouted a Democratic member.

"I will read what Mr. Creel said. Here it is, quoted from an afternoon Washington newspaper: 'I will be proud to my dying day that my country was inadequately prepared when it entered the conflict. To have been prepared would have given the lie to everything we ourselves believed in and to our self-avowed position before the world.'

Sloane Calls It Damnable.

"I ask you to let that sink into your minds for a moment," added Mr. Longworth. "I never thought the day would come when a man who calls himself an American citizen, particularly when he holds a position of high importance in this Government, would publicly proclaim such sentiments as that."

"Who was it said that damnable thing?" asked Representative Sloane of Nebraska, who had entered the Chamber while Mr. Longworth was reading.

"Mr. Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information," answered the Ohio member. "I know of no instance up to now when the most craven pacifist ever went half so far. I have heard men since this war began apologize for our failure to prepare in some degree for the inevitable. I have heard some men condone this failure as a political necessity, but never before have I heard an American boast of it and glory in it.

"That is fine news, my colleagues, to send to our boys at the front. That is a message which will cheer the hearts of our brave allies. General Foch, in supreme command of the allied forces, no doubt will delight and glory with Mr. Creel upon the fact that America entered this war entirely unprepared. That brave Belgian King and General Joffre, who months ago came to us and begged for men and cannon; General Haig, and the Generals commanding the Italian armies will, of course, join Mr. Creel in his patriotic delight that this country is in the least possible degree able to render efficient assistance to the Allies in this greatest emergency that the world ever saw. And it is the emergency of today, my colleagues. It is the emergency of this particular drive that is now going on and not of something that may happen in the far distant future."

"Does not the gentleman think that von Hindenburg would also appreciate that sentiment?" asked Representative Denison of Illinois.

"I was about to enunciate that precise sentiment," Mr. Longworth replied. "The only individuals abroad to whom such a message will bring cheer are the commanders of the armies of the Central Powers, and the only men at home to whom it will bring cheer are those that wish ill to America.

"The only men that have a right to rejoice in the fact that America entered the war unprepared are the Kaiser, the Emperor Charles, von Hindenburg, von Ludendorff, and all their murderous crew."

Representative Madden of Illinois suggested that men who attended the conference held for the purpose of preparing lecturers for the Liberty Loan campaign would take, as a caption for their speeches, "Unpreparedness."

Would Censor Creel's Utterances.

"I sincerely hope there is no such ulterior motive behind this," Mr. Longworth continued. "I say that no such unpatriotic, un-American statement has been uttered by any American citizen since this war began. I repeat that the only men who have the right to join in this expression of delight at our failure to be at all prepared for this war are the Hindenburgs and Ludendorffs abroad and the I. W. W. and Bolsheviki at home.

"This was a peculiarly sinister utterance to go forth at such a time as this, this derision of the principle for which our late colleague, Augustus P. Gardner, a short time ago laid down his life. I hope to suggest that a very efficient censorship should be placed hereafter upon any utterances of this gentleman, and that future utterances on his part should come from him in a private capacity. This speech should receive the attention of those high in authority."

"If he uttered this in his private capacity, as a citizen of the United States, he might have been arrested, might he not?" asked Mr. Madden.

"I think very probably," Mr. Longworth answered. "He ought to have been. What Mr. Creel may think as Mr. Creel is a matter of absolutely no importance, but what he says in public in his capacity as Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, is of the highest importance, because the American people have the right to believe, to presume, that he represents the views of those higher up. Is it the view of those in high authority that it is a just cause for boasting that this country went into this war totally unprepared, with the necessary corollary that on the day this war is over we must at once reduce ourselves to a condition where we shall be totally unprepared to enforce a just and lasting peace? If that is not the view of those in high authority, then Mr. Creel should resign or be removed at once."

"Perhaps," suggested Representative Greene of Vermont, "Mr. Creel took in view the celebrated address made in this House when men who were advocating preparedness were told not to be nervous or hysterical."

"If the gentleman from Vermont is alluding to what I think he is, that same gentleman the other day made a fine appeal to the American people for 'force, force, force,' and yet on the very next day the Chairman of the Committee on Public Information advocates 'cowardice, cowardice, cowardice.'"

"I read this morning the language of the distinguished gentleman who presides over the Bureau of Public Information, Mr. George Creel. I read he stated, as has been adverted to before upon the floor during this debate, that he 'thanked God that this nation was not prepared for war when we entered the war a year ago.'

"I can imagine and you can imagine, too, the answer of the fathers and mothers of the land whose sons have gone over the sea today and are in the trenches of France with six brief months of preparation against a lifetime of preparation of their foes. These fathers and mothers answer just as you and I, I am sure, answer this remarkable utterance of a 'duly constituted authority of the United States.' We answer him, 'If you thank God our boys were unprepared when they entered this war, we feel you are not fit at this particular time to participate in the prosecution of this war in any regard.'

"Now the pith and point, as applied to this bill, is what? Yesterday a 'duly constituted authority of the United States Government' thanked God we were not prepared a year ago."

Senator Wolcott challenged Senator Johnson's statement that Mr. Creel was a "duly constituted" official of the Government. Senator Johnson read from the executive order appointing him.

"If you questioned validity of that appointment after this bill went into effect," added Senator Johnson, "you would subject yourself to imprisonment for twenty years."

Senator Penrose said Mr. Creel's utterance "betrays such a lack of good common sense that it is worthy of nothing but contempt."

"I do not see," said the Pennsylvania Senator, "why we should permit men like Mr. Creel, whose scurrilous and defamatory utterances on the Constitution, were read in this body a few day ago, to be holding office, and publishing a publicity chronicle, when he is smeared all over with treason."

SHORT WEIGHT FOR NAVY.

Provision Merchant and Three Employes Are Found Guilty.

John Fitter, a provision merchant of 120 Bridge Street, Brooklyn, and three of his employes were found guilty in the United States District Court in Brooklyn yesterday for conspiracy to defraud the Government by delivering supplies of short weight and short count to the navy yard in Brooklyn and the navy barracks in City Park. It was testified that Fitter and his employes had caused the Government a loss of about $30,000 in the few months their contract had been running.

George B. Goodman, a yeoman in the navy, and Edward Will, the chief commissary steward at the barracks, also were named in the indictment, but they gave the evidence that resulted in the conviction of the four civilians and were turned over to the navy authorities for trial by court-martial. The conspiracy was discovered by E. R. Springer, a clerk in the Paymaster Corps, who reported to his superiors. The employes convicted were Moses Praeger, Joseph Katz, and Henry Wittohn. Judge Edwin Garvin will sentence the men on Thursday. The penalty is a fine of $1,000 or not more than two years in prison, or both.

WOMEN SEEKING RECRUITS.

Mayor's Committee Will Hold Meetings at Public Library.

The Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense will open at the Fortieth Street entrance of the Public Library today a series of recruiting meetings for the Twenty-seventh Division, which is in need of 3,700 men. Mrs. Penrhyn Stanlaws has charge of the recruiting tent at the library and she will be assisted by prominent speakers and society women. The Rev. Dr. W. Norman Guthrie of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie will speak today. A program has been arranged which includes the Highland Bagpipers.

At a luncheon and meeting of the Advisory Board of the United States Junior Naval Reserve at the Bankers Club yesterday afternoon, resolutions were adopted on the death of Commodore Jacob W. Miller, Chairman of the board. Dr. William T. Hornaday, the President, in outlining the work of the Junior Naval Reserve, said:

"In the last two years we have trained over 8,000 boys for the navy and merchant marine. The service flag for the New York City training station alone shows 276 stars, most of these boys going into the navy." Among those at the luncheon were Felix Warburg, A. M. McGray, Edgar B. Lothbridge, J. P. Tams, William S. Kies, P. H. W. Ross, Clarence S. Weller, W. L. Finch, Percival Kuhne, and E. A. Oldham.

UPHOLD PUNISHMENT FOR SWIFT COMPANY

Packers Will Not Be Permitted to Deal In Eggs Here for 30 Days.

$3,750 PROFIT TO RED CROSS

Federal Food Administration Also Suspends Zinn & Co. for Seven Days.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The United States Food Administration ruled today that Swift & Co. must suspend all dealings in eggs in New York City for thirty days from midnight of April 10, and that Zinn & Co. of New York, brokers, through whom Swift & Co. purchased twelve carloads of cold storage eggs at excessive prices, must accept the same ruling for a period of seven days. It is further ordered that both corporations shall donate to the American Red Cross, Liberty bonds equivalent to the unjustified amounts involved in the transactions. In the case of Swift & Co. this amounts to $3,000 and for Zinn & Co. $750.

The charge against the big packing concerns was brought by the Federal Food Board of New York. An appeal was taken to the United States Food Administration, and the cases were reviewed here. This official announcement was made tonight by the Food Administration:

"There is no evidence that Swift & Co. were guilty of profiteering; but while they may not themselves have been profiteers, they bought twelve carloads of storage eggs from a profiteer at a price which they knew gave the seller an unreasonable profit, and with full knowledge that the Food Administration had ruled that the profit, and therefore the price, was unreasonable. By making the purchase they assisted the seller to profiteer, and, although they made no excessive profit themselves, they were the medium by which the excessive charge of the seller was passed along to the consumer.

"They evidently thought that the responsibility was upon the party who made the excessive charge, and not upon the party who paid it; but in as clear a case as this we shall not hesitate to penalize both parties.

"We therefore approve the findings of the Federal Food Board of New York and order Swift & Co. to suspend all dealings in eggs in New York City for a thirty-day period, beginning midnight, April 10, 1918, with such exceptions only as the Federal Food Board may deem necessary in the interest of the public. They are further ordered to apply to the purchase of Liberty bonds of the present issue a sum equal to the margin between the price paid for the eggs and their average selling price, without allowance for expense, and to turn over the Liberty bonds to the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross, furnishing to the Federal Food Board the chapter's receipt for the same, accompanied by the usual certificate that this contribution is not to affect in any way their future contributions to patriotic or charitable purposes.

"A copy of the foregoing judgment and order is to be posted conspicuously, under the direction of the Federal Food Board, upon the entrance of their place of business during the said thirty days.

"Zinn & Co. of New York City were the brokers through whom Swift & Co. purchased twelve carloads of storage eggs from Wood & Co. of Moulton, Iowa. The price paid leaves to Wood & Co. an excessive profit. The cost and reasonable profit margin upon eggs of this character had been the subject of much discussion by the egg trade of Chicago, Boston, and New York, in conjunction with the Food Administration. The results of this discussion and the rulings of the Food Administration were perfectly well known to all parties. Zinn & Co. made no excessive profit themselves, and it is evident that they felt that this fact relieved them from responsibility.

"We approve the findings of the Federal Food Board in this case, but prefer to change slightly the form of the penalty. Instead of thirty days' suspension from dealing in eggs, we direct a suspension from dealing in eggs in New York City of seven days beginning midnight April 10, 1918, but add that Zinn & Co. are to apply to the purchase of Liberty bonds of the present issue a sum equal to the full amount of their commission on the transaction and to turn over these bonds to the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross."

"The Swift & Co. policy is to observe all the regulations of the Food Administration. Any violation by the Swift & Co. of New York organization was entirely an unintentional offense, in that we paid too much for eggs. We are not charged with making excessive profits. We were profiteered against, and the price we paid was not above the prevailing market. We bought the eggs to take care of our trade and not to make an excessive profit."

SUSPENDS 19 BAKERIES.

Food Board Likely to Punish Forty Other Establishments.

As a warning to bakers who are inclined to disregard the wheat regulations of the United States Food Administration, the Federal Food Board yesterday suspended the business of nineteen bakery establishments for three days. In addition to these cases, there were forty others brought to the attention of the Bureau of Complaints yesterday. Heerings will be begun today on about 200 complaints received against bakers of the city during the last week. The bakers who were suspended yesterday were:

Frank Gurbasan, 16 Monroe Street, April 12, 13, 14.

The Federal Food Board announced yesterday that the need of wheat for army and navy purposes was so great that an even more drastic measure than a three-day suspension would be invoked against the bakers if they persisted in disregarding the rule requiring a 20 per cent. substitute in the making of bread.

'CANNOT IGNORE' BOLO'S REVELATIONS

DRAMATIC NIGHT INTERVIEW

Visit to His Cell Promptly Followed by Countermanding of Death Arrangements.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 9.—The respits of Bolo Pacha on Sunday evening, almost at the very moment when his execution was being fixed for the next morning, has been ever since its announcement almost the sole topic of conversation in Paris and has eclipsed interest even in the pending resumption of the great battle itself.

It now becomes known that the respite was granted in exceptionally dramatic circumstances which might have been part of a modern motion-picture plot.

Sunday evening after Albert Salle, Bolo's counsel, had gone to the Elysée Palace and made an appeal to President Poincaré for mercy, the newspapers were informed that the appeal had been refused, and that the execution would take place "very shortly."

Meanwhile, the military authorities, in whose hands the arrangements lay, had arranged that Bolo should be shot at 6:15 Monday morning at the fort of Vincennes.

After his final interview with the President, however, M. Salle went back to the Santé Prison to inform Bolo of the result of his effort.

M. Salle is one of the best known men at the Paris bar. He was officially appointed by the court to defend Bolo, and it is known that he undertook the task with great reluctance. No fault can be found with him for the devotion with which he has carried out his unwelcome task, and probably one of his most unpleasant moments was when he had to tell Bolo that all hope must be abandoned.

What took place at this interview is unknown, but after an earnest talk of a half hour's duration M. Salle hastily left the prison and went to see M. Ignace. Under Secretary for Military Justice, and told him that Bolo wished to make an important statement in the interest of justice.

In the circumstances, as was natural, the autheritles received the request with considerable skepticism, but toward 8 o'clock the same evening Lieutenant Jousselyn arrived at the prison and was immediately admitted to the prisoner's cell. Bolo was in a state of prostration and was lying on the bed, but as soon as Lieutenant Jousselyn entered he leaped to his feet and eagerly asserted his wish to make a statement.

Lieutenant Jousselyn and his clerk sat down at a small table in the cell, and for nearly an hour the condemned man dictated a carefully worded statement. The Lieutenant at first doubted Bolo's good faith, but as the prisoner began to reveal fact after fact and name after name he quickly excited the liveliest interest in his auditors.

When Bolo had finished speaking Lieutenant Jousselyn decided that his statement was sufficiently important to justify him in reporting it immediately to the judicial authorities, and by the latter's orders steps were promptly taken to countermand the arrangements for the execution. Telephone messages were sent to Vincennes and the execution was postponed indefinitely.

Yesterday morning a conference of the judicial authorities was held, and steps were decided upon for the purpose of verifying the statements made by Bolo. The same afternoon Lieutenant Jousselyn again saw Bolo in his cell and took down further details from his lips. Other interviews between Jousselyn and Bolo have taken place this morning and this afternoon.

So far no word has been allowed to leak out as to the nature of Bolo's revelations, but it is significant that M. Ignace asserts that Bolo has made statements of such gravity "that we cannot and must not ignore them."

The revelations are now generally regarded as much more important than they were first believed to be. Judicially Bolo's case is especially interesting from the fact that never within living memory has a prisoner been respited on the eve of execution for the purpose of making a statement of this nature.

ILLINOIS GETS AID IN CURBING SEDITION

Federal Agents to be Sent to State in Response to Governor Lowden's Appeal.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Federal cooperation in suppressing disloyalty and disorder in Illinois was promised today by Attorney General Gregory in response to a request from Governor Lowden. Special agents of the Department of Justice will be assigned to advise with State officials and aid in the conduct of investigations.

In announcing the Attorney General's decision, department officials let it be known that he was prepared to lend similar assistance to other States desiring it. Without new legislation, officials say, they are almost powerless to deal with disloyal utterances, the suppression of which they think is essential to the prevention of disorders, but the Federal agents are expected to accomplish something in co-operation with State authorities.

Lieutenant Governor John G. Oglesby of Illinois had long conferences today with Mr. Gregory and John Lord O'Brian, special assistant to the Attorney General for war work. He told them Federal aid was imperative to check increasing instances of mob violence against disloyalists, particularly in the mining districts of Southern Illinois.

While the recent lynching of a German at Collinsville, Ill., probably hastened the decision of the Illinois officials to seek Federal support, it is understood that any part the Department of Justice agents may play in investigating this particular case will be only incidental to a general plan of co-operation.

The Attorney General's representatives will report to Governor Lowden at Springfield for preliminary conferences before undertaking their work. There a general program probably will be mapped out.

BARES BERLIN ORDER FOR CIVIL WAR HERE

Dr. Sperry of Syracuse Produces Message Sent Out in 1915, Directing Disorder.

SOUGHT TO GERMANIZE US

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Professor Earl Sperry of Syracuse University, who for some months, in a Governmental capacity, has been investigating German propaganda in the United States, testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee today that the "German octopus" as he called it, had plotted to fasten its tentacles upon America and establish Germanism everywhere. Among other things, he said, the German Foreign Office had agents in Mexico to stir up war between that country and the United States.

The witness produced a document, obtained during his service with the Government which was promulgated by the German Foreign Office, and communicated to German Ambassadors, Ministers, and Consuls in neutral countries, on Feb. 23, 1915, revealing a plot to incite strikes, explosions, and even civil war, in the interest of Germany. This document, of which Dr. Sperry said there was no question as to its authenticity, was in the nature of a cable dispatch, and it read as follows:

"It is brought to your knowledge that in the countries where you are accredited that there have been founded special bureaus for organizing propaganda in the countries of the coalition at war with Germany. The propaganda will have for its aim the inception of social movements, accompanied by strikes, revolutionary explosions, separatist movements, and civil war, as well as an agitation in favor of disarmament and a cessation of this bloody war."

The Foreign Office instructions, Dr. Sperry said, gave incontrovertible proof that Germany wanted to embroil neutral nations in difficulties that would keep them out of the war against the Prussian autocracy. Dr. Sperry said the German Foreign Office worked through many organizations to spread its propaganda in the United States. Among these, he said, were the American Embassy Conference, the Friends of Peace, the American Neutrality League, the American Independence Union, the American Truth Society, and the Laborers' National Peace Council, the latter of which, Dr. Sperry said, was financed by Fritz von Rintelen, now in the custody of the Government. Von Rintelen had a fund of $500,000 at his disposal to influence legislators and organizations. Dr. Sperry declared, and he spent more than $300,000 of it in an effort to stir up labor agitation against America's war preparations. Dr. Sperry said that a large part of the money used by von Rintelen was spent through Jeremiah O'Leary.

Meant to Coerce Us.

"It will be noticed," Dr. Sperry explained, "that the German Government includes among its military measures separatist movements. The German-American movement in the United States, of which the heart and centre was the National German-American Alliance, was such a separatist movement. Its military significance lay in this, that in case of war between Germany and the United States the organized German-Americans were to persuade or coerce the Government of the United States to adopt policies favorable to Germany.

"The events in the United States since the war began prove that this general plan of the German Government has been carried out here. There have been formed at least six organizations which aim to serve the German Government by bringing pressure direct or indirect upon Congress.

"The American Embargo Conference is typical of these organizations. It was financed, as is proved by its cash books, by leading German-Americans of the Central Western cities. During the eleven months following June of 1915 it spent $57,000 for the purpose of influencing Congress.

"While the country has had much in the past to indicate the real aim of these organizations that sprang up here since 1914, their activities gain new and added significance when they are considered in the light of the dispatch from the German Foreign Office to the German diplomats in nautral countries."

Dr. Sperry testified that William Randolph Hearst bestirred himself in 1907 in an effort to establish an international German-American alliance, with the object of bringing about a close community of spirit between the United States and Germany. He produced a letter written by Mr. Hearst in German in October, 1907, to the German-American Alliance Conference in New York, offering to defray the expenses of ten or twelve delegates, to be appointed by the President of the Alliance, to go to Germany.

Mr. Hearst's Offer.

In the letter Mr. Hearst wrote:

The time has now come for the German-American National Alliance to broaden the field of its activities and to extend its hand to Germany so that both countries may go forward side by side on the path of progress. With this purpose in view it is desired to found an international German-American alliance, with a branch in Berlin, in order to promote an understanding of German art and German ideals in America, as well as the study of German social and economic relations and the most cordial political relations between the two countries. It is therefore proposed that this convention authorize the President to name a delegation of ten or twelve leading citizens who have this matter at heart in order during the year 1908 to go to Germany and to act in the interests of this great project.

Mr. Hearst promises to co-operate with this delegation and through his eight papers in five cities to make its purposes and its goal known to the Government and the people of the United States. In order further to meet the costs of this movement Mr. Hearst offers to pay all the expenses of the above-mentioned delegation, including such public functions as it participates in while in Europe.

Achtungsvoll, (very respectfully,)

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

"It was decided," Dr. Sperry said, "that the invitation should be considered at the following annual convention.

"The members of this convention were taken at Mr. Hearst's expense to visit the Germanic Museum at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., and they were his guests while there. During their stay the President, Dr. O. J. Hexamer, sent the following telegram to the German Emperor:

"'The National German-American Alliance assembled in the Germanic Museum at Harvard sends cordial greetings with the hope for a permanent flourishing of friendly relations between the old and the new Fatherlands.'

"To this cablegram, the Emperor replied as follows:

"'I heartily thank the National German-American Alliance assembled in the Germanic Museum at Harvard for its friendly and patriotic greetings.

"'WILHELM, Imperator, Rex.'"

The German propaganda, Dr. Sperry said, "was worked through churches, both Catholic and Protestant, in the United States.

"Church societies were at work instilling ideas of Germanism in communities," said the witness. "The propagandists also used the schools. There are 400 German schools in the United States."

ARREST EXPORTER AS ENEMY ALIEN

MANY DOCUMENTS SEIZED

Kuhlmann, the Authorities Suspect, Has Long Worked Through an Emissary in Switzerland.

With the arrest of Gustave Kuhlmann, General Manager for the import and export house of Crayen & Co. of 81 New Street, the Federal authorities believed yesterday that they had finally found a secret channel through which Germany has been able to obtain information concerning economic and commercial conditions in this country. Kuhlmann was taken in custody by officials of the Department of Justice yesterday and locked in the Tombs as a dangerous enemy alien, there to remain pending an investigation of evidence tending to show a violation of the Trading with the Enemy act.

In Kuhlmann's possession the Government authorities found documents and papers which, in their opinion, indicated that he was accustomed to supply Germany with information concerning commercial conditions here, through an emissary in Lucerne, Switzerland, whose real name was Ludwig Fahl, but whose assumed name was Louis Farley.

Under the name Farley, and under the guise of being an American citizen, the officials have discovered that this emissary was able to have remittances of 2,000 and 3,000 francs transmitted to him by Kuhlmann through the American Consul in Lucerne. According to the Federal authorities, Kuhlmann, himself posing as an American citizen, used the name George Coleman, and carried on all his secret correspondence under that name.

The officials of the Department of Justice intend to make a close investigation of the firm of Crayen & Co. It was said yesterday that the head of the firm, George A. Crayen, was at the present time a resident of Germany, and his partner and brother, William Crayen, was established somewhere in Switzerland.

Before the war the firm was an importer and exporter of novelties. Since the war it has turned its operations to surgical wares and neo-salvarsan. Kuhlmann is 40 years old and lived in Brooklyn.

The officials of the Department of Justice interested themselves at once in the papers and documents found in his possession not only for the facts that they might reveal concerning the transmission of information by German agents in this country to their home Government, but also for the identities they might possibly reveal of persons who had long been under suspicion as being active in German propaganda.

Kuhlmann himself made no statement yesterday. It is suspected by the authorities that he has been sending information to Germany through Switzerland ever since the United States entered the war. Up to a late hour yesterday the collection of evidence against Kuhlmann had not been completed, but within a day or two the Department of Justice expects to be in a position to say definitely whether Kuhlmann will be prosecuted under a charge of violating the act which prohibits trading with the enemy.

390 SHIPS CARRY MEN AND SUPPLIES

United States Has Been Able to Put 2,762,605 Tons Into War Service.

TOTAL WILL GROW STEADILY

Japan's Ships Will Be Added This Summer, Making It Over 3,000,000 Tons.

ROUTING MORE EFFICIENT

Interallied Board's Work Has Added 20 Per Cent. in a Month—U-Boat Menace No Longer Feared.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—By restricting imports, withdrawing ships from the less necessary trade channels, and obtaining neutral tonnage by agreement the United States has been able to put 2,762,605 tons of shipping into the transatlantic service to carry men and munitions to France. Of this 2,365,344 tons are under American registry, the remainder beings ships operated by private interests and neutral tonnage. There are in all 390 ships, of which 322 are of American registry.

It was said today that the shipping situation, from the viewpoint of the United States, was more favorable than at any time since the nation entered the war. The tonnage now in service includes only a small part of the 500,000 or more tons of Dutch ships which were requisitioned. It is believed that the 3,000,000-ton mark will be reached when all of the Dutch shipping available for overseas service is in use.

To this tonnage will be added gradually the 250,000 tons which Japan has promised during the Summer months and the ships now under construction in this country which are nearing completion. Later Japan will add another 200,000 tons or more which is to be built.

All of the shipping now available to the United States is being routed and loaded by the Interallied Ship Control Committee of which P. A. S. Franklin is Chairman. The increased efficiency which has been obtained by this committee during the last thirty days, it is said, has added 20 per cent. to the service given by the fleet or the equivalent of 400,000 in figures of tonnage, over the February service.

Reports received from the shipyards lately have not been unfavorable, and it is believed that the April deliveries will set a new record, despite the delays in supplies and transportation troubles.

Apparently there is a general feeling of optimism over the situation and a conviction that the fleet available for transatlantic service will be gradually increased despite the best efforts of the German submarines. Barring some disaster in the shipyards it seems positive that the point has been reached where Germany cannot hope to cut down the total amount of tonnage which the United States is now able to use in transit to Europe and must instead accept the verdict that the fleet will steadily grow in proportions.

The Ship Control Committee also has the power to route tonnage under the control of Great Britain and the other allied nations the tonnage of which is not given in the figures quoted above. Every energy is being put forward to add to the efficiency of this tonnage as well as by providing better facilities for loading and unloading and a system of routing which will put an end to delays which have proved serious in the past.

FINDS 'APACHE' BAND HERE.

Five Alleged Members Are Questioned by District Attorney.

The District Attorney's campaign against the sale of liquor to soldiers and sailors was interrupted yesterday by the discovery by Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith of an interesting novelty of the underworld in a band of "Apaches," who came here direct from Paris. This discovery was due to a young woman taken in the raids on Sunday morning. She said that she was a Belgian, had been in Liége during the attack on that city, had escaped into France, and made her way into this country with an "Apache" who has held her in fear of her life ever since. Five alleged "Apaches" were taken to the District Attorney's office to be questioned after the girl told her story, and were detained overnight at Police Headquarters. Assistant District Attorney Smith said the men are suspected of several thefts and hold-ups. If they are found to be French citizens, they may be deported to France for military service.

District Attorney Swann declared yesterday that his campaign against resorts east of Broadway, between Forty-fifth and Fifty-fifth Streets would be continued until he was satisfied that all places there selling liquor to men in uniform had been closed. Judge Swann said:

"Conditions in this city are better than they were before Commissioner Enright took charge. He is a fine executive, and has made good progress in bettering conditions. We are combating vice and gambling, which grew and flourished under the preceding administration. We have had the full co-operation of the police."

TRANSIT EMPLOYES URGE 6-CENT FARE

Ask Service Board to Grant It So Interborough Can Pay a Higher Wage.

TOLD TO SEE THE MAYOR

Cordiality Between President Shonts and Officers of Employes' Brotherhood.

Representatives of the Brotherhood of New York Railways Company Employes Association, led by T. M. Fazakerley, the association's President, called on Chairman Straus of the Public Service Commission yesterday and asked him to help the employes get an increase in pay when the present agreement with the company expires on Aug. 31. This association was organized during the long strike of the surface railroad employes in 1916, and it was so fair in its efforts to reach an adjustment of the difficulties at that time that its relations with the company and with Theodore P. Shonts, the company's President, became very cordial.

In his suggestion to the Mayor that all of the surface and rapid transit lines in the city be permitted to increase the fare to 6 cents, Mr. Shonts said that in September the company would be called upon to increase wages, but there was no intimation in yesterday's talk with Mr. Straus that the committee had previously discussed the matter with Mr. Shonts or that the committee waited upon Mr. Straus, and will probably wait later upon the Board of Estimate, at Mr. Shonts's suggestion. At any rate the matter of more wages has been transferred to the Mayor and to the other members of the Board of Estimate, and for the present is safely out of the hands of Mr. Shonts.

Mr. Fazakerly issued a statement in which he said his association had no intention of not keeping the agreement made two years ago with the company, that with the war came an additional burden upon the employes, and that the company had also to carry a much heavier load than formerly.

The committee announced its intention of taking up with the Mayor and the Board of Estimate the matter of a modification of the company's franchise. The Mayor, in letters to Mr. Shonts, has clearly intimated that he was unalterably opposed to any increase in fares.

FORCED LABOR BILL PASSED

One of Sixty-Odd Measures Put Through by Assembly.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 9.—The Assembly in a seven-hour session today passed sixty-odd bills, including the bill of Assemblyman Cowee of Rensselaer County providing for requisitioning by the Governor of the labor of able-bodied males between 18 and 60 years who are not engaged in a lawful and useful occupation. The bill requires the Governor to designate by proclamation the industries and occupations affected on or before June 1 next. All men subject to its provisions must register with the Sheriff. The State Industrial Commission is to requisition men as needed.

Assemblyman McElligott's bill making disloyal utterances during the war a misdemeanor was recommitted on motion of Majority Leader Adler. Objection was made to the form of the bill.

Senator Argetsinger's bill moving primary day two weeks ahead by placing it on the ninth Tuesday before election day and providing that balloting may be held by soldiers within twenty days, instead of ten days, prior to the general election was passed. Other changes are made in the election laws to facilitate taking of the soldier vote.

The Assembly passed the Drug Committee's bill to regulate the sale and distribution of habit-forming drugs. A Department of Control is created, to be headed by a Commissioner, named by the Governor for a six-year term, at $6,000 a year.

By a vote of 188 to 22, the Assembly passed the Welsh bill requiring the Military Training Commission to furnish boys over 16 years with certificates of enrollment for military training. No boy between 16 and 19 may attend a public or private school or be employed without such a certificate unless exempted by the commission.

DEFEAT IN SENATE FOR WEST SIDE BILL

But Ottinger Measure Will Be Brought Up Again for Final Battle.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 9.—Denounced as a "grab," and an attempt on the part of the New York Central to "steal" priceless property on the North River waterfront, the Ottinger bill, which provides for a commission of nine to reach a settlement of outstanding differences between New York City and the railroad company in connection with the proposed west side terminal improvement, was defeated in the Senate today by three votes short of the required Constitutional majority of twenty-six.

The action of the Senate, however, is not final, and undoubtedly the Ottinger bill will figure in another fight before the end of the week, when the legislative session is scheduled to adjourn sine die. Senator Ottinger, immediately the result of the roll call had been announced, moved for a reconsideration of the vote and that this motion be temporarily tabled. Minority Leader Robert F. Wagner, who had led the fight against the bill, clamored for immediate action on the motion, but was defeated when three Republican Senators—Lockwood, Murphy, and Thompson—who had voted with the Democrats against the bill, voted with Senator Ottinger on the motion. This will enable the bill to be brought up at any time, and advocates of the measure say they have succeeded in obtaining a sufficient number of votes to insure its passage.

After disposing of the Ottinger bill the Senate by unanimous vote concurred in an Assembly bill appropriating $100,000 for the expenditures of the Harbor Commission appointed by Governor Whitman to act in concert with a similar commission from New Jersey in devising ways and means for the improvement of New York Harbor facilities.

In amended form and under an emergency message from the Governor, the Fearon bill to provide two days for local option elections in thirty-nine cities of the State passed the Senate tonight. Provision is also made in the amendments submitted by Senator J. Henry Walters of Syracuse for police protection of the ballots over night. Appointment of two watchers each by the drys and wets is permissible. The bill goes back to the Assembly, where favorable action is expected tomorrow. Governor Whitman will sign it immediately.

GOT LICHNOWSKY LETTERS.

Beerfelde Said to Have Sent Copies to Crown Prince and Ludendorff.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 9.—The Lichnowsky disclosures continue to be much discussed by the German press. The Vorwärts denies the report that Captain Beerfelde was arrested for distributing copies of the Lichnowsky letters, and says that Beerfelde, who was decorated with the Iron Cross, returned from the war owing to his pacifist inclinations, and that last Fall he first learned of the Lichnowsky letters at the house of Geheimrat Witting.

The paper declares that Beerfelde without Witting's knowledge had several copies printed and sent to the Crown Prince, General Ludendorff, and well-known leaders with the idea of propagating the truth. He was then arrested on the charge of disobeying orders of his senior, but afterward was proved not guilty and liberated.

Beerfelde then brought an action against his senior officer with serious accusations, and was thereupon again arrested. The paper declares his arrest was not on the charge of circulating the Lichnowsky letters.

TO MELT $250,000,000 INTO SILVER BULLION

Use of Treasury Reserve to Pay Trade Balances Proposed to Congress.

HAS BACKING OF McADOO

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Melting into bullion of not more than 250,000,000 silver dollars now in the Treasury for sale and export to pay trade balances and repurchase of silver at $1 an ounce are proposed in an Administration bill introduced today by Senator Pittman of Nevada as an emergency war measure. Silver certificates would be withdrawn from circulation as the dollars were taken from the Treasury, and Federal Reserve Bank notes of new $1 and $2 denominations substituted.

If enacted the measure virtually would fix a standard price for silver at $1 an ounce, several cents above the present market, and stabilize the world market, since the United States produces almost half of the total. The bill also is intended to stimulate silver production, and to use the Treasury's reserve stocks of that metal, instead of gold, to settle this country's commercial trade balances in the Orient and elsewhere.

In anticipation of action by Congress, Raymond T. Baker, Director of the Mint, has formulated an agreement with silver producers and dealers to sell to the Government at the $1 rate. The probable result would be for the Government to absorb the country's entire output, about 74,000,000 ounces last year. Officials have stated they would make arrangements to supply quantities of silver to jewelers and manufacturers requiring it.

The bill would permit the Secretary of the Treasury to fix the selling price of the Government's silver, but it is assumed this would be not less than $1. India, China, and Japan need silver most for coinage, and quantities also might be exported to South American countries and European neutrals whose trade balances are against the United States. India's requirements would be negotiated through Great Britain.

Small Reserve Bank Notes.

The Treasury now holds 491,000,000 silver dollars, containing about 376,000,000 ounces of silver. In withdrawing silver certificates based on this coin an effort probably would be made to take bills of denominations of $5 and more, leaving the $1 and $2 bills, which are now in great demand.

To guard against contracting circulation, however, Senator Pittman's bill would provide for the issuance of Federal Reserve Bank notes, of which only $11,670,000 are in circulation, in smaller denominations than the present $5 minimum. Federal Reserve Bank notes are virtually the same as national bank notes, but the special notes would have a slightly different basis, consisting of Treasury certificates of indebtedness, or one-year gold notes. Arrangements would be made for the Federal Reserve Board to force withdrawal of these when the silver was replaced in the Treasury. No more could be issued at any time than the face value of silver taken from the Treasury.

Secretary McAdoo wrote to Senator Pittman supporting the bill as a war measure, although he suggested there might be a wide difference of opinion on the best methods of replacing silver certificates with other currency. His letter follows in part:

"The price of silver has varied from about 48½ cents per fine ounce, at which price it sold during August, 1915, to $1.16 per fine ounce during September, 1917. The European war has greatly enlarged the demand for silver. The Orient is willing to accept silver in place of gold for commodities furnished by them, and it is to the interest of the United States and its allies that foreign trade balances should, as far as possible, be settled in silver, rather than in gold. The gold in this country and in the hands of its allies is needed as a base for the enormous credit structure it is necessary to erect in the process of placing Government loans, and every ounce of silver that can be used in the settlement of foreign balances is so much gained.

"It is better to settle trade balances by shipping silver than to make arrangements for stabilizing exchange, where these are possible, as they are not in the Orient, because these exchange arrangements, whatever their form, always mean a deferred demand for gold, while the settlement of foreign balances in silver is a definitive settlement, calling for no future adjustments. Further, the unprecedented business activity in this country has caused an unusual demand for silver for subsidiary coinage, the needs of the United States for this purpose during the present year being greater than ever before, amounting, as they do, to approximately 21,250,000 ounces.

To Borrow Silver from Treasury.

"The proposition is, in brief, to retire silver certificates, to borrow from the Treasury the silver for use for the war purposes above set forth, and then, as silver from time to time in the future comes on the market, to replace the silver so borrowed by purchase in the market at the fixed price of $1 per fine ounce, and to replace the borrowed silver by coining the new silver acquired for that purpose into standard silver dollars. There is no limit of time within which this must be done.

"The cost of producing silver, like the cost of producing all other commodities, has greatly increased. Labor is receiving very much higher wages than during normal times. Machinery is more expensive, and the chemicals and other supplies needed in the production of silver are all correspondingly higher in price. The price at which the silver is to be rebought has been fixed in the proposed bill at $1 per ounce. This price was arrived at after an examination by the Director of the Mint into the cost of producing silver, in a number of different mines, and the Director of the Mint is of the opinion that $1 per fine ounce, under all the conditions at present prevailing, is a fair price. The silver released through the retirement of silver certificates will be sold by the Secretary of the Treasury for the war purposes stated, at a price that will permit him without loss to rebuy, at the price of $1 an ounce, the silver thus sold.

"The proposed measure is unquestionably in the interest of the country as a whole for the prosecution of the war. It proposes no permanent change in our existing currency arrangements. What is proposed is a temporary change, consisting of the active use for war purposes of the silver now lying inert in the Treasury. The bill provides within itself the steps necessary to reverse that position and to replace and recoin the silver.

"The popular and well-found feeling against a bond-secured currency does not apply to the present issue, because (1) the issue is strictly temporary in its nature, (2) the security behind the issue automatically provides for the redemption of the issue, (3) no artificial value is given to any long-time bonds by the circulation privilege, and no vested interest is created in the circulation privilege, which, if created, it might prove burdensome for the Government or the banks to abate."

No silver dollars have been coined since 1904. Determination on the part of Treasury officials to urge the fixing of a silver price resulted from the erratic fluctuations of the silver market. A conference of Western Senators, silver producers, and Treasury officials recently discussed the subject at length, with the idea of $1 an ounce as a pair price.

Recent Price at 91 Cents.

The Government has been paying 91 cents an ounce for silver for some time, while quotations as high as 95 cents for "spot" metal have been quoted here. The price has been moving upward steadily for the last month, starting from around 85 cents.

The establishment of a quotation of $1 an ounce in the proposed law did not bring surprise to local silver merchants. The prediction had been adhered to ever since negotiations between Government authorities and silver producers began last Autumn over the 1918 output that a price of $1 would be necessary to keep production at a high level.

SCHOLA CANTORUM SINGS.

Folksongs of Europe and America—People's Liberty Chorus.

War bonds were on sale in Carnegie Hall during the concert of the Schola Cantorum last evening, and after the men's division of the choir had sung Jan Sibelius's remarkable "Song of Exile" in fighting rhythms of 4's and 6's, Mr. Schindler introduced a speaker, Brooks Leavitt, who called for volunteers for the People's Liberty Chorus, which will meet at the High School of Commerce in West Sixty-fifth Street and will not only sing at Liberty Loan meetings, but will hold a festival at the completion of the loan.

Folksongs of Europe and America made up the program of the Schola, which opened with "The Star-Spangled Banner." Among a Russian group was a "Ballad of the Kremlin," arranged by Schindler, while Josef Suk's Slavonic songs for women's chorus included one, "The Wish to Wed," of special charm, and the men's chorus made a fine effect in the Finnish national epic, "Kalevala," represented by a "Song of Kullervo," and in Palmgren's "Finnish Lullaby."

The American airs, beginning with Harvey Loomis's "Sun Worshippers," to a Zuni Indian melody, included also Howard Brockway's "Brother Green, or the Dying Soldier," from the Kentucky mountains, and Mrs. Natalie Curtis Burlin's "God's a-Gwine ter Move All de Troubles Away," from Carolina, with baritone solo by H. T. Burleigh. Mr. Burleigh amid great applause also sang his own negro spiritual "Deep River."

INDIAN SONGS AT CONCERT.

C. W. Cadman and Tsianina Redfeather Appear with Schumann Club

Charles Wakefield Cadman, composer of "Shanewis," played his intermezzo from that opera and an excerpt from another, "The Thunder Bird," that he has written in collaboration with Norman-Bel Geddes, at a concert of the Schumann Club last evening in Aeolian Hall. Tsianina Redfeather, the Indian singer, gave the "Canoe Song" from "Shanewis," with other native melodies arranged by Thurlow Lieurance and Carlos Troyer.

The Schumann Club, led by Percy Stephens, produced Deems Taylor's humming version of a Bach air for women's voices, some spirituals such as "Go Down, Moses" and "Sinner, Please Doan Let Dis Harves' Pass," arranged by H. T. Burleigh, and four of Cadman's songs arranged by Victor Harris, including "The White Dawn," "The Moon Drops Low," and "Indian Mountain Song," and the famous "Land of the Sky-Blue Water."

ART NOTES.

Olive Tilton is showing portraits and miniatures at the Scott & Fowles Gallery. A note in the catalogue of the exhibition states that for the duration of the war Mrs. Tilton is donating the entire proceeds derived from portrait orders to the Red Cross. Her portraits are painted with a sprightly ease of execution, and are charming in color, the high key suggesting delicacy and brightness without the crumbling chalky look that too often accompanies a blond palette. The poses are graceful and the heads have a convincing look of likeness, but time could be well spent in mastering the construction of the figure. The hands and arms and feet are wooden, which goes far toward counteracting the pleasant lifelike vivacity of the general effect.

Plans of the Society of Independent Artists Changed.

Owing to war conditions the Society of Independent Artists has not been able to secure a tent for the exhibition at the Moorish Gardens. However, a very much more satisfactory plan has been arranged. Two large stores together at 112 and 114 West Forty-second Street, between Broadway and Sixth Avenue, have been rented, and will be fitted to accommodate the exhibition at the same date as was arranged at first, April 20 to May 12. One entire store front will be converted into an immense doorway, the other flanked on each side with decorations extending the height of one story, which is the height of the building. One of the decorations will be painted by William Zorach. Beginning with the 12th, pictures will be received at the above address, and in case of mistake there will be a man stationed at the Moorish Gardens to receive pictures sent there by artists unaware of the change.

High School Girls' Art Work Shown.

Art student work of the girls of the New York high schools is being exhibited in the Hall of Forestry of the American Museum of Natural History, Seventy-seventh Street and Central Park West, and will continue for the remainder of the month. The work was done under the direction of James P. Haney, Director of Art in the High Schools.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Lillian Lorraine has been engaged for the Ziegfeld "Midnight Frolic" on the New Amsterdam roof, and will make her debut there on April 22.

A new play entitled "A Friendly Divorce," written by Tadama Bossiere, will be tried out by the Cecil Spooner stock company next week at the Grand Opera House in Brooklyn.

Three thousand seven hundred and fifty members of the Custom House Employes' Association attended last night's performance at the Hippodrome.

Beatrice Terry, niece of Ellen Terry, will be seen as Ophelia in the Shakespeare Playhouse's production of "Hamlet," to be made at the Cort on Friday afternoon.

Yvette Guilbert will give a recital at the Neighborhood Playhouse, in Grand Street, on Saturday night, and Edith Wynne Matthison will present scenes from "As You Like It" and "Romeo and Juliet" on Sunday night.

THE TERRIBLE ARMY AND ITS BANNERS

A Symbolic Religious "Comedy" by Charles Rann Kennedy Has Five Acts.

BILLY SUNDAY KNOCKED OUT

THE ARMY WITH BANNERS, a comedy in five acts, by Charles Rann Kennedy. At the Vieux Colombier.

Mary Bliss	Edith Wynne Matthison
Julia Manners	Adrienne Morrison
Job Limp	Wallace Erskine
Timothy Hodge	Edmund Gurney
Tommy Trail	Ernest Anderson
Pomeroy Wragg	Walter Kingsford
Dafty	Henry Herbert

If we grasp the symbolism of Charles Rann Kennedy's new play, what the world needs today is not the terror of hell fire, so prominently and profitably exploited by Billy Sunday, but the simple faith, pure hope, and modest good works of an earlier Christianity. To convey this message he has written a play in five acts which he calls a comedy.

Miss Matthison appears as an ancient and apparently senile gentlewoman with white hair and palsied hands, who is spending a vast fortune in good works, having converted a Gothic Nunnery of the thirteenth century into an orphanage. She is surrounded by a group of associates, whose religion is of the conventional order, and deeply tinged with worldliness. For her edification they have hired a revivalist of the Billy Sunday model. To her simple mind what they promise is the second coming of Christ, and in the glow of enthusiasm with which this hope fills her she is rejuvenated. Her white hair becomes golden and her palsied hand becomes firm.

The "great scene" of this comedy occurs when Billy Sunday, alias Tommy Trail, arrives in football breeches and sweater and leaps in circles about the gentle pietist, endeavoring to strike into her heart the terror of hell fire. He does it with a vocabulary in which football field, barroom, and Puritan theology mingle on even terms. Shocked and chilled at first by the form which this supposed second advent assumes, the good lady rises by degrees to a mood of exalted religious feeling in which the coming of the true spirit is manifested.

A curious atmosphere of lunacy weighs upon the play, which, as it seems, is only in part intended. Never for a moment do any of the characters converse. They stand together on the stage and speak their minds quite irrespective of one another. For mortal hours it is like listening to the confessions of the madhouse.

The Man of the Past utters conservatism interlarded with reference to his ailing liver, which his gestures locate somewhere in the lumbar region. The Man of the Present divides his remarks between small considerations of thrift and the pain in his stomach. The Lady of Good Motives apportions her time between complaining of the macaroons dispensed to the children of the orphanage and lamenting the collywobbles induced in her own child by midnight lobster. All this means something—something momentous, portentous, and not at all difficult to guess.

Most meaningful of all was the Man Out of Time, and in his case those who find sport in chasing the wild, untamed Symbol can get a run for their money. When he said that to save your own soul you must forget it and crack jokes at the universe, the white scut of an idea was visible in the jungle; but when he professed to have died, explored hell and returned, one did not wonder that William Sunday shied at him.

Miss Matthison was very charming, whether white-haired or blonde, and she conveyed with notable intensity the effect of simple piety and spiritual fervor. As the religious jokester, Henry Herbert made up for any obscurity in his lines by his quaint and high-spirited characterization. As the Billy Sunday man, Ernest Anderson roused the audience to its one moment of hearty delight and enthusiasm.

The title is from The Song of Solomon, who alleged that his lady was "clear as the sun and terrible as an army with banners." Mr. Kennedy's play is very far from equaling this lady in clarity; but there are many people, including all men in the street, for whom an army with banners has nothing on it in the matter of schrecklichkeit.

Bills for Last Week of Opera.

The Metropolitan yesterday announced its closing nights of opera this season, including a gala farewell for Caruso on Friday evening of next week in "L'Elisir d'Amore," and a last matinée the next day for Farrar in "Tosca." Miss Farrar also sings a special "Carmen" next Wednesday afternoon, while Mr. Caruso and others will take part in an extraordinary benefit concert for Italian soldiers on Sunday night.

The twenty-third and final week opens Monday with the triple bill, "Shanewis," "L'Oracolo," and "The Dance in Place Congo." Caruso sings Wednesday evening in "L'Amore dei Tre Re." Barrientos will be heard Thursday in "The Barber of Seville," followed by "The Dance in Place Congo." A final popular Saturday night, April 20, will be played before the company goes to Boston.

Maurice Dambois's Last Recital.

Maurice Dambois, the Belgian 'cellist, gave a farewell recital yesterday afternoon at Aeolian Hall. He was heard in a sonata of Geminiani, Boellmann's "Symphonic Variations," and pieces by Glazounow, Cui, and Davidoff, Bach, Schumann, Popper, and Rubin Goldmark. Marcel Charlier assisted at the piano.

Women to Dine with Democratic Club

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, will represent the National Administration at the annual dinner of the National Democratic Club in celebration of the 175th birthday of Thomas Jefferson, which will be held on Saturday night at the Hotel Astor. Other speakers will be Henry F. Hollis, United States Senator from New Hampshire, and Abram I. Elkus, former Ambassador to Turkey. For the first time in the history of the club women will be seated on the main floor with members and their guests.

WALTER DISCARDS THRILL IN NEW PLAY

In "Nancy Lee" He Has Written a Drama Closely Akin in Theme to "The Easiest Way."

NANCY LEE, a drama in a prologue and three acts, by Eugene Walter and H. Crownin Wilson. At the Hudson Theatre.

Miss Nancy Lee	Charlotte Walker

Miss Grace Lee	Rosalie Mathieu
Mrs. Lee	Pauline Duffield

"Nancy Lee," which was played for the first time at the Hudson last night, marks a sharp turn in the playwriting career of Eugene Walter. Mr. Walter's recent Broadway offerings have been of the spinal column school, in which the thrill, and the thrill alone, was wooed; now, however, he goes back to "The Easiest Way" for a play closely akin to that piece in theme, and containing a number of characters from the same social stratum, albeit they are not quite so bad.

In place of Laura Murdock, then, we have Nancy Lee—embarking upon a life which presents no surface similarities to that of Laura, but which, as the author points out in a prologue, is really the same. Nancy, unlike Laura, marries her man—marries him because she has been equipped by her training for no career other than marriage, because it is an alliance which will enable her parents and sister to keep up appearances a little longer in their Southern home, and because there is nothing else to do. At heart she is bitter, but she goes through with her bargain.

The life with the wastrel husband is not shown; the first act, eight years after the prologue, finds the husband dead, his estate a myth, and Nancy trying to go through with the life into which the companionship of her husband's friends has thrown her. It is in the depiction of this life that Mr. Walter's duplication of "The Easiest Way" is most marked; Brockton, man about town of "The Easiest Way," is reproduced in the Boland of "Nancy Lee," and his chorus girl associate becomes Molly Day, equally given to a worldly viewpoint and frequent "My Gods!"

Even here, however, Nancy does not abandon herself to the life as did Laura. There are, to be sure, unchaperoned yachting parties and motor trips, but through them all Nancy holds herself aloof. The first act finds her, in her financial extremity, accepting money from a callow youth without knowing that he has stolen it. The disclosure brings her face to face with a lifelong friend of the youth's father, who straightens things out, applies many harsh names to Nancy, and effectually arouses her to a sense of right and wrong.

He also demands that she return the money advanced, or its equivalent, and goes so far as to call upon her the following day to receive it. Nancy duly makes the proffer of goods equal to the amount desired, but, needless to say, it is not accepted. Her sincerity begins to be evident, even to the doubting friend of father, and the interview ends by an offer of assistance. The final act is devoted to a somewhat overlong arrival at a happy ending.

All of this is told in straightforward and interesting style by Mr. Walter, and the play, while it does not begin to challenge "The Easiest Way" in its searching qualities, contains many well-drawn characters and is in general true to the life which it represents. If the piece has any conspicuous defect as an evening's entertainment, it is probably that the peak of interest is reached early in the play, and that from that point there is a slow but none the less steady decline. Of the play's popularity, however, there can be no reasonable doubt.

The acting is for the most part all that it should be. Charlotte Walker has the long and trying title rôle, and does well with it, particularly in its emotional moments. She will be better in the lighter moments when she conquers a tendency to oversmile. Lewis Stone gives a well-sustained performance as the guardian who ends by marrying Nancy, and Ralph Kellard, as the love-mad youth, also is satisfactory. Jobyna Howland, with most of the comedy lines to speak, overplays a trifle as the worldly friend. A good bit is done by David Adler, as a process server.

SIGNS ANTI-BRIDGE BILL.

Gov. Whitman's Act Prevents Spanning of Hudson Near Castleton.

ALBANY, April 9.—Governor Whitman today signed the Sage-Welsh bill to prevent the erection by the New York Central Railroad of a bridge with midstream piers in the Hudson River near Castleton.

Several business organizations in Boston and other New England cities had expressed opposition to the bill on the ground that any delay in the construction of the proposed bridge would interfere with shipments of freight to New England territory. Supporters of the bill argued that the piers would be a menace to navigation and would aggravate ice gorge and flood conditions in Spring.

INDICTED FOR RACE RIOTS.

Congressional Inquiry at East St. Louis Causes Grand Jury Action.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., April 9.—Five indictments resulting from the recent Congressional inquiry into the East St. Louis race riots have been returned by the Federal Grand Jury at Cairo, Ill., it was learned today.

The indictments are based on the testimony of Myrtle Gardner, who said she had been held as a white slave at a hotel here.

A Word of Thanks to the Public of New York:

Today, after spending nearly two weeks in New York City, Mr. D. W. Griffith will depart for Los Angeles.

After laboring for 18 months, after travelling thousands of miles across the seas to the battlefields of France, after spending more than EIGHT HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, Mr. Griffith at last saw the realization of his great achievement when the Public of New York rose in their seats, cheered his great drama of love and war to the echo, applauded it as the greatest of all screen masterpieces, and gave him the reward of appreciation which is so dear to the heart of the Artist.

Mr. Griffith cannot leave New York without expressing to the public of this city his deep gratitude at the reception accorded his great work, and the love and affection he will henceforth have for the great Metropolis which so abundantly is showing its actual appreciation in CROWDED HOUSES and THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE TURNED AWAY AT EVERY PERFORMANCE.

Mr. Griffith desires, therefore, to convey to all his friends, to his well-wishers, and to the Great Public, his heartfelt thanks.

BRITAIN'S MAN-POWER.

The supreme and compelling reason for raising the conscription age to 50 years in Great Britain and for extending the draft to Ireland is the same reason that makes the buying of Liberty bonds the imperative duty of every patriotic American. The fate not only of Europe but of America, of liberty, "may depend upon the success with which the last German attack is resisted and countered." These are the words of LLOYD GEORGE proposing in the House of Commons yesterday the measures to increase the British man-power in the field. Of the sacrifices he asked the British people to make he said that "nothing would justify them except the most extreme necessity and the fact that the nation was fighting for all which was essential and most sacred to the national life." Germany has taken men of 60 and boys of 17. England increases the measure of her people's contribution to freedom.

The people of England, even the labor organizations, the people of Scotland and of Wales will bear heroically the new burdens laid upon them. Men up to and including the age of 50 will be enrolled for conscription, no man under 25 will be exempted by reason of industrial occupation, and clergymen will be called upon for noncombatant service. There remained the question of Ireland, where it has been openly threatened that conscription would be resisted with the extreme of violence.

LLOYD GEORGE accepts that challenge as Mr. WILSON accepted the German gage of battle. The English people would never permit him or any other Prime Minister to decline or evade it. If Englishmen must give up their lives to save everything that is essential and sacred to the national life, no part of the empire will be permitted to shirk its duty. Loyal Irishmen are no shirkers. They have done splendid service at the front, where their blood has mingled with the blood that has flowed from the veins of Englishmen, Scotchmen, Canadians, Australians, and New Zealanders. Only the irreconcilables in Ireland talk resistance. They forget that if Germany were the master of their destiny, that Germany so many of them here treasonably conspired to aid, they would be scourged into the ranks and no bones made about it.

It is worth any Irishman's while who hopes some time to see the Irish people happy and contented to use all his powers of persuasion in favor of a peaceful acceptance of conscription. It may mean the making or the unmaking of Ireland. The Government, in announcing the draft in Ireland, accepts the workable parts of the convention's conclusions, and offers a reasonable measure of self-government. If conscription is cheerfully assented to, if Ireland does her part, it is as certain as anything in politics can be that the powers of the Irish governing body will be liberally extended after the war. Let resistance be offered, let scenes of violence in Ireland now engage forces that should be employed in France, where there is dire need of all Britain's man-power, and the unreasonable members of the Nationalist Party in the House of Commons can foretell as well as anybody whether Ireland will have earned the right to expect indulgent treatment in the years following the war.

NO GRAIN FOR SWITZERLAND.

Germany will not permit Switzerland to receive American wheat by way of the French port of Cette unless she can have part of the quantity thus imported. For some time past the grain has been ready here for shipment, and our Government has provided vessels to carry it. But it is held at our ports because Germany has sunk one ship as it was approaching Cette with supplies for the Swiss, and threatens to destroy others which may follow.

Why does Germany insist upon having a share of the grain? Probably because the Central Powers are getting little foodstuff from the Ukraine. In that country, where a large surplus has been produced in normal times, there is not enough now to satisfy the needs of its own people. Proof of this is found in German testimony. The Cologne Gazette prints the report of a representative sent to make an investigation in the Ukraine. He says:

> The country is completely disorganized. The rural population must first become reaccustomed to tilling the soil. Meanwhile an unprecedented dearth prevails, and the population of Kiev and other cities is suffering bitterly for lack of bread.

Austrian newspapers admit that their Government is sending flour to its troops in the Ukraine; 100 carloads recently crossed the border. An American who has come to London from the same country, where he had been for two months, says there may be no grain to be exported for at least a year, because supplies on hand are very small and farmers are not inclined to plant for new crops. And so neither Germany nor Austria, needing food, can look to the Ukraine now for any substantial relief.

We are ready to keep the promises made in the agreement of December last with Switzerland. They called for about 10,000,000 bushels of wheat and corn in eight months, with other supplies, and the Shipping Board said two weeks ago that 50,000 tons of ships had been provided for the work. But Germany stands in the way. Her submarines menace any supply ship that approaches Cette. What can Switzerland do? It is a difficult situation. She needs the foodstuffs, but a protest from her Government might cause invasion. Her condition should appeal to neutrals elsewhere not exposed to attack. They should emphatically express sympathy with her and disapproval of Germany's oppressive injustice.

THE SIGNAL CORPS' RESPONSIBILITY.

The report that changes are imminent in the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, and that some of its highest officers may be affected, is at least plausible. Exactly what the relations of the Signal Corps with the Aviation Production Board are it might be difficult to define, but between them they are responsible for the spending of a vast sum of money, hundreds of millions of dollars, without producing a single battleplane for the front in France after eight months of effort. There was at first a disposition to put the blame for the failure of the aviation program upon the factories, which Rumor with its thousand tongues filled with German spies; but it turned out that the pedants of the Signal Corps would never be satisfied with any accomplished task, pestering the mechanics with unending changes of design. "If they would let us alone," was the despairing cry, "we could build airplanes."

How many times the vaunted Liberty motor was tinkered with will never be known, but it is now stated, with what appears to be finality, that, while the Liberty is not adapted to the work of combat machines, it is excellent for reconnoissance planes, and will do well enough for the bombing kind. This recalls the ingenious but futile attempts of another bureau to improve the unequaled French field gun and its rejection of the Lewis machine gun in order to invent, in the fullness of time, a better arm. Armageddon may be fought to a finish, but some of our War Department experts refuse to be hurried. Most leisurely, complacent, and unproductive of all have been the mathematicians and pundits of the Signal Corps.

When an organization of the army charged with the responsibility of assuring the mastery of the air to the Allies is not able, at the end of a year of war, to protect American troops on a short sector of the front from the raids of the enemy, something is radically wrong in that organization. If a brigade commander sacrifices troops by incompetency, he is straightway "scrapped"; in the field failure is not often tolerated. When it is overlooked exposure follows, and sooner or later there must be a reckoning. Why should the Signal Corps, the intelligence department of the army, escape a shakeup when it is found wanting? The Ordnance and Quartermaster's Departments were reorganized because they failed to function in emergencies, holding up the preparedness program. It is so notorious that the twin promoters of army aviation, the Signal Corps and the Production Board, have not met the public expectation that the wonder is why reorganization has been so long delayed.

THE SEDITION BILL.

It seems extraordinary that the Senate should have frittered away almost a whole session in debating the point whether the word "willfully" should qualify the utterance, printing, writing, or publishing of disloyal or abusive language about the Government, flag, or soldiers of the United States, which the Sedition bill was to punish with adequate fine and imprisonment. Certain Senators were once in high quarters described as willful, and perhaps the recollection rankled. But the average man, who has neither prestige nor influence, is safer with the word "willfully" in the bill. Criticism sometimes leaps hotly to the lips when disloyalty is not harbored. What to one hearer might be a warrantable stricture might to another savor of enmity to the Government. Therefore, it should be necessary to prove intent, as in the case of many things inhibited by the Criminal Code.

Of the unamended bill Senator SHERMAN of Illinois said: "It is an abridgment of the right of free speech." And if enacted as it came originally from the Judiciary Committee the bill would have been open to that condemnation. Constructive criticism might have been regarded by partisans and by sentimentalists as destructive. Men might have been locked up, although we do not think they would have been, for expressing honest opinions about the course of the Government in prosecuting the war, with no thought of inflaming the enemy alien or spreading sedition.

Criticism, honest criticism, ought not to be muzzled, and it should not be open to the malignant to put a wrong construction upon language never intended to support or favor the cause of the German Empire or its allies in the present war, or * * * * to oppose the cause of the United States." But the law, because of a simple amendment, adopted singularly by a margin of half a dozen votes," will require proof of intent to be disloyal and to aid the enemy. With the word "willfully" left out, calling a spade a spade in what was said about an act or omission of the Administration detrimental (in the critic's view) to the cause of America and her allies might have had awkward consequences.

Hitherto the Department of Justice has complained of want of statute law when taken to task for failing to deal with sedition and disloyalty. The new act will give prosecuting officers plenty of latitude to frame indictments against traitors, obstructionists, and the disaffected. If they do their duty fearlessly and with intelligence, there will be no excuse or pretext for lynch law in its various forms of violence as a manifestation of Americanism.

BANKS AND THE LIBERTY BONDS.

The banks are generally allowing it to be understood that they will advance the money for the purchase of Liberty bonds at the coupon rate for ninety days upon only a 5 or 10 per cent. margin. At the end of that time subscribers are invited to make further arrangements, sometimes with an intimation of "favorable" conditions. Other cities are more definite in the announcement that the rate will be raised when the loan is extended. The proposal of several renewals in consideration of reduction of the amount advanced was not adopted, for the familiar reason that it converted a short-time loan into a long-time lockup, and that is undesirable when there is such a demand for accommodation for war purposes. The earlier British loans were floated with the announcement that the full subscription would be advanced by the Bank of England for three years at 1 per cent. below the Bank rate. The result was a great and rapid increase in the discounts to figures far above the private deposits, with signs of commercial restriction, although abnormal relief was given in various ways. The last British loan (in 1917) was floated only after stopping other issues of Government paper, which resulted in raising the deposits above the discounts, and thus created a banking situation favorable to the loan. The result was that the discounts and deposits moved widely in opposite directions, showing that the five billions was raised out of deposits, not discounts.

In this city loans exceeded deposits a billion dollars at the time of the November statement of the Government. At the present time, taking into consideration about 100 leading cities, the official figures show loans and investments about 106 per cent. of deposits. The inclusion of investments with the loans deprives the figures of any disquieting suggestion, and surely no one would wish to suggest anything like niggardliness in banking accommodations to loan subscribers. It would be easy to emphasize either inflation or contraction principles into economic error, but they are not so contradictory as they seem. At least under present conditions they are reconciled by the large extent to which accommodation to loan subscribers is translated through Treasury disbursements into commercial stimulation. When the Government is spending a billion a month and is exerting every effort to spend more there is harm rather in limiting Government resources than in enlarging them.

Bankers, therefore, have the ability and should have the disposition to do all they can to finance the Government liberally, and applicants for war uses as liberally as they fairly can. There is a shadowy region where it is hard to say whether the applications are for essential or nonessential war uses, and where the credit desired is not such as commercial banks ought to give, unless there is to be confusion between the fiscal and monetary functions of the Government. It is easy to name belligerents whose Governments provided money, or at least currency, rather than credit for war uses. It is to the credit of the United States that the least of that mingling of functions is observable here. Our money has expanded, but no more than trade and prices. Our credit has expanded for the same reasons. But our currency and our credit alike are instantly exchangeable for gold, subject only to restrictions upon export, and that for reasons of war rather than commerce or finance.

It is not convincing to say that the banks ought not to finance loan subscribers for nothing. There is a profit which does not appear on the books, speaking in a strictly commercial manner. The unprofitable loan subscriber is likely to be a long-term depositor, and there are promises of incidental profits. But aside from profit there is substantial ground for the banks and the depositors alike to be liberal with the Government. It is the best and cheapest investment in insurance against tyranny and invasion. Never will it be so cheap as now to bury forever the pretensions of Kaiserism. Never shall we have as thankful and able allies as now. It is the duty of bankers and depositors alike to be liberal with the Government, and not too modest about it. The man who takes his bonds has a duty also to see that his neighbor takes his bonds, and should have all the help example can set and all the courage advice can supply.

THE HARMLESS, NECESSARY CAT.

Again the Legislature has been dealing with one of its hardy perennials, the bill introduced by Senator ROBINSON for the State Conservation Commission to protect useful birds against cats. With the purpose of this measure there will be general sympathy, but in its present form at least it must arouse grave dissatisfaction not only among lovers of cats but among lovers of justice.

The present bill provides that any adult person possessing a hunting license may, and any peace officer or game warden must, destroy in a humane manner cats which are hunting birds protected by law or which have such birds in their possession. Fair enough, so far as concerns cats discovered in flagrante delicto. But how are you going to determine whether a cat peacefully drifting across the landscape is hunting a bird protected by law, or cherishes the laudable purpose of abolishing a sparrow, or, is merely walking abroad for purposes of recreation? This law would practically permit any cat to be spurlos versenkt at the pleasure of a peace officer or adult male who might misinterpret his purposes. Elementary considerations of justice require the observance of the laws of cruiser warfare against cats; they should not be destroyed, even in a humane manner, without visit and search which should ascertain whether their purposes are really anti-social or not.

But such investigation involves difficulties. Last year the Senator would have had all cats duly tagged—in effect, provided with passports. But your cat cherishes a strong feeling of individual liberty; he does not like to have his movements investigated. The task of registering the young men of draft age was considerably easier than the registration of cats. Some few patriotic felines might come forward voluntarily, but to round up the slackers would take an army which could ill be spared in these times.

Even worse was the Senator's first proposal this year, that all cats be belled. It was open to the same objection as registration, that you would first have to catch your cat; with the additional drawback that an obbligato of jangling chimes would be added to the back fence oratorios which enliven the city dweller's night. So we have the present measure, whose inequity is patent.

Moreover, any proper bill should draw a distinction between the city and country cat. Whatever the social status of the cat in the countryside, to the city dweller he furnishes an admirable example of enterprise and good humor in meeting the hardships of city life and realizing its hard-won joys. And recognition of the admirable qualities of the cat is now properly given by the selection of a rampant tom, with battered tail, scarred sides, and chewed-up ears, as the emblem of the fighters in the tanks, whose motto is "We treat them rough." Under the device of the tomcat the tanks are going out to make war upon the black Prussian eagle, a game bird who by his own activities has put himself outside the protection of the law. The totem of the tanks deserves a better fate than to be shot on sight by any one who may chance to misinterpret the object of his voyagings.

THE DAIMLER AFFAIR.

In the attitude of Germans of various classes toward the inquiry into the affairs of the Daimler Motor Company there are indications which support others noted by correspondents of a new and more clearly defined alignment of social and economic classes in Germany. The old Junker aristocracy seems to have rallied, though not too whole-heartedly, to the support of the industrial magnates. Conservative speakers in the Reichstag defended a company which had made a profit of 173 per cent. last year, had reported it as 11 per cent., and had threatened to close its factory, to go on an employers' strike, if it were not allowed an increase in prices of 50 per cent.

No profiteer in America ever stood to his guns so defiantly as the whole German industrial class, at least those who have any connection with the profitable war industries, have stood by the Daimlers. Says the Deutsche Zeitung, an organ of this class: "The Daimler works have performed great services for the Fatherland, and if the case is exploited in Socialist fashion the consequences for the new war loan may be disastrous. It is already reported that private persons have withdrawn their subscriptions on account of the scandal."

This comment might be studied with profit by such Americans as profess to see no difference between German and American capitalism. When we read of the bitter opposition to any investigation of the doctored reports submitted by the company to the Government, opposition in which Conservatives join, we may remember that the Krupps have also been accused of such action, and that the All-Highest WILLIAM is reputed to be a very heavy stockholder in this profitable enterprise.

German industry which profited from foreign commerce is apparently looking forward with some apprehension to the days of peace after the war; consequently, as the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger suavely says: "No one can blame the company for making the best of things." Not all German industrial magnates may share the views of AUGUST THYSSEN, who recently blamed the Government for starting the war and for failing to make good its promise to make it financially profitable to Germany, but there appears to be a good deal of unrest among those who must suffer most from the opinion which the Germans have won for themselves in the world outside. So, apparently, they are to be kept quiet by being allowed to make unheard-of profits; even if they blackmail the Government by threatening to stop war work or by refusing to buy war bonds, it must be tolerated. What the authorities must think when these matters are dragged into the indecent light by radicals we may imagine; it is significant that though a motion was made in the Reichstag by the parties of the Government bloc for the seizure by the military of all profiteering industrial plants, the Government itself—that is to say, Count HERTLING, who is responsible to the Kaiser and not to this bloc—was very cool toward this proposal.

Meanwhile, if landed aristocracy and industrial capitalists are drawing together, there is a more clearly defined opposition. Students of German economics tell us that the war is making the rich richer, the poor richer, the middle class poorer. The poor are growing more prosperous, a condition which history has shown conducive to a demand for more political rights; and the middle class is becoming an educated proletariat, embittered by recollection of better times gone past. The period following the war may show Germany in the condition of extreme opposition of capitalists and proletariat which MARX forecast, though this state be reached by methods not at all in accordance with Marxian theory.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Why Cannot the Facts Be Given?

By forbidding the New York Federal Reserve Bank and the Liberty Loan Committee to make public, day by day, the total of subscriptions to the new bond issue, the Treasury Department has taken action the wisdom of which is questioned by many, and the question thus raised is certainly open to discussion.

There is hesitation, naturally, to condemn this course outright as a mistake, for it is realized that nobody is more interested in the success of the loan than Secretary MCADOO, that none has given the attainment of success more thought, and that none can be better—perhaps none as well—informed as to the facts. On the other hand, the problem is one of psychology, and on such no judgment is final or even very authoritative.

The Treasury officials, like the rest of us, are believers in the efficacy of publicity in the attainment of good objects. They have asked for, and received with obviously sincere gratitude, a vast amount of it from the newspapers of the country and from innumerable committees of hard-working patriots, but now, suddenly and not a little to the confusing of everybody concerned, there has been withdrawn a form of publicity the great value of which has hitherto been assumed as self-evident.

No adequate reasons for the change have been given. That does not prove that none exists, but neither does it prove that one does. A vague reference to the danger of exciting jealousies among towns or groups will not do, nor does the danger of serious inaccuracies in totals seem a sufficient excuse for withholding information that certainly is of general interest. Jealousy is only another name for rivalry, and rivalry in well-doing is always held desirable.

It is possible that the publication of separate subscriptions is sometimes harmful as giving an excuse for taking in bonds a sum as small as that taken by another person or corporation, but more often, probably, it would have the contrary effect by showing what that other person or corporation had done and exciting a determination to equal or exceed his or its subscription.

Sentiment outside of the Treasury Department strongly inclines to the side of full publicity, and not a few people hold that the public has a right as well as a wish to know from day to day the rate at which the loan is being taken.

Diplomatic Secrets Disclosed.

It is evident that the longer the controversy between the French and the Austrian statesmen goes on, with respect to what they did and said about a separate peace, the more will the world at large learn and the more interesting will be what is learned. It was obvious from the very beginning that M. CLEMENCEAU'S brusque contradiction of the original version of the "conversations" between REVERTATA and ARMAND would not be conclusive, and confident expectations of exciting details still to come are getting new justification daily as the interchange of accusation and denial goes on.

Already several veils have been raised, and as each ascends some new figure is disclosed. The figures are increasing in size, too, and principals of royal stature are beginning to take the place of agents more or less bumble and therefore more or less easy to repudiate if it should be convenient to do so.

What we are getting is a glimpse at our old friend—or foe—secret diplomacy. Nothing very distinctly or seriously scandalous has yet been disclosed, at least in regard to the French negotiators, but there must be a good deal of uneasiness in Austria-Hungary as it becomes plainer and plainer that she, either of her own initiative or in the familiar rôle of Germany's tool and vassal, was trying to drive a wedge between France and Great Britain. The purpose or aspiration probably was less to secure a separate peace with one of these allies than to make them distrustful of each other by creating a difference between their aims or arousing a belief in the existence of such a difference. From all present indications the effort will be a complete failure.

The scoldings that Count CZERNIN is getting from the German press do not have the ring of sincerity. They seemingly constitute a path of escape from responsibility for Germany, leaving Austria, as usual, to bear the burden of embarrassment and humiliation. As Austria has no reputation to lose, she will not much mind reproaches present or to come.

A Danger Far from Imaginary.

MGR. LAVELLE, speaking in the cathedral on Fifth Avenue as the representative of Cardinal FARLEY, did well when he reminded his hearers that only by being what he called "100 per cent. American" could they make sure that some day they, too, would not be massacred by German cannon, just as were other worshippers similarly assembled in Paris on Good Friday.

There are Americans who needed that warning far more than did those who listened then, but it is one not to be forgotten or disregarded by any of us, and no argument is wasted that strengthens our realization of the fact that war and the dangers of war are as much America's as they are England's and France's.

Of course the appeal to fear is not the highest of appeals, but it must be made with the others, and none can afford to ignore it. We are not helping the Allies to do something; we are joining them in the performance of a task as much ours as theirs, and for failure to perform it our penalty will be the same.

WHERE K. FRANCKE STANDS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Hermann Hagedorn's book, "Where Do You Stand?" is an appeal to all Americans of German origin to declare publicly their allegiance to this country. I have responded to this appeal in the inclosed open letter. Perhaps you will be good enough to publish it.

KUNO FRANCKE.

Hon. Curator of the Germanic Museum of Harvard University.
Gilbertsville, N. Y., April 6, 1918.

[Inclosure.]

Gilbertsville, N. Y., April 6, 1918.

My Dear Mr. Hagedorn:

I thank you for sending me your stirring little book entitled, "Where Do You Stand?" and I feel moved to answer at once, as well as I can, the question put by you so impressively to all Americans of German blood.

Where do I stand? Although I deeply deplored the tragic chain of circumstances and events which a year ago forced the United States into the European war, I have now come to believe that the participation of the United States in this war, provided the unselfish principles enunciated by President Wilson are strictly adhered to, will eventually make for a peace more democratic, equitable, and permanent than otherwise would have been the case. Sadly, therefore, but unreservedly, I accept the fact that Germany for the time being is my country's enemy, and I am determined to uphold our Government in its policy of forcing Germany, and for that matter all the belligerents, to accept a peace which will indeed make the world safe for democracy.

While I thus pledge myself to the support of our Government in this war, I cannot have anything in common with the fanatics who make it their business to inflame the people indiscriminately against Germany and everything German. I thoroughly believe in the ideals of American democracy and rejoice in our free institutions and the liberal and generous spirit of American life. But I must also recognize that the German system of government has achieved great things in the training of the German people in good citizenship and public service as well as in raising the level of personal worth and attainment. I thoroughly sympathize with the parliamentary parties in Germany which are striving to obtain for the people a larger share in directing its policies; but it would seem to me utterly futile to attempt to bring about this democratization of German public life by force from without. What I hope for is that American ideals of popular activity and American sympathy with the German progressive parties will help these parties to win their fight against the reactionaries and thus to open the way for a peace in accordance with the dictates of popular rights and common humanity.

I cannot help thinking that many Americans of German blood entertain views similar to those which I have here tried to express. I believe they would do a service to their country by openly declaring them.

Very sincerely yours,
KUNO FRANCKE.

The Price of Cotton.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Can you tell me why it is that, while there has been Government regulation of prices of wheat, steel, and other commodities, apparently there has been no suggestion of fixing the selling price of cotton? There is much war work, especially in connection with the Medical Department, that must be seriously affected by cotton at 35 to 60 cents a pound.

"ON THE PLAINS OF PICARDY."

In Picardy, in Picardy,
Where History and Romance
And Song and Rhyme, from ancient time,
Birthed Fame and gloried France—
In Picardy, in Picardy,
Stands brave my boy, today,
To fight my fight, for God and Right,
And I—well, I can pray!

In Picardy, in Picardy,
Where smiled a joyous sun
On grain-spread field and vineyard yield,
And maids were wooed and won—
In Picardy, in Picardy,
The fields are desolate;
The sad sun frowns on ruined towns,
And maidens moan their fate.

In Picardy, in Picardy,
See rising from the plain
A flag that thunders to the Hun:
"Ye shall not! Out, foul stain!"
In Picardy, in Picardy,
Our hundred million souls
Oppose with our brave boys yon power.
It shall not gain its goals!

THE ACHILLES HEEL OF THE GERMAN MONSTER.

A Short Drive from the American Front in France to Cause Germany's Overthrow for Lack of Iron Ore.

By WILLIAM HERBERT HOBBS,
Professor of Geology, University of Michigan.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One of the lessons of the present German drive is the almost prohibitive sacrifice of man power by the army of the offensive on the German plan of overwhelming through mere weight of numbers. Today the advantage seems to rest with the Allies, since their losses in men have probably not greatly exceeded a third of those of Germany, and they have succeeded in countering the shock without any considerable draft upon their mobile reserve army.

Nothing is more certain than that the German "blood bath" will, when it has been stayed, be followed up by a "peace drive," in which full use will be made of every devilish device in order to deceive, and in which all treasonable, pacifistic, faint-hearted and weak-minded elements in the allied nations will be fully mobilized—the La Follettes, Hillquits, Nearings, Jordans, and Bergers.

Of the many arguments which will be put forward, the most potent with the loyal, though faint-hearted elements of the population, will doubtless be the supposed impossibility of either side obtaining a military decision in its favor. Under ideal weather conditions and with unprecedented artillery concentration, (thanks to Germany's peace propaganda in Russia and Italy,) Germany, with a sacrifice measured probably by more than 350,000 casualties, has driven into the allied territory a broad wedge, the apex of which is about thirty-five miles from the starting point. It will now be argued that the distance to Berlin from the allied front at Verdun is not far from 650 miles, or about nineteen times this distance, most of the way through exceedingly difficult country and with three great rivers, (the Rhine, Weser, and Elbe,) to be crossed. No less than nineteen drives of this intensity, it will be argued, would be required to accomplish the entry into Berlin.

To those who do not know the facts this argument will appear to have much plausibility. The truth is, however, that a single drive eastward from Verdun which should penetrate no further than the present German offensive has already gone, (thirty to thirty-five miles,) would bring the war at once to an end. This is easily proved, and has been admitted as long ago as March 20, 1915, by a deputation from six of the most powerful industrial and agrarian organizations of Germany made in a confidential communication to the German Chancellor. This confidential memorandum was obtained and published in France in 1916, and its truths are self-evident to any student of mineral resources or of economics.

No one needs to be told that the sinews of land warfare today are guns and munitions, which in turn depend upon developed resources of coal and iron. Germany, while possessing almost inexhaustible resources of coal, has no considerable bodies of iron ore outside of Lorraine, and her great industrial development since 1871 is entirely to be accounted for by this body of iron ore, which was wrested from France with the conquered provinces. In 1870 Germany produced but 1,400,000 tons of pig iron, whereas in 1913 her output was nearly one-third of that of the entire world. Of the iron ore which she mined for the purpose, three-fourths came from the Lorraine beds, all of it from a circumscribed area some thirty miles long and eight miles wide, hugging the French border. A considerable percentage of the remaining third was obtained from the province of Luxemburg in the same area over the frontier to the northward. The district extends also across the frontier into France, so that the German (Lorraine) iron ores west of Thionville (Diedenhofen,) the French ores of the plateau of Briey and the plain of the Woevre, and those of the province of Luxemburg, form one continuous area which spreads out in all directions from the common frontiers of the three countries. The near border of this great iron district is distant scarcely ten miles from the present battlefront on the heights of the Meuse east of Verdun, and the further edge only about twenty miles beyond.

How has Germany succeeded in protecting this most vulnerable and vitally important section of her territory? The story is an interesting one. On July 25, 1914, ten days before war was declared, with "malice aforethought" Germany sent the entire 16th Army Corps stationed at Metz and a portion of the 8th Corps stationed at Treves and Cologne to occupy in force the Lorraine iron fields along the entire frontier. Here, while the small bodies of French "covering troops" were keeping ten kilometers in the rear of their frontier under official orders issued in the interest of a peaceful solution of the international situation, the German troops mounted batteries and felled trees to make ready for action. On the 2d of August, two days before war was declared, German troops advanced through the neutral territory of Luxemburg and occupied the iron district there, then, crossing into France, they advanced upon the French fortress at Longwy and occupied the French iron district as well. Thus two days before the declaration of war Germany had the entire iron area of France and Luxemburg, as well as that of Lorraine, firmly in her grasp. France has accomplished the modern miracle of her defense against Germany under the handicap of the loss of most of her iron-producing district and been forced to bring much of her iron from her colonies across the Mediterranean and from other sources.
